So much better than screenshots

Record exactly what you see on your screen and make it a screencast. Whether you're tech support looking for a smart way of visually documenting the solution to a recurring problem, if you long to capture and distribute your university lectures or plain simply want to show the world your browser game high score via YouTube.com – Screenium will get out of your way and simply capture the video for you.

Edit your screencasts

Screenium 2 features a completely new and built-in video editor. From now on you do not require any expensive additional video editing software packages in order to create stunning compositions of your captured videos or to polish your screencast. Whether it is cutting, adding transitions, editing audio or adding effects and animated forms and text, Screenium 2 offers all the features you need to create sophisticated screencasts.

The best way of teaching is by example

Don't just describe a person what to do! It's slow, it's frustrating and chances are it's easily forgotten so you'll have to repeat that lesson at some point. Instead, record a screencast of your instructions and make it available online. What started as a one-on-one tutorial could help thousands of less experienced users all over the world.

Share your videos

When you've finished creating an instructional video for your parents or friends, customers or colleagues, export it in any video format supported by Quicktime. Make it available on a network server, your website, upload it to YouTube.com or any other video sharing portal.

The more people can access your work, the merrier. Export the videos for Macs, iPhones or the AppleTV. Use Quicktime to convert videos for Windows PCs.

Language support & System requirements

Screenium is localised in a total of 10 languages. This means that Screenium's user interface with all its buttons, descriptive texts and menus will automatically adapt to your Mac's language settings. Currently, these languages are supported:

Screenium requires a Mac with 10.5 Leopard, 10.6 Snow Leopard or 10.7 Lion.
