

Fellowships Directory

June 13, 1946

Gentlemen: In the past decade many business concerns and industries have instituted programs of scholarships for students or for research workers. The activities of the Standard Oil Company, Sears Roebuck, or the Pepsi-Cola Company are obvious examples.

The Julius Rosenwald Fund is attempting to gather information relative to this type of aid offered by commercial organizations, with a view to issuing a directory. Such a directory would be of considerable value to teachers, counselors, librarians, and other educational agencies and would also furnish the basis for an interesting study of this new development in American business life.

If your organization has, or has had in the past, or contemplates in the future, any kind of program of prizes or scholarships for students or research workers, we would be very grateful for any information you can give us.

Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM C. HAYGOOD
