

JULIUS ROSENWALD FUND
FELLOWSHIP AWARDS - 1939

To Negroes

FRED W. ALSUP, head of the science department, Morristown College, Tennessee; zoological studies at the University of Pennsylvania. (Renewal).

FANNIN S. BELCHER, assistant professor of English and director of dramatics, West Virginia State College; studies in drama at Yale University. (Renewal).

L. HOWARD BENNETT, field secretary, Fisk University; to pursue studies in public administration at the University of Chicago.

ALFRED R. BROOKS, professor of English, Agricultural and Technical College, Greensboro, North Carolina; studies in English literature at the University of Edinburgh.

ANNA M. COOKE, director of dramatics, Spelman College; studies in drama and related arts, at Yale University. (Renewal).

ALONZO J. DAVIS, head of the department of psychology and secretary of labor, Tuskegee Institute; investigation of the factors which influence mechanical ability, at Yale University.

JOHN A. DAVIS, assistant professor of political science, Lincoln University, Pennsylvania; study of the Negro in politics in New York, at Columbia University. (Renewal).

W. ALLISON DAVIS, professor of anthropology and head of the division of social sciences, Dillard University; to complete a social-anthropological study of the Negro church in the deep South, at the University of Chicago.

WILLIAM HENRY DEAN, JR., instructor in economics, Atlanta University: study of economic history and human geography, abroad. (Renewal).

SHIRLEY GRAHAM, Chicago, Illinois: for continuation of studies in drama and music, at Yale University. (Renewal).

LEILA S. GREEN, Canton, Ohio: studies in organic chemistry, at Radcliffe College. (Renewal).

ABRAM L. HARRIS, professor of economics and head of department, Howard University: to complete a study of the ideas of Karl Marx and Thorstein Veblen.

EDWIN B. JOURDAIN, JR., Alderman, Fifth Ward, Evanston, Illinois: a study of the relationships between a minority group and its government, at Northwestern University.

CHARLES R. LAWRENCE, JR., Howard Junior High School and Morehouse College, Atlanta, Georgia: studies in sociology, at Columbia University.

HYLAN G. LEWIS, instructor in sociology, Howard University: a study of social differentiation in the Negro community, at the University of Chicago.

BIRTILL A. LLOYD, professor of mathematics and physics, Philander Smith College: continuation of studies in physical chemistry, at the University of Illinois. (Renewal).

JAMES E. LU VALLE, graduate assistant in chemistry, California Institute of Technology: studies in physical chemistry, at California Institute of Technology. (Renewal).

GEORGE F. McCRAY, assistant superintendent, Labor Research Project, Illinois State Employment Service: study of interracial conflicts in the labor movement, at the University of Chicago.

ROBERT E. MARTIN, research assistant, Federal Writers' Project, Washington: study of the poll tax in the United States as an instrument of political control, at the University of Chicago.

EDWARD NELSON PALMER, Newport News, Virginia: study of the effects of unionization and mechanization upon the Negro automobile worker and his community organization, at the University of Michigan.

YOURA THELMA QUALLS, assistant in the department of English at Fisk University: study of English literature, at Radcliffe College.

LAWRENCE D. REDDICK, Jacksonville, Florida: study of the news and opinion relative to the Negro which appeared in the ante bellum New Orleans press.

JACOB L. REDDIX, teacher of mathematics, Roosevelt High School, Gary, Indiana: study of the possibilities of cooperative societies among Negroes, at the University of Chicago.

RUTH M. SMITH, Washington, D. C.: studies in anatomy, at Western Reserve University. (Renewal).

HUGH H. SMYTHE, research assistant, department of social science, Fisk University: studies in social science, at Northwestern University.

WILLIAM GRANT STILL, Los Angeles, California: for creative work in music.

HOWARD W. SWANSON, Cleveland, Ohio: for continuation of studies in composition with Mlle. Boulanger, Paris, France. (Renewal).

MERZE TATE, chairman of the social studies division and history instructor, Bennett College, Greensboro, North Carolina: study of the movement for disarmament, 1888-1914, at Radcliffe College and Harvard University.

MYRON B. TOWNS, professor of chemistry and head of department, Agricultural and Technical College, Greensboro, North Carolina: continuation of studies in electro-chemistry, at the University of Michigan. (Renewal).

ALBERT L. TURNER, registrar, Tuskegee Institute: study of legislation and judicial interpretation affecting Negroes, at the University of Michigan.

LORENZO D. TURNER, professor and head of the department of English, Fisk University: study of Negro speech to determine nature and significance of West African survivals in this speech, at Yale University and in Brazil.

BONITA HARRISON VALIEN, social science departmental fellow, Fisk University: study of the Negro worker in domestic and personal service, at the University of Wisconsin.

PRESTON VALIEN, social science departmental fellow, Fisk University: study of Negro labor problems and Negro occupational maladjustment in terms of occupational status and distribution, at the University of Wisconsin.

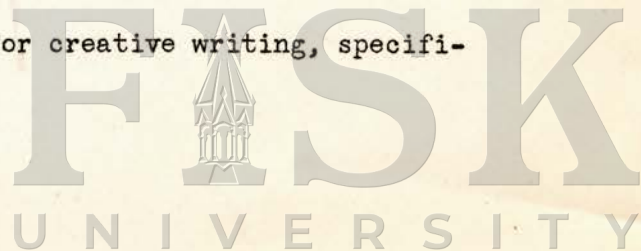

To White Southerners

CHESS ABERNATHY, JR., editor-in-chief of the Cobb County Times, Marietta, Georgia: study of the possibilities of developing trade relations between the southern states and Latin-American countries.

MARCUS BARTLETT, musical director and sports commentator, Station WSB, Atlanta, Georgia: study of radio in education.

JOHN D. BLACK, instructor in zoology, University of Arkansas: continuation of the study of the distribution and general taxonomy of Arkansas fishes, at the University of Michigan. (Renewal).

HERSCHEL BRICKELL, Jackson, Miss.: for creative writing, specifically a history of Natchez, Mississippi.

ALBERT E. CARTER, Sunday editor and foreign affairs writer, the Chattanooga Times, Chattanooga, Tennessee: study of certain Latin-American countries, with special reference to foreign influence on their economy and government.

ROBERT C. COTNER, professor of history and political science, John B. Stetson University: to complete research on the history of the Florida citrus industry, at Harvard University.

DONALD DAY, Austin, Texas: study of the literary inheritance of Texas before the Civil War, at the University of Chicago.

EDWARD P. DREYER, assistant state director, Federal Writers' Project of Louisiana: studies in American literature.

JAMES E. FLEMING, instructor in sociology, University of Georgia: a socio-historical study of southern opposition to industry as revealed in important newspapers, 1865-1900, at the University of North Carolina.

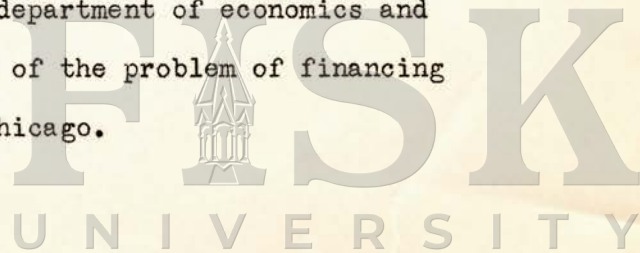

BYRON HILL, instructor in economics, Vanderbilt University: a study of southern railroad freight rate differentials, at Vanderbilt University.

ROBERT M. HODGES, editor of the Daily Times-News, Burlington, North Carolina: study of southern industrial relations between capital and white and Negro labor, at the University of North Carolina.

JETER ALLEN ISELY, Morristown, Tennessee: study of the Populist movement in North Carolina, at Princeton University.

MAY JUSTUS, Tracy City, Tennessee: to do research in southern mountain folklore and to incorporate material in a supplementary reader for southern schools.

JOHN W. KENDRICK, assistant in the department of economics and commerce, University of North Carolina: study of the problem of financing industry in the South, at the University of Chicago.

JOHN N. LYLE, security analyst and statistician, Trust Company of Georgia, Atlanta: a study of trust companies in the United States and of English and Scottish savings banks and investment companies, at the London School of Economics.

PURYEAR MIMS, Nashville, Tennessee: to create in sculptural form certain southern types.

WILEY CLIFFORD NEWMAN, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Indianola, Mississippi: for studies in sociology at Duke University and the University of North Carolina.

WALTER E. SEWELL, assistant professor of mathematics, Georgia School of Technology: studies to effect a greater harmony between the mathematical training in high schools and colleges in the South, to encourage the study of higher mathematics in the South, and to aid in the establishment of centers of mathematical research in the South.

CHARLES E. SHANNON, Montgomery, Alabama: continuation of painting of Negro life. (Renewal).

LILLIAN E. SMITH, editor of the North Georgia Review, Clayton, Georgia: study of southern literature, sociology, and race relations.

T. LYNN SMITH, professor and head of the departments of sociology and rural sociology, Louisiana State University: study of the personnel and facilities for education in agriculture, in South and Central America.

PAULA SNELLING, editor of the North Georgia Review, Clayton, Georgia: study of southern literature, sociology, and race relations.

SHELBY E. SOUTHARD, Athens, Alabama: to study the role which southern Methodism played in the sectional struggle in American history from 1830-1861, at Vanderbilt University.

MELVIN E. THOMPSON, director of teacher training, certification, and curriculum, Georgia State Department of Education: to formulate a plan for the coordination of governmental educational organizations in Georgia into one comprehensive educational program, at the University of Georgia.

HOPE TISDALE, assistant professor of physical education, Woman's College of the University of North Carolina: study of the physical characteristics, abilities, and handicaps of southern youth as compared with those of other regions, at the University of North Carolina.

DAN RUTLEDGE VINING, instructor of statistics and economics, University of Arkansas: a study of the nature and sources of fluctuation of employment and income in a southern region, at the University of Chicago.

RICHARD E. YATES, assistant professor of political science, Hendrix College: to develop an integrated course in the social sciences on the junior college level, at Columbia University.

-0-

Fellowships involving European study or travel have been postponed or are in the process of revision.

Awards are made once a year by a committee consisting of Dr. Will Alexander, Director of the Farm Security Administration, Dr. Charles Johnson of Fisk University, Mr. Henry Allen Moe, Secretary of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, Dr. Raymond R. Paty, President of Birmingham-Southern College, Mr. Edwin R. Embree, President of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and Mr. George M. Reynolds, Director for Fellowships of the Fund.

-0-

