

FATEHPUR-SIKRI

Edited by Michael Brand and Glenn D. Lowry

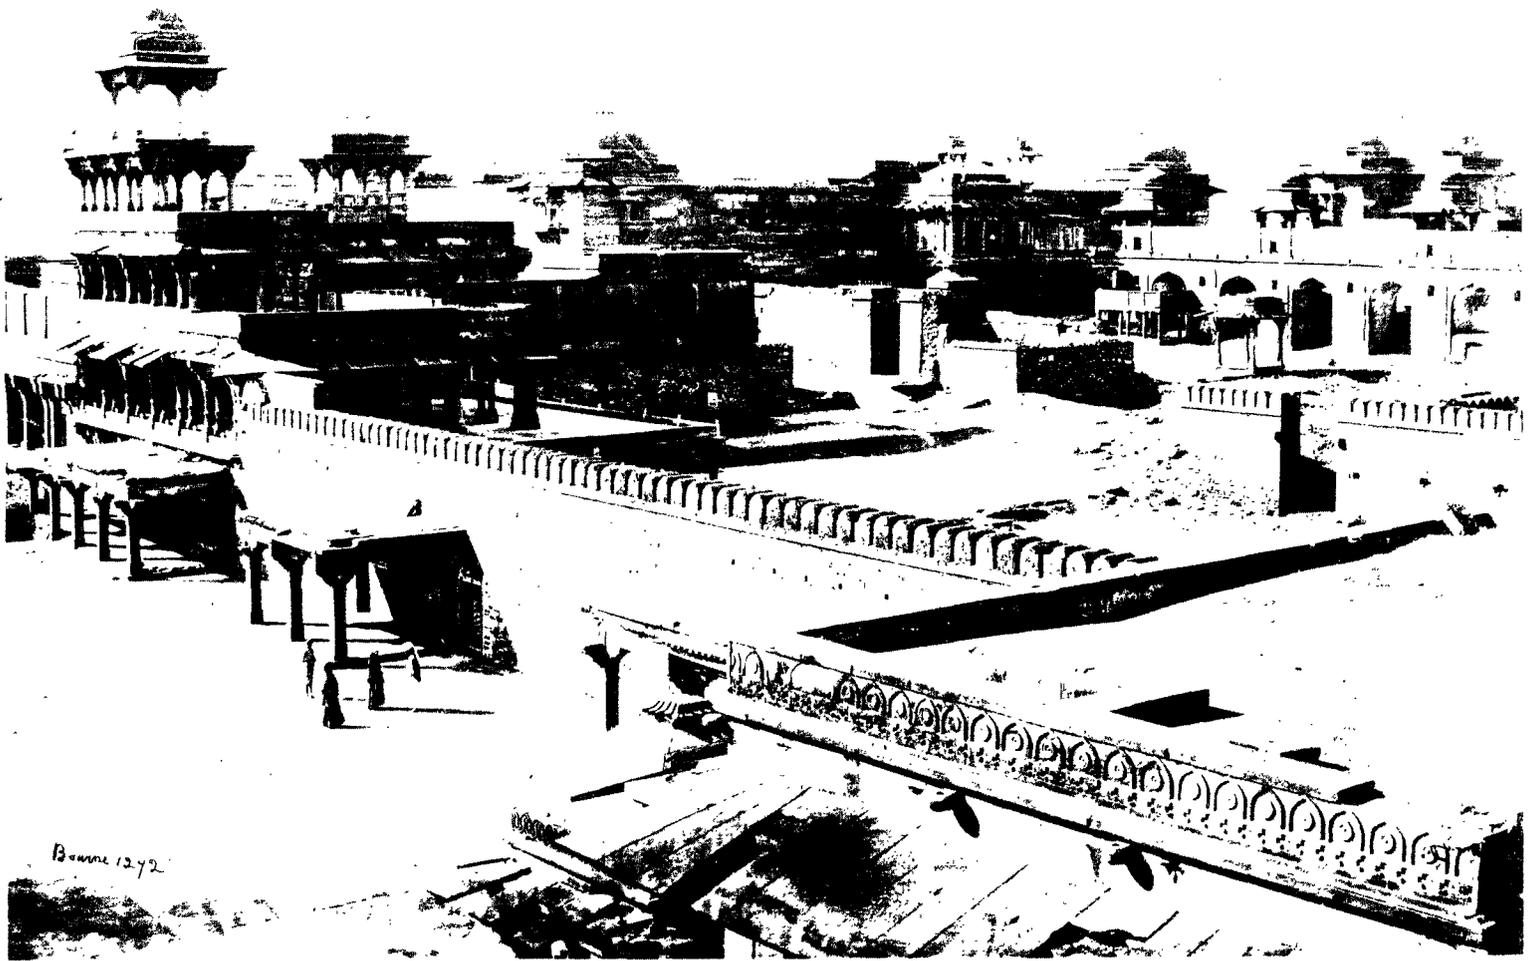

The Aga Khan Fund
for Islamic Architecture

Massachusetts Institute of Technology Libraries

FATEHPUR-SIKRI: A SOURCEBOOK

The palace complex at Fatehpur-Sikri viewed to the southwest from Structure 63, with the main gateway of the Jami<sup>c</sup> Masjid in the distant background. Photograph by Samuel Bourne, ca. 1863-71. (Fogg Art Museum: Gift--Mrs. R. Minturn Sedgwick)

FATEHPUR-SIKRI: A SOURCEBOOK

Edited by

Michael Brand and Glenn D. Lowry

with contributions by

Ziauddin A. Desai
and Attilio Petruccioli

The Aga Khan Program for Islamic Architecture at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology
Cambridge, Massachusetts
1985

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This sourcebook would not have been possible without the support and advice of Oleg Grabar. His many wise comments and encouragement are greatly appreciated. We are also most grateful to the Aga Khan Program for Islamic Architecture at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for publishing this book and aiding us in our research.

Annemarie Schimmel was a constant source of enthusiasm and advice, and we particularly appreciate her comments and suggestions concerning our Persian translations. Wheeler Thackston also offered valuable suggestions on various aspects of the Persian glossary. We are extremely grateful to both these Harvard scholars for sharing their knowledge and time with us, but the responsibility for any errors that may appear is naturally ours. Richard Barz, of the Australian National University, very generously provided us with further information about an interesting reference to Fatehpur-Sikri in a Braj Bhasa text he recently published. Woodman Taylor, Curatorial Associate, Department of Islamic Art and Later Indian Painting, Fogg Museum, kindly procured for us prints of Samuel Bourne's photographs of Fatehpur-Sikri.

Z. A. Desai, formerly Director of Persian and Arabic Epigraphy, Archaeological Survey of India, who compiled the section on inscriptions at Fatehpur-Sikri and also prepared preliminary translations of three lengthy passages from the Tarikh-i Akbari, was tireless in his efforts. His contribution to this sourcebook has been invaluable, and we are profoundly grateful for the amount of time he devoted to this project. Many thanks are also due to Attilio Petruccioli in Rome who most generously allowed us to publish for the first time two of his superb plans of Fatehpur-Sikri.

In Delhi, we are especially grateful to Dr. M. D. Khare, Director of Monuments, Archaeological Survey of India, for ensuring that our research in India went smoothly and productively. Our work in Fatehpur-Sikri itself was greatly assisted by the Archaeological Survey of India office in Agra under the supervision of Shri H. K. Narain.

Finally, we would like to thank Margaret Sevcenko, the Coordinator for Research and Publications at the Aga Khan Program, for her help in editing this manuscript, and Edith Griffin, who did far more than commit this unwieldy material to her word-processor with astonishing speed and accuracy. She is also largely responsible for the layout of the finished text and various minor improvements too numerous to mention.

Michael Brand
Glenn D. Lowry

