Dear Moe: Claytor is still at the University of Michigan. I had a brief word with E. B. Wilson about him when I saw Wilson at the Social Science meetings in September. He is inclined to think that Claytor had better be moved on fairly soon either to Harvard or to Princeton. You and Wilson have taken so much interest in Claytor that I have not kept very close to the planning of his career. If you think some further arrangement should be made, will you be good enough either to write to me (or George Reynolds) or take up the suggestion directly with E. B. Wilson, Professor Wilder of Michigan, or Claytor himself?

Very truly yours,
 EDWIN R. EMBREE
