

Name Guy Adams Cardwell, Jr. English
Field: Language and Literature

Associate Professor, Department of English
Tulane University, New Orleans, Louisiana

Plan of Work

Through a study of books and periodicals written in South Carolina (mainly in Charleston) before 1860, I should expect to show important phases of the interaction of European and American civilizations in the Old South. I should study German, French, and English influences; and I should analyze the ideas of literary regionalism and nationalism.

Seeks no degree. Probable duration of work one year, beginning September 1942. Will return to present position.
