REPORT:

I have known the applicant since September 1927. We were college class mates. She was an excellent student and participated in many extra curricular activities, of which she was usually the leader.

Miss Sims has always impressed me as a person of excellent character; straightforward in all her relationships, showing initiative, possessing a genuine interest in people.

I have not been in a position to observe Miss Sims' work as a nurse, but doctors at this hospital who have worked with her consider her work as outstanding.

Because Miss Sims has always exhibited executive ability it is believed that she will make a real contribution to the field of nursing if given opportunity for further training.

Everything that I can say of Miss Sims may be classified as assets. She possibly has weaknesses as we humans have, but I have observed none which will handicap her in her field.

Yours very truly,

Marie Randolph
(Miss) Marie Randolph.
