Plaintiffs sanctioned in PCB lawsuit

Court's ruling follows 'unauthorized' caulk testing at Malibu schools

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

Sanctions have been imposed on Malibu activists in their lawsuit over the Santa Monica-Malibu school district's handling of chemical testing and cleanup at Malibu schools.

The penalties, handed down by U.S. District Court Judge Percy Anderson in a Dec. 21 hearing, added to the ongoing legal battle between the plaintiffs and the district that stems from the discovery of polychlorinated biphenyls on Malibu campuses about two years ago.

The sanctions follow unauthorized independent chemical sampling of caulk by Jennifer deNicola, the leader of America Unites for Kids, according to the court document.

The plaintiffs, America Unites and Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility, will not be allowed to use chemical samples they obtained as evidence in the lawsuit, according to the court.

The plaintiffs' "pattern of unauthorized, illegal, and wrongful testing is an outrageous abuse of the judicial process," reads the court's analysis.

America Unites has also been ordered to pay the district for repairs related to physical damage caused by deNicola's unauthorized testing. The plaintiffs and the district must file a joint report by Jan. 11 with proposals for the compensation amount.

The court also ordered the plaintiffs to pay for SMMUSD legal fees related to the district's motion for sanctions. The district has until Jan. 11 to outline those fees, although the plaintiffs can challenge the figures by Jan. 19.

The case was not dismissed altogether, but the plaintiffs and their supporters were ordered not to conduct any additional testing at Malibu schools without court approval.

Led by deNicola, Malibu activists have repeatedly criticized the school district for spending millions of dollars on consultants and legal fees.

"Why have we spent $7 million ... to avoid spending $100,000 to properly test and identify the extent of

What's next for Samohi wellness center?

Officials searching for funding sources after missing out on $100K grant

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

After failing to secure $100,000 through a regional grant program, leaders hoping to improve wellness in Santa Monica are looking for other ways to fund a holistic health center at Santa Monica High School.

Although Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District officials, City of Santa Monica staffers and other members of the Cradle to Career consortium were disappointed that they didn't win an LA2050 grant for a so-called Thrive Center at Samohi, they remain committed to providing students with mental health counseling and other support services.

"We're actively pursuing other funding," said Natasha Kingscote, an administrator in the city's Community and Cultural Services Department. "We're looking at a variety of places where we might be able to get funding. ... The $100,000 would've been great, but we still would've needed to pursue a lot of

BBB fare changes go into effect Jan. 10

BY JENNIFER MAAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

The much talked about Big Blue Bus fare adjustments will go into effect on Sunday, Jan. 10. Among the changes BBB is making are: the adjustment of the base fare cash price from $1 to $1.25, offer a new 7-day pass for $14, and reduce the prices of many passes, like the drop of a Youth 30-day pass from $40 to $28, and the reduction of a regular 30-day pass from $60 to $50. Senior, disabled and medicare cash fares, including the $0.50 reduced base cash fare, and all other reduced rate pass prices will remain the same. For the full list of fare details, visit BigBlueBus.com/fares.

Manager of planning and community engagement, Suja Lowenthal, said that BBB has done its best to make the public aware of the implementation of the new fare structure, which was approved in October by City Council.

"Our fares have been at this same rate since 2010 and we wanna be sure that our customers had as

You Are What You Paint

I FIRST MET FELLOW OCEAN PARK RESIDENT, Bruno Marcotulli, at the Ocean View tennis courts twenty years ago. I worked for the city checking in players. I remember it because I'm somewhat short at 5' 8 1/2" (on a good day) and Bruno is somewhat tall at 6'4".

I also remember our meeting because Bruno's playing partner and girlfriend was highly attractive. Two decades later, Bruno's current girlfriend, Kelly, is also highly attractive and they're getting married in June. At 57, this will be Bruno's 1st marriage. "I'm glad I waited until Kelly arrived," Bruno says proudly. (And smartly.)

Among Bruno's and my common interests, other than tennis and Sanskrit (joking) was basketball. Bruno played on his Hollywood High varsity team for all three years and ultimately got a scholarship to play Division I at Loyola Marymount University.

As an actor, Bruno has been in many commercials, including a United Airlines spot in which he played Bigfoot. In a Dimetapp Cold Medicine commercial he played a guy carrying a giant suitcase and suffering from a giant cold. ("Nobody does "a cold" better than I do," says Bruno, sounding like Dustin Hoffman in "Tootsie".)

Bruno's TV credits include his role in the controversial documentary series on FX, "Black.White." Bruno was brilliantly made up to look black so he could experience how his interactions might change now appearing to the world as an African-American.

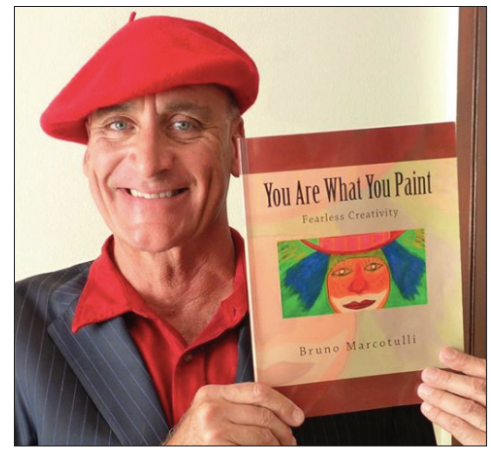

On HBO, Bruno was in the comedy series "Encyclopedia Brown" about a 10-year-old genius who helps fight crime in his small town. With deft comic skill, Bruno played the bumbling but sweet Police Chief Brown who frequently took a pratfall. (And who apparently didn't have a first name.)

Bruno's also appeared in numerous movies including: "Spy Hard," "Moon in Scorpio" and "One Tough Bastard" as well as other TV shows such as "Bay Watch," "MacGyver," "Murder She Wrote," "Dragnet," "Jag," "Dallas" and "V.I.P." in which he played Paul the nudist. (Which he insists was not typecasting.)

Locally, Bruno has been in numerous Shakespeare productions , at the Miles Memorial Playhouse in Reed Park, including "A Mid Summer Night's Dream" and "Macbeth." In April he'll be performing in "As You Like It."

For many years, Bruno was a beloved grade school substitute teacher on the Westside. But, back in 2007, Bruno began, "An adventure with paint which took [him] on a journey of self-discovery [he] had no way of anticipating.".

Bruno's written a book about this journey, "You Are What You Paint: Fearless Creativity." (Since I'm such a procrastinator, maybe I should do a book, "You Are What You Write at the Last Minute.")

MARCOTULLI

Bruno's book includes 24 original brightly colored, clown-themed paintings which reflect his personality and views on life. As Henry Ward Beecher (brother of Harriet) put it, "Every artist dips his brush in his own soul, and paints his own nature into his pictures."

Each painting includes humorous commentary in which Bruno dispels the notion that only those who have studied art can enjoy creating it. "If you create art, you're an artist. I believe we all have something to say and the ability to express it."

Bruno's journey coincided with a burgeoning movement of would-be artists exploring and expressing their own talents. Of late, I've even noticed commercials on TV for "adult coloring books," which seem to have become the rage.

The Paint Lab, a walk-in art studio on 14th Street is a perfect example of this growing trend of amateur artists with their inspiring logo "Experience, Express, Explore." They offer kids, teens, adults and senior classes and provide all the art supplies necessary.

In his book, Bruno names each of his paintings. The titles include "Egg Head," the "Power of Flowers" and "Love Flows," a humorous salute to Vincent Van Gogh.

The last painting in Bruno's book is titled "God," an homage to what Bruno describes as "the creative power of the universe," which he believes flows through us all. It's also an encouragement to others, as he puts it, "To feel free to express themselves artistically, without the fear of making mistakes. There are no mistakes in art."

There's actually nothing more that Bruno would like than to encourage others to tap into their artistic selves. I suppose he'd also like you to check out his book.

"You Are What You Paint: Fearless Creativity" is available on Amazon. Bruno's email is: Bruno.youarewhatyoupaint@gmail.com. The Paint Lab is at 1453 14th St. and their website is www.paintlab.net. JACK is at jnsmdp@aol.com.

Don't repeal Obamacare, replace it

Editor:

We need a system of guaranteed healthcare where we replace premiums with taxes and everyone has insurance and there's never any possibility of bankruptcy due to healthcare needs.

Under such a system out-of-pocket costs will be non-existent, we won't have out-of-network costs because there will be a single network, and we will have the ability to control costs without shifting the cost to the individual. We can't do that under the current system. But we will be able to can do that under improved Medicare-for-All.

other funding opportunities. Unfortunately, that doesn't go real far."

Kingscote said officials have been collaborating with the L.A. Trust for Children's Health, a nonprofit that promotes student wellbeing, about possible avenues for bringing a wellness center to Santa Monica's flagship school.

But although the concept for a wellness center at Samohi is moving forward, it remains unclear exactly how it will manifest on campus. Some of the services that would be offered through the Thrive Center are already available to students, while others would require additional funding.

The scope of the project hinges in part on the availability of space on the Samohi campus, an ongoing dilemma as school and district officials develop a long-term master development plan.

"There are services available, but nowhere near at the level we'd like it to be at," Kingscote said. "There's no special designated space. That's a school district issue if they want to indeed dedicate a building or room to these services. It's really a long process to plan out and figure out how to fund."

According to SMMUSD spokeswoman Gail Pinsker, district managers, Samohi administrators, facilities managers, nursing staff and a recently hired mental health counselor, as well as representatives from Venice Family Clinic, have been touring other schools with wellness centers to get ideas for the local project.

"We are early in a very long process that will include discussions regarding future funding sources and grants," she said.

A wellness center fits into the Cradle to Career goals of improving mental health, expanding support services and preparing students for college and beyond.

As officials secure more funding, Kingscote said, more services can be phased into existing spaces. Additional money, for example, could support a healthcare provider for more hours, she said. She added that she hopes to have a clearer update on the Thrive Center's progress by the end of the school year.

Public voting for the LA2050 grants, which are funded by the Goldhirsh Foundation, wrapped up Nov. 3. The winners in several different categories were announced last month.

The top vote-getter in the Thrive Center's category was Heal the Bay, a Santa Monica-based environmental advocacy group. The organization is partnering with Pacoima Beautiful and the Pacific American Volunteer Association to launch a multilingual conservation project to improve Southern California residents' understanding of water challenges.

In the same category, an LA2050 panel awarded a grant to Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America. The group will use the money to support veterans and their families as they transition to civilian life.

Although the Thrive Center wasn't one of the LA2050 winners, Kingscote said it gained exposure through the grant program.

"The voting component of LA2050 really helped us put the word out to the community that this is something that Cradle to Career has been working on, and it's a priority based on the data that we've seen," she said. "These wellness centers are a great model throughout the state and country, and we don't want to lag behind any further."

much advance notice as possible," Lowenthal said. "We presented to the public during a community hearing what the proposal was before it went to the council. And have been really putting out as much information as possible across media types. We want to capture as many people's attention as possible."

However, Lowenthal said that even if you post something at a bus stop that is in a different color than anything else that has been posted there, people still may not notice it.

"So we've tried to communicate through prints, through social media, with the above head messages that you'll see on the bus. We have the onboard announcements that have been playing. We think with all of these points of contact, one of them will grab someone's attention."

While the fare rates may not have changed over the past five years, BBB has implemented other changes, such as NextBus, TAP card system and 3-position bike racks.

In addition to the fare changes, BBB will be adding 11-percent more service over the next 12 months as part of the Evolution of Blue campaign to provide connections to the upcoming Expo Light Rail Line. The additional operating revenue is meant to ensure a balanced operating budget.

According to a BBB press release, a major objective for BBB in 2016 is to speed up bus boarding and improve travel speed.

"Reducing pass prices will increase the attractiveness of pass use, improving the speed of boarding and subsequent travel times. This offers the combined benefit of reducing the cost of operating the routes and getting customers to their destinations more quickly," the press release states.

When the changes take effect, regular fares will be $1.25 per ride on all routes, plus a $1.25 surcharge on the Rapid 10 Express to Downtown Los Angeles. Regular priced day-passes that allow unlimited rides in a calendar day will remain at $4 and will require an upgrade fee of $1.25 on the Rapid 10.

All passes are available on TAP cards and can be purchased online at taptogo.net, as well as at BBB's Transit Store and other locations in Santa Monica.

contamination that would cost an estimated $1-$2 million to remove?" reads last month's open letter from deNicola's organization to the local Board of Education. "It has been two very long, emotionally and physically injurious, and stressful years for parents, students and teachers in Malibu. We are obviously no giving up or going away."

In March, America Unites and PEER filed a lawsuit against Superintendent Sandra Lyon, chief financial officer Jan Maez and all seven school board members over the district's handling of chemical testing and cleanup at Malibu schools.

About two months later, the judge denied a request by SMMUSD officials to dismiss the suit.

By October, the district was seeking criminal vandalism charges against deNicola after she collected independent caulk samples and provided the district with additional PCB testing results. The alleged crimes were reported to the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

School board members Craig Foster and Oscar de la Torre sent emails to Lyon criticizing the district's pursuit of criminal charges.

"Such action will only exacerbate the tensions between the district and those who believe deeply that the district has chosen a wrong, unsafe course regarding PCBs," Foster wrote.

In November, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office formally declined to file criminal charges. Around that time, the district pursued the aforementioned sanctions.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON DECEMBER 31, 2015

Patrol officers assigned to the downtown area were stopped along the curb on Ocean Avenue facing the intersection with Colorado Avenue, monitoring traffic at that location. At about 7:59 p.m., the officers were alerted by the Automated License Plate reader in their vehicle that a stolen Hyundai Accent had just driven past them northbound on Ocean Avenue. The officers located the vehicle and followed it for several minutes while they verified it had been reported stolen, and also to wait for additional officers to arrive. The officers stopped the car in the 2500 block of Neilson Way and detained the driver (suspect Jurnell Davis), front passenger (suspect Constance Harris), and additional adult passenger, and two small children. During the investigation, Davis provided a false name to the officers. Harris rented the vehicle on Dec. 6 and was supposed to return it by the 21st. The vehicle was reported stolen three days later when Harris failed to bring the car back to the rental agency. Davis was arrested for providing a false name to the officers and Harris for vehicle theft. Both were transported to the station for booking. Harris, 28, of Los Angeles, had bail set at $35,000. Davis, 25, of Los Angeles, had bail set at $5,000.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Road to Nowhere: The "Bridge to Nowhere" played an outsize role in politics a decade ago as an example of uncontrolled government spending (before Congress killed it). (Ketchikan, Alaska, planned a sleek international airport on nearby, uninhabited Gravina Island, but needed a sleek $450 million bridge to get there.) These days, reported Alaska Dispatch News in November, the original 3.2-mile, $28 million access road on Gravina Island, built to access the bridge, now just ends in a "scrub forest." One optimistic state official said the road gets "more use all the time" -- boaters come for "hunting and fishing, berry picking, things like that. It's actually a nice road." [Alaska Dispatch News, 11-16-2015]

■ A prison guard is "the greatest entry-level job in California," according to an April (2011) Wall Street Journal report highlighting its benefits over those of a typical job resulting from a Harvard University education. Starting pay is comparable; loans are not necessary (since the guard "academy" actually pays the student); and vacation time is more generous (seven weeks, five paid). One downside: The prison system is more selective: While Harvard accepts 6.2 percent of applicants, the guard service takes fewer than 1 percent of its 120,000 applicants). [Wall Street Journal, 4-30-2011]

Let off some steam, Virgo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Emphasize work and those in charge. You might feel a bit like a kid, as you'll need to answer to others. Say yes, because there's really no alternative. Pull back some. Be willing to assess these situations and make a decision accordingly. Tonight: A must appearance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Reach out to someone who can help you sort through a situation. Not only is this person's viewpoint very different, but his or her way of handling a problem is as well. If you are comfortable with this new perspective, try to work with it. Tonight: Try a new spot.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Deal with someone directly, and you will get better results. The ball might not be in your court, but there is no reason to think that you can't deal with what is happening. You'll come through at the last minute because you can discipline your mind. Tonight: Do the unusual.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You understand feeling out of control, as you experience frequent mood changes. You will discover how important it is to change directions and move past a self-imposed restriction. Someone else demands control, so let him or her have it. Tonight: Go along for the ride.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You could be in the middle of a controversy and wish you weren't. Go about your business, and refuse to get involved in an overassertive conversation. Passions run high, even at home. Maintain a sense of humor, smile and allow others to let off steam. Tonight: Call it early.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Communication remains off when dealing with a child or family member. Try as you may, this person can't seem to understand your message. Resist judging him or her. Give up being so critical, and try to walk in this person's shoes. Tonight: Let off some steam.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Tension is high, and you might misread someone's gesture. You can't be sure enough of yourself right now. Try not to take any statement or misunderstanding personally. Get to the bottom of a problem through a non-defensive approach. Tonight: Play it easy, but curb spending.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You will pound on someone's door in attempt to get his or her attention. When you want contact, you won't rest until you have it. Your ability to come to terms with a problem needs to emerge. Consider pulling back some. Tonight: Hang out with a friend or loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Balance your checkbook before you walk out the door. You need that security more than you realize. Someone might make an offer, which, for some reason, could anger you. Rather than respond quickly, pull back and think. Tonight: Treat a friend to dinner and a movie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You might feel unusually energized, as the New Moon is in your sign. You radiate a certain amount of magic, which attracts others. Avoid a quarrel by using your magnetism. Do not underestimate your people skills. Tonight: Wherever you are is where others want to be.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might feel burdened, tired or simply not in the mood to hear a lot of comments and demands coming from others. If you can take the day off from the constant grind, you will be able to recharge your batteries. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Keep in mind your expectations and where you are heading. You can do only so much, but today you have a better chance of achieving more of what you desire. Keep that fact in mind, even if you get into a squabble with someone at a distance. Tonight: Where the crowds are.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you often have a tendency to be a little depressed. Honor a need to withdraw. A friend might encourage you to act on various goals or issues. This person could be very upset if you do not follow through. This friendship can be too volatile for you at times; take some much-needed space if need be. If you are single, you meet someone who might be slow to commit, but who probably is your soulmate. If you are attached, the two of you frequently can be found partying together. You could be put off by the fact that your sweetie doesn't always take your commitment to a particular goal seriously. CAPRICORN understands you well.
