Dear Hilda:

Here is my expense account. I wish I didn't hate them so; I always end up by feeling sorry for the Rosenwald, but for myself too, because living on one almost constantly I find that I never quite come out even. But this, I feel, is pretty fair. Still it does appalls me. I guess we will have to blame it on the high cost of living and the fact that once I get off of Michigan Boulevard I am a lost soul.

I only hope that I have been of some use to the fund. Each year it is a real experience for me; this year even more so since there was more for me to do. I am planning to write Mr. Embree and tell him so more fully, until such a time as I do I hope you will tell him the way I feel, and tell Dr. Will too. And I shall be most grateful for the generous honorarium, which I hated to suggest but feel slightly less guilty about since you all worked me twice as hard. I am not, of course, suggesting that the two have any connection!

One last word; the bedroom on the Century was not my own idea but happened to be the only thing I could get, and I was lucky to manage that at the last minute.

To you personally I owe many thanks. You made my stay a pleasant one and it was grand getting to know you a little better.

Cordially,
Beck
