June 20, 1947

There are undoubtedly among the students attending your summer session many who will not be in school next fall, and hence they may not have our fellowships called to their attention. We shall, therefore, greatly appreciate your posting the enclosed announcement in a conspicuous place and ask you to call it to the attention of persons who may be especially qualified for these grants.

Our aim is to give special opportunities - study, travel, or work experience - for the development of individuals of unusual promise. We are interested not only in scholars but in persons who may exert leadership in various phases of American life: labor, religion, writing, race relations - any field in which talent may enrich the nation.

Sincerely yours,

Hilde Reitzel
