Management Review

New technologies and digitally enabled business models are transforming the business landscape and the pace of change is accelerating. Leaders who are comfortable with agile processes, data analysis, artificial intelligence, and more will be more successful guiding their teams and organizations to innovate, grow, and succeed. Yet much of our workforce lacks competency in these critical areas. Leadership development is more important than ever as a business-critical tool in closing this competency gap.

Skillsoft Leadership Development Program powered by MIT Sloan Management Review (MIT SMR) brings a powerful combination of leading-edge learning resources, world-renowned thought leadership, proven instructional design, and an engaging learner experience in a single online platform. This exclusive collaboration offers visionary leadership development content that prepares leaders with the right competencies to drive performance and success in the digital era. Learners will benefit from MIT SMR authors and contributors who stand at the intersection of business and technology and are experienced at making complex ideas understandable and practical, typically only for the MIT community or MIT SMR subscribers.

This learning content is turbo-charged when delivered on the award-winning learning experience platform Percipio. Percipio allows learners to take advantage of a beautifully designed, consumer grade environment that offers the choice of where, when, and how to learn with the accompanying mobile app. Percipio accelerates learning with the latest tech tools like voice commands, personalization, and playlists that results in a compelling experience that keeps learners connected and coming back for more.
