Calgary Women in Energy is excited to move forward with the Allies in Energy 2022 Executive Forum. At the 2020 forum, we brought together an elite panel of executive women leaders from our Canadian energy industry who courageously shared their unique perspectives on shifting the paradigm with respect to biases, diversity, inclusion and equity as well as how they are intentionally carving a new path forward to change the face of energy.

For this year's forum, it's more important now than ever before to not only continue the discussion around diversity, inclusion and equity, unconscious biases and stereotypes, but also hear from people of different cultures, backgrounds and experiences, and take an intentional, meaningful and purposeful call to action that will result in transformative change. I call this Allyship; A lifelong process of building relationships based on trust, consistency and accountability with marginalized individuals and/or groups of people. The intention for this forum is to dig deeper into people's lived experiences and learn from and understand not only our indigenous allies, but those groups and individuals who are underrepresented so that we can continue to build trust and community in a challenged environment.

There is an important energy transition evolving on the horizon; in the context of this forum, it's important to explore how Canada and its' people can help lead this transition, but it will take a concerted effort from people of different walks of life to work together for the well-being of Canada and all Canadians.
