

AARON DOUGLAS during his fellowship completed a number of portraits, character sketches, and scenes of Negro life. With headquarters at Fisk University, Tuskegee Institute and Dillard University, Mr. Douglas took part in fine arts activities in these institutions and in the community. Several weeks were spent in Haiti. There he held an exhibition and his Haitian pictures are now being shown in New York.

J. G. ST. CLAIR DRAKE was appointed for studies in social anthropology at the University of Chicago, pursuing his work toward his master's degree. At the end of his fellowship period, he became associated with the study of the Negro community in Chicago as research assistant in charge of the work on churches and associations. Probably not a top man.

S. RANDOLPH EDMONDS spent seven months in Ireland writing plays and articles, observing the Irish professional and amateur theatre. He wrote two full-length and two one-act plays, four articles and some poems. One of the full-length plays, "The Land of Cotton," is being considered for professional production. Mr. Edmonds was admitted to all rehearsals of the Longford Company at the Gate Theatre, of the Gate Theatre Company, and of the Abbey Theatre. Especially valuable was Mr. Edmonds' attendance at the Conference of Playwrights in London, the Poetry Festival at Oxford, the Central School of Speech Training, the Shakespearian Festival at Stratford, the Malvern Festival, and the Welch Eisteddfod. Mr. Edmonds has returned to his post as professor of drama at Dillard University.

JOHN HOPE FRANKLIN is engaged upon a historical study of the Free Negro in the ante bellum South. Mr. Franklin's fellowship was renewed for 1938. He has passed the general examination for the doctor's degree at
