RE: NASPO ValuePoint Master Service Agreement # MA3696 (the “Contract”) with USCC Services, LLC
 (“Contractor”)

Action Requested: Contractor requests to add the product(s) and/or service(s) referenced in this document (collectively, the “Products”) to the Contract.

☒ Verify “Action Log” (Attachment N) is attached with this request.

Product(s) requested to be added: Ooma AirDial

Product(s) Overview:

Ooma AirDial is a wireless phone line IoT solution that helps organizations transition from copper-based phone lines while retaining critical alarm, safety, and building access systems. It offers quick and easy migration, flexible deployment options using wireless connectivity, and can be remotely managed through a robust Remote Device Management portal. The device includes a backup battery that maintains service during an unforeseen outage. Ooma AirDial can easily be self-installed or professional install is also available.

Describe how the product(s) fall within the scope of the Master Agreement

- Mobile Data Collection: Our POTS replacement products use the cellular network to connect devices like sensors, meters, and alarms, enabling them to transmit data wirelessly. This data can include readings, battery status updates and alerts, which are then collected and analyzed for various purposes. The platform managing these POTS replacement lines/devices falls under IoT management.
- Public Safety Systems: Replacing POTS lines for fire alarms, elevator phones, etc., directly enhances these systems with IoT capabilities (remote monitoring, faster signals, integration with other building systems).
- Enterprise Messaging: When POTS lines are replaced with IoT solutions, the system used to transmit alarm signals or other status updates from devices like fire alarms and elevator phones to the chosen central monitoring station or personnel within an organization can be considered a form of enterprise messaging.

NEW PRODUCT TERMS AND CONDITIONS. Attach any Terms and Conditions that apply to this product (such as ULA, Policy, Product Terms and Conditions). Any and all Products offered and furnished shall comply fully with all applicable Federal and State laws and regulations.
