Summer Camps

School is out and summer has begun! Here in Texas the temperature is slowly rising, and the prediction is for another hot summer. For many young people in the Church, summer means the beginning of camp season. Once again, we have a full schedule of regional camps for both teens and preteens. One exciting thing about this summer is that we have 56 new campers already registered for camp this summer! By “new” we mean those who did not attend one of our camps in 2025. We always have a few new campers each year, but to have 56 in one year is a new high for us.

The downside to having so many new campers this year over last year is that we are running out of room in at least two of our teen camps. We are in the process of working out these situations, since we want every young person who attends with the Church of God, a Worldwide Association, to have a spot at one of our camps if he or she so desires and meets the criteria.

In today’s world, young people face tremendous pressures. Social media, entertainment, peer influence and the constant pull of worldly values can make it difficult for teens and preteens to stay grounded spiritually. Summer camp offers a unique environment, where young people can step away from those distractions and focus on positive influences. Surrounded by peers who share similar beliefs and guided by dedicated staff and counselors, campers learn that living God’s way is not only possible, but rewarding and joyful.

One of the greatest values of camp is the opportunity to build lasting friendships. Many young people in the Church attend small congregations where there are few young people. They are not able to regularly interact with others their age who share their faith. Camp helps bridge that gap. Through shared activities, teamwork, Sabbath services and casual conversations, friendships are formed that often last for years. These relationships provide encouragement and support long after camp ends, helping young people remain connected to the Church and to one another.

Camp also teaches important life skills. Sports activities, talent nights and individual and team competitions encourage cooperation, communication and leadership. Young people learn responsibility, respect and perseverance. They gain confidence by trying new activities and overcoming challenges. These lessons are valuable not only spiritually, but also socially and emotionally as they prepare for adulthood.

Most importantly, Church camp helps young people deepen their relationship with God. Daily Compass Checks, Christian Living classes and Sabbath services allow campers to better understand biblical principles and how to apply them in real life. They see examples of older teens, counselors and ministers striving to live according to God’s Word. The environment helps reinforce the truth that God’s way leads to happiness, peace and purpose.

The Bible emphasizes the importance of training and guiding young people. Proverbs 22:6 says, “Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it” (NKJV). While the primary responsibility for teaching our children lies with the parents, summer camps provide a valuable environment where that training can occur in practical and memorable ways. Young people are encouraged to develop character, make wise decisions and build a foundation for future spiritual growth.

The Church views summer camps as an investment in the future. They help young people grow spiritually, develop character, form lasting friendships and see firsthand the joy of living God’s way. In a challenging world, these camps provide encouragement, stability and hope. COGWA’s commitment to regional camps reflects a dedication to nurturing and supporting young people as they prepare to become the future. Please join me in praying for another successful and safe summer at camp. And if you have the opportunity, please consider serving at one of our camps. You will never regret it!

Things Our Father Does That Parents Should Do

God is the ultimate parent. We are to use His example as a blueprint for how to parent our children. Striving to be like God can help us be the best parents possible.

By John Columbo

Being a parent is a demanding job. Children have a constant need for attention, and parents are responsible to discern what needs to be addressed and how to work with them. How we address different situations shapes our children for the future.

Thankfully, parents have a great example to follow in how to fulfill their responsibilities—God the Father! Let's explore five important things our Father does for us that we should be doing for our children.

1. Be the mediator and the judge

As much as my sons love each other, I've had to intervene and break up fights over the years. As they got older, I encouraged them to work out their differences without telling their mother or me. But when the name calling got hurtful and they got physical, I would have to step in and remind them that they love each other and that they need to stop.

Likewise, God reminds us that we should work out our differences by showing love and mercy to one another, always being mindful of Him. Jesus Christ reminds us to “be merciful, just as your Father also is merciful” (Luke 6:36).

2. Discipline with mercy

Parents are often advised, “Don’t discipline your children in anger.” Unfortunately, anger happens more often than we would like. (See “Overcoming Dangerous Emotions: Anger” and “What Does the Bible Say About Anger?” for help with this.)

An important thing to remember is to encourage, teach and be merciful. Encouragement is a priceless tool. When we are disciplining our children, we should always remind them that we love them and want what is best for them.

In Hosea 11 God expresses His love for His child, Israel. In verses 8-9 God asks, “How can I give you up, Ephraim? How can I hand you over, Israel? . . . My heart churns within Me; My sympathy is stirred. I will not execute the fierceness of My anger; I will not again destroy Ephraim. For I am God, and not man, the Holy One in your midst; and I will not come with terror.”

While raising my kids, I’ve found my frustration can sometimes overwhelm my ability to be encouraging. It is at times like this when mercy is so important. Instead of a hastily devised harsh punishment, a good, old-fashioned time-out can come in handy. When they were younger, I found that some quiet time could take three rambunctious boys and make them very aware of their surroundings.

When Miriam rebelled against Moses in Numbers 12, she was punished with leprosy. Moses cried out to God to heal her. God responded in verse 14, “If her father had but spit in her face, would she not be shamed seven days? Let her be shut out of the camp seven days, and afterward she may be received again.” Her punishment wasn’t to be leprous the rest of her life, but was similar to a very serious time-out.

3. Spend time with your children

When I was a child, my father spent a lot of time on the road. My friends would talk about going camping, going to ball games and sharing their accomplishments with their dads. Those weren’t experiences I had with my dad. He wasn’t a bad dad; it was just how he provided for the family. Unfortunately, his absence put a lot of strain on the family. That experience helped me realize that I needed to be present as often as I could to lead and encourage my family.

God encourages us that He’ll be with us in hard times: “The LORD is near to those who have a broken heart, and saves such as have a contrite spirit” (Psalm 34:18).

Likewise, Jesus Christ promises in Matthew 28:20, “Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the age.”

God’s presence in our lives is what gives us the encouragement to keep going, even in difficult times. If God is with us, who can be against us?

4. Establish and enforce rules

It seems that today’s kids often have their parents “tied around their finger.” It is important while they are young to establish boundaries within and outside the home. Boundaries help children learn to be functional adults by accepting responsibility, knowing limitations and handling disappointment.

Likewise, God has established 10 Commandments for us to live by. They are 10 basic instructions for loving God and loving other people. They are designed to keep us safe and help us to live happy lives (Proverbs 29:18)! Although life is full of ups and downs, keeping God’s commandments is the first step to having a relationship with the God who gives us hope.

Exodus 20:12 tells us to honor our parents. Establishing this rule inside and outside the home can help our children trust us as parents and grow in confidence. Teaching our children to obey this commandment also offers them a potential blessing. The commandment promises, “That your days may be long upon the land which the LORD your God is giving you.”

5. Keep your promises

Anyone who has ever experienced the heartbreak of a broken promise knows how difficult it is to regain trust.

One of my sons had some strong desires about his bedtime routine when he was young. If I had to work late and could not be home to do our routine, he would say to me, “Make sure you come and kiss me when you get home.” I always obliged. If he was unsure whether I would, he would ask me to wake him up. I would often agree to the request no matter what the hour, so he would know that I was home.

If I said I would do this but didn’t follow through, I showed him our relationship was not important and couldn’t always be trusted.

Our God promises to return and take away pain, suffering and confusion and give us a glorious new life. Part of this includes the promise to wake us up from sleep—to resurrect His children from the dead.

We are told in 1 Thessalonians 4:16-17 that “the dead in Christ will rise first . . . And thus we shall always be with the Lord.”

Keeping the commitments we make to our children—even simple things, like taking them to a ball game or watching a movie—is another way we can be like God.

We can be thankful that our Father in heaven does all of these things—and will keep all of His promises to His children. ☺☺

Arnold and Ann Hampton

A Journey to Remember

We continue our series of articles featuring COGWA's four regional directors. These men and their wives have served for decades in the Church's international work, caring for members and congregations in numerous countries. In these articles, you'll read the history of their dedication and service to our worldwide Church family.

By Doug Horchak

One of the more unique and diverse regions in the Church of God consists of the 13 countries that make up the Caribbean. Over 7,000 islands, islets and keys comprise this vast area southeast of the United States. As such, the history of God's work in that part of the world has been an ongoing and inspiring story since the 1960s.

While four other men served as regional directors in that area of the world (Dibar Apartian, Stan Bass, Charles Fleming and Kingsley Mather), Arnold Hampton's path to serving as regional director for the Caribbean reflects decades of experience in both the United States and the Caribbean. He and Ann, his wife of 53 years, have given many years of faithful commitment and shared service.

Their beginning

Both Arnold's and Ann's families had a very interesting, early exposure (and calling) into God's Church beginning in the mid-1950s.

Arnold's father and other extended family members began listening to The World Tomorrow radio broadcast in the Indianapolis, Indiana, area in the early 1950s. This resulted in six members of his family being baptized into what was then the Radio Church of God in the late 1950s. This took place at a time when Arnold's parents were separated, and Arnold was living with his mother in Florida.

At this same time, when Ann was just a little girl, her mother and aunt were attending a local Protestant church in Indianapolis where Arnold's aunts were also members! At the very time Arnold's father and his extended family were being called, Ann's aunt was called by God and began attending with them!

In time, Ann's mother also began reading the Church's literature, which led to her attending Sabbath services and being baptized in 1967.

Meanwhile, in the early 1960s, Arnold's parents reestablished communication and reunited—bringing together not only a family, but a shared spiritual journey that had been unfolding for years.

It was not long after, in June of 1967, that Arnold and Ann first met. Shortly after he graduated from high school in Orlando, Florida, Arnold and his mother made the nearly 1,000-mile journey to Indianapolis to reunite with family. On his first day there, he met the girl who was to be his lifetime mate!

Later that year, Arnold attended Howard University in Washington, D.C., and then transferred the following year to Purdue University in Indiana. During that time, his relationship with Ann began to grow, and in 1970, both were accepted to Ambassador College. Arnold and Ann attended along with eight other single black students and graduated in 1973.

In 1972, as an upperclassman at Ambassador College, Arnold was asked to gain experience by serving as a ministerial trainee in the Southern California area.

Arnold and Ann were married on July 29, 1973, beginning what would become a lifetime of working together as a committed husband-wife team in the Church.

U.S. and Caribbean assignments

Following graduation, Mr. Hampton was assigned to serve in Baltimore, Maryland, where he worked with congregations from 1973 to 1978. He was ordained as a minister of Jesus Christ on Dec. 9, 1974.

From 1978 to 1982, Mr. Hampton served as pastor of two congregations on the Delmarva Peninsula, including the entire state of Delaware and the eastern portions of Maryland and Virginia. Serving across this geographically and culturally diverse region gave the Hamptons experience that would help prepare them to care for the brethren and congregations spread across island nations in the Caribbean.

In February 1982, the Hamptons were given their first assignment in the Caribbean and, along with their young children, relocated to shepherd God's people in Barbados. This move marked the beginning of their direct and lasting involvement in the Caribbean region. From 1982 to June 1985, Mr. Hampton pastored congregations in Barbados, St. Vincent and St. Lucia. Serving across multiple islands brought unique opportunities and challenges and helped establish strong and enduring relationships with brethren throughout the region.

The initial years in Barbados were especially demanding. At the time, about 300 brethren attended services and were supported by one local elder and two deacons. In addition to weekly Sabbath services, Mr. Hampton oversaw a weekly Bible study, two Spokesman Clubs, a graduate club, two women's clubs, a young adults' club, Y.O.U. and Y.E.S. His responsibilities also included managing an office, organizing the Feast of Tabernacles and conducting baptismal counseling, which led to more than 60 baptisms in just over a year.

In 1985, Mr. Hampton and his family were asked to relocate to Chicago, Illinois, where he pastored the Chicago South Side congregation for eight years—from 1985 to 1993. These years provided valuable experience serving a large metropolitan congregation and further broadened his pastoral perspective.

In 1993, Mr. Hampton and his family returned to the Baltimore, Maryland, area, where he served as pastor of the Baltimore congregations and as the regional pastor for the mid-Atlantic area. By 1995, his responsibilities had expanded to include congregations across Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and Pennsylvania, as well as oversight of several Caribbean areas, including Barbados, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and Grenada.

Developing leaders

In 1999, Mr. Hampton and the late Kingsley Mather, then Caribbean regional director, met in Florida to discuss one of the higher priorities for the region—that of developing future leadership. From that meeting emerged the vision for the first formal leadership training in that region—the Caribbean Leadership Training (CLT), with the first session held in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, in August 2000. Eleven individuals from around the region came to Fort Lauderdale, and we were blessed to have Richard Pinelli attend. He shared material with the attendees focusing on Church policies, Church governance, fundamental beliefs and notes from many ABC classes at the time.

That was the first of seven weekend sessions. Over 50 participants were involved during that time from Bahamas, Barbados, Dominica, Guyana, Jamaica, St. Kitts, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and the United States. The seventh session was in 2009 in Barbados and was attended by Clyde Kilough.

After COGWA started in December 2010, Mr. Hampton started sermonette classes for men throughout the Caribbean in 2013.

The next project Mr. Hampton initiated was based on recent educational material provided by the Church: the Christian Leadership Training Program (CLTP) in 2017-2018. Shortly after that, COGWA began the International Leadership Program (ILP) around the world. The first ILP meeting in the Caribbean was in August of 2019, with 33 attendees from around the region.

Special memories

One of Mr. Hampton's more adventurous assignments over the years has been serving brethren in the South American country of Guyana. Beginning in 2000, Mr. Hampton and Mr. Mather, began traveling to Guyana, focusing on visits to Amerindian communities in the country's interior.

These trips presented significant challenges. One year involved sleeping outdoors in a hammock under mosquito netting; the next, in a barn shared with rats. On yet another occasion, baptisms were conducted in a lake known to contain piranhas!

Travel conditions were often arduous, including overnight journeys across the savanna in Guyana to cross the border into Brazil in order visit an Amerindian group in the remote village of Moscou. One particularly memorable visit included what can be called nothing other than a "mass blessing" of children! More than a dozen children—ranging from infants to teenagers—had hands laid on them.

In 2008, the Hamptons moved to Florida to pastor the West Palm Beach congregation while taking on expanded responsibilities in the Caribbean. Following Mr. Mather's death four years later, Mr. Hampton assumed responsibility as regional director for the entire Caribbean.

One of the more recent historical highlights was in 2018, when the COGWA Barbados congregation celebrated its 50th anniversary. Herbert W. Armstrong had personally started the church in Barbados on the Sabbath of Feb. 3, 1968, with 111 in attendance, including Dibar Apartian, who was the regional director at the time, and Stan Bass, who was pastor from 1968 to 1972.

The golden anniversary of the founding of the Church of God in Barbados included a special church service followed by a formal dinner and dance. There were 74 in attendance, including both Jim Franks and Arnold Hampton.

Together, Arnold and Ann Hampton have exemplified a wonderful example of service in the Church and work of God in both the United States and the Caribbean. They are blessed with three children, four grandchildren and one great-grandchild, who remain an important and cherished part of their lives.

These decades of pastoral experience—serving congregations across the United States and throughout the Caribbean—contributed greatly in preparing Arnold for his role as regional director for the Caribbean over the past several years.

On a personal note, I began attending Ambassador College the same year as Arnold and Ann, and we became close friends. As we crossed paths with the Hamptons over the years, my wife and I have always marveled at their steadfast faithfulness, their commitment and their love for God's people in the different countries in which they have served.

We have deeply appreciated our friendship and are blessed to have them in the ministry of Jesus Christ! ©A

The Final Push

By Sarah Tannert, FI student

With less than two months left in the Foundation Institute school year, the class took its two-week break for the spring holy days. Most students returned home for the holy days and spent time with friends and family. Several students even had the chance to spend some time relaxing on the beach. The break served as a chance to rest and reinvigorate us for the final push toward graduation as well as focus on our annual reminder of the sacrifice of our Savior. It was a very meaningful spring holy day season.

We returned to class on Monday, April 13, and hit the ground running. With just five weeks left before graduation, there was a lot to do. The media projects we all had been working on, which included the student In Accord, the student annual and a social media project, were finished during several class periods that were dedicated labs. These projects gave us all hands-on experience in several aspects of the work the Church is doing. They also provided a lot of opportunities for creativity, cooperation, laughter and fun.

In the final two weeks leading up to graduation, Doug and Janel Johnson returned to the classroom for Mr. Johnson's class on the history of the Church in our modern day. It has been a very valuable class for us, especially given that most of the class was born after Mr. Armstrong's death. Going through the events of the last 40 years with people who lived through them has been very helpful to explain how we got to where we are. This class has driven home the importance of doctrinal stability and the need to build on the firm foundation of Jesus Christ.

Mr. Johnson's first class of this second semester recapped the culture and events of the 1960s. That afternoon the entire class headed over to Dave and Becky Johnson's home for a delicious lunch and the annual showing of Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. It is a movie that certainly encapsulates the 1960s and was a very entertaining way to spend the afternoon. The fellowship we have had with the faculty—both in class and outside of class—has been one of the highlights of our FI experience.

In the second-to-last week, we participated in Foundation Institute's version of "spirit week." Monday kicked off the week with Dress Like a Biblical Character Day, Tuesday was Sports Day, but I think Wacky Wednesday will be the most memorable. Several members of the office staff participated, and many photos were taken. It was a wonderful way to spend our last full week of class.

As classes began to wrap up and this year drew to a close, there was a bittersweet feeling. Finishing up our final reflection papers (not tests!) on the books of Deuteronomy and Ezekiel provided us time to look back on the things we have learned in the last nine months. I think I can speak for the entire class when I say that the things we have learned and the foundation we have built during this program will stay with us for our entire lives. ☺☺

NEWS OF THE WORK

Education Center Building Update

Since last issue, our building's shape can be clearly seen now that a layer of steel for the roof has been added. Construction is on target to be completed in October.

Stats & Facts

In 2017 the Church began offering a special series of Bible studies called Journeys. We started with what we called the Journey Starter Pack, four seven-day courses titled "Knowing God," "The Problem of Evil," "The Plan of God" and "The People of God."

Since then, we've added three topical Journeys: "The Fruit of the Spirit," "The Armor of God" and "The Seven Churches of Revelation."

In 2025, thanks to a Facebook ad for Journeys, we had over 42,000 people sign up to take one or more of these courses.

Retirements

David Treybig retired from the full-time ministry on April 18. He and his wife, Teddi, had been serving the Austin and Temple, Texas, congregations.

Peter Hawkins will retire from the full-time ministry on June 13. He and his wife, Sonja, have served members in the United Kingdom and English-speaking Europe.

International Work

Holy Days in the Dominican Republic

We broke the record! With 10 for the Passover, 19 for the Night to Be Much Observed, and 18 for the first holy day, this beautiful Caribbean island had a record number this year.

All our meetings were held in the lovely home of Orlando Gabriel and Zoraya Diaz de Gabriel in Santo Domingo. We also enjoyed a visit from the Mazariegos family—Alberto, Alejandra and Andres—from Guatemala. Alberto is a talented guitar player, and they provided music for the offertory on the holy day, April 2, and all the members sang for the special music.

I again traveled to the Dominican Republic for Pentecost, when we had 16 in attendance.

I have been serving this group for over 20 years now, and it is beginning to grow. They love to receive visitors, so brush off your Spanish and go visit them if you have the chance.

2025 Annual Audit

Faithful Stewardship Continues

By Britton M. Taylor

Every year an independent accounting firm conducts an audit of our finances. The most recent audit, for 2025, again gives a positive review of the Church's financial position. We are pleased to share the results of our annual audit, completed in April 2026, with our Church members and donors who generously support the Church of God, a Worldwide Association, Inc.

The income received for 2025 was just over $17.4 million, up almost $385,000 (2.3 percent) compared to 2024. Income exceeded expenses by over $743,000.

These figures are very good—especially considering that 2024 was itself an outstanding year. The Church continues to be in a very good financial position as construction progresses on the new education center.

We give thanks to God the Father and Jesus Christ for our continued financial blessings. And we give thanks to you, our faithful members and donors, for your generous and steadfast support of the Church through your tithes, offerings and ongoing prayers for the Church as we endeavor to faithfully use the resources God provides to do His work.

This year's audited financial statement is for the years ending Dec. 31, 2025, and Dec. 31, 2024. In a confirmation letter dated April 28, 2026, our Helen was born on Jan. 21, 1931, in Irving, Texas, to Arthur and Bertie Farine. Growing up, she picked vegetables on the family's truck farm, which was part of a tract of land homesteaded by Helen's great-grandfather, who emigrated from France in 1855.

Life was hard during the Great Depression. Their home did not have electricity or plumbing, and Helen had few toys or possessions. After graduation, she went to business school and worked as a secretary.
