She
woke
up,

and
there was a glow.

She made a conscious
decision not to freak
out.

After all, she was clearly dreaming.

If she were awake,
she maybe would
have noticed
this decrepit room,
the rotten blanket,
the bare bulb.

Only the dresser was familiar.

There was nothing inside.

Not even socks.

She woke up the next morning remembering none of this.
