Dear Mr. Moon: Since I didn't receive your letter of March 4 until this morning, I did nothing about changing your travel reservation thinking that it's easier to make last minute changes at your end. I hope this holds true.

We do appreciate your valuable service on the literary jury and will gladly provide an honorarium of one hundred dollars, realizing that the chief payment is the gratitude of the candidates and the opportunity to help one or two talented youngsters up the ladder of attainment.

Don't forget your reading glasses - there are about forty applications in creative writing and half a dozen in drama waiting for you!

Sincerely,

HR
