June 16, 1928

Dear Mr. Lambert:

As an experiment the Julius Rosenwald Fund has made an appropriation for the school year 1928-29 to aid a maximum of 10 rural Negro schools and not more than 30 teachers in each of the fourteen states to extend the regular school terms one or two months. It is thought that this will have the effect not only of extending school terms in backward communities but also of raising the standard of teachers by increasing the annual salaries.

The following plan of cooperation is quoted from the docket (Item VI.), approved June 13, 1928:

"The basis of this offer is that for the first year $\frac{1}{2}$ the cost of the extended term be paid from public funds and $\frac{1}{2}$ by the Fund and for the second year, $\frac{2}{3}$ from public funds and $\frac{1}{3}$ by the Fund, it being a condition of the offer that public school authorities agree to meet the entire cost of the extended term after two years. It is to be understood that the minimum teacher's salary toward which this aid is to be given is \$50. per month."

This matter was discussed at the conference of State Agents at Signal Mountain, Tennessee, June 8th. It was brought out that such aid is badly needed and could be wisely used to promote better teaching in Negro schools. It was thought that the State Department of Education in each state could carefully select the schools and teachers where the experiments might be tried, keeping in mind not only the need for the aid but the possibility of having the authorities agree to carry it forward as provided in the plan. When such schools and teachers are decided on we shall be glad to have full details of each submitted for approval before the Fund is obligated.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. J. S. Lambert,
