Bank of America grants $1 million for Pacific Palisades YMCA reconstruction

GRANT: The facility burned in last year's fires but is being rebuilt thanks to donations.

Bank of America has committed $1 million to rebuild the Lowe Family YMCA serving the Palisades-Malibu community, which was destroyed in the Los Angeles wildfires one year ago. The grant marks the first and largest corporate contribution to the YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles' $25 million capital campaign launched last summer. The organization plans to break ground this spring on two new resilient campuses to replace the burned Via de la Paz facility. "As we mark the first anniversary of the devastating fires, we also celebrate the incredible progress of the YMCA's efforts to rebuild

LA County declares January 2026 human trafficking prevention month

MAAZ ALIN
SMDP Staff Writer

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved proclamations Tuesday declaring January 2026 as Human Trafficking Prevention Month, reaffirming the county's commitment to combating trafficking and supporting survivors.

The board approved separate but complementary motions from Chair and First District Supervisor Hilda L. Solis and from Supervisors Janice Hahn and Lindsey P. Horvath, both emphasizing a shift toward survivor-centered, trauma-informed services.

"Human trafficking is a serious violation of human rights that affects workers, children and families in communities across Los Angeles County, often out of sight and without victims knowing where to turn for help," Solis said. "This proclamation is about more than awareness. It is about strengthening prevention, improving coordination across County agencies and making sure survivors can access culturally competent, trauma-informed services that put their safety and dignity first."

The proclamations recognize National Human Trafficking Prevention Month, first established

City Hall scrambles to fix housing votes as new questions emerge over councilmember conflicts

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Officials are racing to ratify a series of housing-related votes from 2025 after state regulators determined Councilmember Jesse Zwick was conflicted on those decisions, while newly filed complaints allege other council members may have also violated ethics rules on a separate housing deal.

The City Council will consider ratifying several housing production votes taken between August and September 2025 at its Jan. 13 meeting, following a December ruling by the California Fair Political Practices Commission that Zwick must recuse himself from such matters due to his employment with the Housing Action Coalition.

The ratification effort comes as residents have filed a formal complaint with the interim city

Sluggish hiring closes out a frustrating year for job seekers though unemployment slips to 4.4%

Sluggish December hiring concluded a year of weak employment gains that have frustrated job seekers even though layoffs and unemployment remained low.

Employers added just 50,000 jobs last month, nearly unchanged from a downwardly revised figure of 56,000 in November, the Labor Department said Friday. The unemployment rate slipped to 4.4%, its first decline since June, from 4.5% in November, a figure also revised lower.

The data suggests a reluctance by businesses to add workers even as economic growth has picked up. Many companies hired aggressively after the pandemic and no longer need to fill more jobs. Others have held back due to widespread uncertainty caused by President Donald Trump's shifting tariff policies, elevated inflation, and the spread of artificial intelligence, which could alter or even replace some jobs.

Still, economists were encouraged by the lower unemployment rate, which had risen in the previous four straight reports. Weakening employment raised alarms at the Federal Reserve, which cut its key interest rate three times last year.

"The labor market looks to have stabilized, but at a slower pace of employment growth," Blerina Uruci, chief economist at T. Rowe Price, said. "There is no urgency for the Fed to cut rates further, for now."

Some Federal Reserve officials are concerned that inflation hasn't improved since 2024 and remains above their target of 2% annual growth. They support keeping rates where they are to combat inflation. Others, however, have grown worried that hiring has nearly ground to a halt and have supported lowering borrowing costs to spur spending and growth.

November's job gain was revised slightly lower, from 64,000 to 56,000, while October's now shows a much steeper drop, with a loss of 173,000 positions, down from previous estimates of a 105,000 decline. The government revises the jobs figures as it receives more survey responses from businesses.

Nearly all the jobs added in December were in the health care and restaurant and hotel industries. Health care added 38,500 jobs, while restaurants and hotels gained 47,000. Governments — mostly at the state and local level — added 13,000.

Manufacturing, construction and retail companies all shed jobs. Retailers cut 25,000 positions, a sign that holiday hiring has been weaker than previous years. Manufacturers have shed jobs every month since April, when Trump announced sweeping tariffs intended to boost manufacturing.

Wall Street and Washington are looking closely at Friday's report as it's the first clean reading on the labor market in three months. The government didn't issue a report in October because of the six-week government shutdown, and November's data was distorted by the closure, which lasted until Nov. 12.

Job gains have been subdued all year, particularly after April's "liberation day" tariff announcement by Trump. The economy gained just 584,000 jobs in 2025, sharply lower than that more than 2 million added in 2024. It's the smallest annual gain since the COVID-19 pandemic decimated the job market in 2020. Outside of recessions, it's the smallest annual increase since 2003.

Still, Trump boasted on social media late Thursday that since January, all the new jobs have been in the private sector, while government jobs have declined. Yet his figures included December's jobs numbers as well as revisions to previous months, which the White House receives Thursday afternoon, before the figures are publicly released.

Trump's post on Truth Social said that 654,000 jobs were added by businesses since January, while government jobs declined 181,000, so it wouldn't have been immediately clear that the post had new information from December. But new jobs data are generally closely guarded since they can move financial markets.

The hiring slowdown reflects more than just a reluctance by companies to add jobs. With an aging population and a sharp drop in immigration, the economy doesn't need to create as many jobs as it has in the past to keep the unemployment rate steady. As a result, a gain of 50,000 jobs is not as clear a sign of weakness as it would have been in previous years.

And layoffs are still low, a sign firms aren't rapidly cutting jobs, as typically happens in a

NEWSOM: Gov. Gavin Newsom speaks during the State of the State address in the Assembly chamber at the state Capitol in Sacramento on Jan. 8, 2026.

California’s constitution requires the governor to “report to the Legislature each calendar year on the condition of the state and may make recommendations.” For the past seven years, Gavin Newsom has reluctantly and minimally honored that command, usually eschewing the traditional January address to a joint legislative session in the Capitol.

But today, entering the final year of his governorship, he delivered a 64-minute, no-script paean to legislators that catalogued his achievements and portrayed the state as a model for the world, while interspersing harsh criticism of President Donald Trump as an autocrat who is undermining democracy.

Thus it was not only a celebratory swan song but a platform of sorts for Newsom’s all-but-certain campaign to succeed Trump in 2028 — implying that a prosperous, inclusive and generous California could become a model for the nation should he occupy the White House.

Newsom only mentioned Trump by name twice, once while denouncing cutbacks in federal child care funds and near the end, excoriating his refusal to send billions of dollars in relief for the deadly wildfires that swept through Los Angeles County exactly a year ago.

Newsom termed it “a complete failure to act” and added, “It’s time for the president of the United States to act like the president of the United States.”

During the speech, Newsom also dropped a few hints about what he wants to happen during his final year as governor — particularly about putting the state’s finances in order. Ever since Newsom erroneously proclaimed in 2022 that the state had a $97.5 billion surplus and he and the Legislature ramped up spending, the budget has been plagued with multibillion-dollar deficits that have been papered over with accounting gimmicks, off-the-books loans and transfers from emergency reserves.

The Legislature’s budget advisor, Gabe Petek, has projected another $18 billion deficit for 2026-27, perhaps growing to $35 billion thereafter.

Newsom told legislators that his proposed budget, which will be unveiled

Santa Monica Appoints Aileen Reynolds as Housing, Human Services Director

The City of Santa Monica has appointed Aileen Reynolds as the next director of the Housing and Human Services Department.

Reynolds brings more than a decade of experience in affordable housing and housing policy. Most recently, she served as assistant commissioner of housing opportunity at the New York City Department of Housing Preservation and Development, where she oversaw a team of more than 75 employees dedicated to placing vulnerable New Yorkers into stable, secure housing. Under her leadership, the department achieved record-breaking outcomes, securing housing for more than 43,000 households.

Reynolds replaces outgoing director Heather Averick, who will remain with the city in a part-time role working on special projects in the City Manager’s Office.

“Aileen rose to the top of a highly competitive national recruitment because she brings exceptional technical expertise paired with a deeply values-driven approach to leadership,” City Manager Oliver Chi said. “She is a proven builder of systems that expand housing access, and just as importantly, she leads with an authentic humility.”

Reynolds began her housing career as a project coordinator for a 500-plus-unit affordable housing development in the Bronx and has worked across multiple facets of affordable housing, including property management, housing marketing, and the development of equitable housing access policy. Her prior professional experience includes roles with the New York City Housing Development Corporation, Richman Property Services, and the Fordham Bedford Housing Corporation. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Fordham University.

As Santa Monica’s director of housing and human services, Reynolds will oversee the Santa Monica Housing Authority and lead efforts to expand affordable housing opportunities citywide. Her responsibilities will also include directing programs, services, and funding for the city’s Human Services Grants Program, as well as continuing implementation of the city’s Homelessness Strategic Plan.

In addition, Reynolds will help lead execution of various elements of the city’s Realignment Plan. This work will include partnering across departments to implement a vacant property registry and rent registry, advancing the city’s Housing Element goals with a renewed focus on the Downtown core, and overseeing the replacement of the SAMOSHEL homeless shelter with a new housing-first system of care.

“I am thrilled to be joining the City of Santa Monica during this important period of realignment and revitalization,” Reynolds said. “I look forward to working alongside the Housing and Human Services team and our citywide partners to advance programs and policies that serve the community with compassion and effectiveness.”

Reynolds will join the city effective Jan. 12, with an annual salary of $258,756.

Caltrans Announces Week of Lane Closures on State Route 2

Overnight lane closures and 24-hour parking restrictions will affect portions of State Route 2 in West Los Angeles and Echo Park from Jan. 12 to 18 as part of a multimodal infrastructure project.

Construction work for curb, gutter and sidewalk improvements will occur from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. nightly, with parking restrictions remaining in effect around the clock.

In West Los Angeles, up to one lane in each direction of Santa Monica Boulevard between Wellesley Avenue and Brockton Avenue will close during overnight hours. No parking will be allowed in either direction along that stretch. Additional restrictions include no parking and no sidewalk access from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday along eastbound Santa Monica Boulevard at Wellesley Avenue for gas line relocation, with pedestrian detours available. Big Blue Bus stops on Wellesley Avenue will temporarily close, with service available at Centinela Avenue or Bundy Drive stops.

In Echo Park, up to two lanes in each direction of Alvarado Street between Sunset Boulevard and Montana Street will close overnight, with one-lane closures continuing from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. No parking will be allowed in either direction from Montrose Street to Montana Street. The LA Metro bus stop at southbound Alvarado and Montana will close temporarily, with alternative stops available at U.S. 101 and Alvarado Street or Sunset Boulevard and Alvarado Street.

Business driveways will remain accessible during construction. Signs will be posted in advance of parking restrictions.

The $70.2 million project spans SR-2 from Centinela Avenue in Santa Monica to the SR-2 terminus in Echo Park, covering three segments totaling five miles. Once complete, the project will extend pavement life and enhance safety along multiple segments.

The schedule is subject to change due to weather or operational reasons. For current road conditions, visit <https://quickmap.dot.ca.gov/>. For project information, visit the project website at <https://dot.ca.gov/caltrans-near-me/district-7/district-7-projects>.

its destroyed Via de la Paz site and a nearby campus,” said Raul Anaya, Bank of America president for Greater Los Angeles. “The wildfires destroyed so much – thousands of homes, businesses and communities – but it never destroyed L.A.’s spirit.”

The new facilities will include the original Via de la Paz site and the nearby Simon Meadow site. The dual campus will expand programming for youth development, mental health services, emergency preparedness and multigenerational engagement, bringing additional services for working families and seniors.

Victor Dominguez, president and CEO of the YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles, emphasized the importance of corporate partnerships in the rebuilding process.

“Our corporate partners are critical to engaging our full communities in the rebuilding process,” Dominguez said. “We will continue to help Palisades rebuild not just the buildings, but the community and connections that make it so special.”

The Lowe Family YMCA has served the Palisades and Malibu area for more than 60 years. Following the fires, the YMCA of Metropolitan Los Angeles mobilized through nearby centers and partner sites to deliver emergency childcare, case management and trauma-informed care to thousands of displaced residents. These services continue today.

In recognition of the bank’s donation, the new Community Room at the Palisades Via De La Paz club will bear Bank of America’s name.

in 2010, and acknowledge the continued prevalence of both labor and sex trafficking throughout the county. Trafficking often remains hidden due to fear, coercion, language barriers and limited public awareness, according to county officials.

Hahn emphasized the county’s evolving approach to addressing human trafficking. “I’m proud that LA County continues to be a national leader in how we address human trafficking and exploitation by shifting away from law enforcement responses and punishment for those being trafficked, and instead toward recognizing the deep trauma survivors face and molding our approach to meet their needs,” she said.

Horvath echoed the commitment to a public health framework. “In Los Angeles County, we are committed to a public health approach to addressing human trafficking by strengthening prevention efforts, supporting survivors, and addressing the conditions that increase vulnerability,” she said.

Several county departments play roles in prevention and response, including the Departments of Children and Family Services and Public Health, the Sheriff’s Department and the District Attorney’s Office. The Office of Labor Equity conducts outreach and education to help workers recognize signs of exploitation and connect with available resources.

Chancee Martorell, founder and executive director of the Thai Community Development Center, praised the proclamation while noting the ongoing nature of the challenge. “The terror of modern-day slavery is not limited to one month out of the year. Tackling this issue requires long-term persistence, funding, awareness, and healing,” Martorell said.

Solis noted that increased awareness and prevention efforts are especially critical as Los Angeles prepares to host major international events, including the 2026 FIFA World Cup and the 2028 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The proclamations build on previous board actions aimed at strengthening countywide responses, including efforts to assess service gaps, improve coordination among departments and enhance data-sharing strategies to better identify and assist victims.

The motions call for year-round promotion of the Office of Labor Equity’s public awareness campaign and available county and non-county survivor-centered services, recognizing that addressing human trafficking requires sustained effort beyond a single month of recognition.

attorney alleging that Zwick and two other council members — Mayor Caroline Torosis and Councilmember Natalya Zernitskaya — violated conflict-of-interest and ethics laws when they voted Dec. 17, 2024, to approve development agreements with Hollywood Community Housing Corporation.

“If Councilmember Zwick’s housing votes require ratification due to employment-related conflicts, then votes affected by undisclosed ex parte communications, campaign contributions from direct beneficiaries and professional conflicts warrant equivalent scrutiny,” the residents wrote in their Jan. 8 complaint.

The FPPC ruled Dec. 8 that Zwick is disqualified from participating in certain City Council decisions related to housing production under the commission’s interpretation of the Political Reform Act and its “nexus test.” The commission determined that while neither Zwick nor the Housing Action Coalition’s financial interest in Santa Monica housing decisions met traditional criteria for materiality, city housing production decisions could benefit the advocacy organization.

Zwick accepted employment with the Housing Action Coalition on Aug. 18, 2025, and began work Sept. 8. Before accepting the position, he consulted with the City Attorney’s Office and said he took steps to avoid conflicts, including ensuring Santa Monica was excluded from his professional portfolio and confirming the organization would cease advocacy activities in the city.

The city stated Zwick “acted transparently, ethically and in good faith” throughout the matter. The FPPC’s advice is forward-looking only and did not find that Zwick acted improperly, violated the law or failed to disclose his employment.

However, city staff now recommends the council revote on several housing-related actions taken between Aug. 12 and Sept. 30, 2025, “out of an abundance of caution” to remove doubt about those prior decisions.

The votes up for ratification include an Aug. 12 resolution directing the Planning Commission to initiate zoning amendments related to small lot subdivisions and duplexes, which passed 6-1 with Zwick seconding the motion; Sept. 9 approval of regulatory updates to high-rise building definitions and single-stairway provisions, which passed 6-1; and Sept. 30 adoption of the 2025 California Building Standards Code, which passed unanimously.

Staff also recommends repealing an emergency interim zoning ordinance adopted July 29, 2025, that permitted accessory dwelling units as part of certain projects. No projects have been submitted under those provisions.

Torosis said the city received formal guidance from the Fair Political Practices Commission on four specific housing-related matters involving Zwick and staff have conducted a review.

“Based on that review, staff identified the full universe of housing-related items that could potentially fall within that identified period of time, and those items are being brought back to the City Council on January 13 for reconsideration and revote,” she said.

“I would also emphasize that the FPPC’s advice is prospective and did not identify any violations related to past actions. The steps the City is taking are precautionary, and are intended to provide clarity, transparency, and finality. Of course, we will also continue to evaluate any additional concerns raised by the public consistent with applicable legal standards and established procedures.”

The new complaint alleges additional ethical violations related to a December 2024 Hollywood Community Housing Corporation vote, which committed public land for 99 years and approximately $13.5 million in Housing Trust Fund resources.

According to California Public Records Act responses included in the complaint, Zwick sent private emails to HCHC Executive Director Sarah Letts during active council proceedings. On June 25, 2024, while residents provided public comment opposing the project, Zwick emailed Letts from the dais stating that “30 mid-city neighbors are angrily denouncing the project and possessed with a lot of misinformation.”

On Aug. 27, 2024, during an evening council meeting, Zwick asked Letts privately, “Is this the course of action you want to pursue, or would you prefer to stick to the original proposal?” Letts replied, “We are now fully behind this alternate proposal.”

The residents argue these communications violated due process requirements for quasi-judicial proceedings, which prohibit ex parte communications unless disclosed on the record.

The complaint also alleges Mayor Torosis has an undisclosed professional conflict through her employment as senior policy director for Los Angeles County Supervisor Holly J. Mitchell. HCHC’s website identifies Mitchell’s office as the government partner for multiple developments, and Torosis made no disclosure of any relationship with HCHC before moving to approve the Dec. 17 agreement, which Zwick seconded.

During the December meeting, Torosis remarked to Letts that she had “heard great things about you,” indicating prior familiarity, according to the complaint.

Additionally, residents allege Zernitskaya violated the Levine Act by voting on the HCHC agreement less than 12 months after receiving $400 in campaign contributions from John Maceri, CEO of The People Concern, which the staff report identifies as HCHC’s designated supportive services provider.

Government Code Section 84308 prohibits officials from participating in proceedings involving parties who contributed more than $250 within the preceding 12 months.

The complaint requests the city attorney investigate all three allegations, determine whether votes were legally compromised and, if violations are confirmed, declare the approval void and require a new vote with conflicted members recused.

The complaint also requests that the HCHC vote be added to the list of ratifications alongside other housing-related actions affected by Zwick’s conflict.

JOB

recession. The “low-hire, low-fire” job market does mean workers have some job security, though it’s become harder to find new work. Ernesto Castro, 44, has applied for hundreds of jobs since leaving his last in May. Yet the Los Angeles resident has had just three initial interviews, and only one follow-up, after which he heard nothing. With nearly a decade of experience providing customer support for software companies, Castro expected to find a new job pretty quickly as in the past. “It’s been awful,” he said. He worries that more companies are turning to artificial intelligence to help clients learn to use new software. He hears ads from tech companies that urge companies to slash workers like him in favor of AI. His contacts in the industry say that employees are increasingly reluctant to switch jobs amid all the uncertainty, which means fewer open jobs for others. He is now looking into starting his own software company, and is also exploring project management roles. Subdued hiring underscores a key conundrum surrounding the economy as it enters 2026: Growth has picked up to healthy levels, yet hiring has weakened noticeably. Most economists expect hiring will accelerate this year amid solid growth, and Trump’s tax cut legislation is expected to produce large tax refunds this spring. Yet economists acknowledge there are other possibilities: Weak job gains could drag down future growth. Or the economy could keep expanding at a healthy clip, while automation and the spread of artificial intelligence reduces the need for more jobs. Productivity, or output per hour worked, a measure of worker efficiency, has improved in the past three years and jumped nearly 5% in the July-September quarter. That means companies can produce more without adding jobs. Over time, it should also boost worker pay. Even with such sluggish job gains, the economy has continued to expand, with growth reaching a 4.3% annual rate in last year’s July-September quarter, the best in two years. Strong consumer spending helped drive the gain. The Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta forecasts that growth could slow to a still-solid 2.7% in the final three months of last year.

Friday, anticipates an additional $42.3 billion in revenues, based on recent increases in tax payments. It will, he said, close the gap and provide money to restore reserves, pay down the state’s pension debt and finance increases in some programs, including a jump in education support. The $42.3 billion is expected over three years, a spokesman from his finance department later clarified. Were the Legislature to embrace Newsom’s rosy fiscal scenario, it would allow him to end his governorship a year hence with a budget that, at least on paper, would be in the black. However, recent history implies that Newsom’s projected revenue windfall should be viewed with skepticism. His Department of Finance quietly acknowledged later that his 2022 claim of a $97.5 billion surplus was based on a $165 billion overstatement of revenues over four years. All in all, it was arguably the most cogent address that Newsom has delivered as governor, even if it ignored, downplayed or rationalized some of California’s most vexing issues, such as the nation’s highest rates of homelessness, unemployment, poverty and living costs, not to mention the budget deficit. It was clearly aimed, Newsom suggested, at refuting a “California derangement syndrome” that sees the state as a hellhole of crime and squalor, with taxes and regulations that suffocate business and drive people to other states. It’s a clever play on the “Trump derangement syndrome” that those on the political right often tout. Wordplay notwithstanding, if and when Newsom makes his presidential ambitions official his most daunting factor will be simply that he’s from California. Reality lies somewhere between the exalted view of California that Newsom peddles, claiming “we simply have no peer,” and the dystopian image that dominates right wing media.

Someone once observed that truth is the first casualty of war. By the same token, reality only rarely drives political campaigns.

SOLUTIONS TO YESTERDAY'S WORDS PUZZLE.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 12)

This is your Year of Code Cracking in which you figure out the problems that once perplexed you. Mysteries get solved, tests are passed, closed doors swing open, and suddenly you're in the realm you were aiming for. How? You listen well and you're persistent. You keep trying things until the puzzle comes together. More highlights: three financial bonuses, hot tickets with fun people and family coming together for fortifying causes. Aries and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 33, 29, 1 and 10.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). No need to stare into the mist and wait for answers to materialize because you already see the future you want, and it's crystal clear. Making it real will involve many steps, and the first one can start anywhere. Pick a step, any step, and then watch what happens next.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You're so good at planning right now, why stop at designing your own experience? Other people would gladly pay you for a winning plan. Your true genius is in tailoring the blueprint to the resources available.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Instead of counting the number of tasks on your list today, count the number on someone else's list. Thinking about the duties or the leisure of others will give you the perspective that helps you nestle into your own groove, glad that it's yours.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Someone who gave you a treasure may now want it back. As always, you're inclined to do what is fair, not what is easy. And anyway, the best things cannot be returned even if you wanted to: time, love and the truth.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). People say there are no bad questions. Still, some questions move you forward faster than others. You'll skip the fluff and flattery and zero in on the precise details at the heart of the matter. This frees up progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You have been known to overcome physical discomfort by framing it as the price of fitness, fashion or responsibility. Similarly, you will endure a degree of injury to the ego in the name of love, harmony and emotional maturity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your habits may feel a bit boring to you today, only because familiarity has dulled your emotional response. Spending time with someone who has a completely different style will stir the energy, and you'll do the same for them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You're not meant to stick with everything you try. It's so relatable to outgrow interests, clothes and even relationships. But now it's time to focus on what you keep carrying forward year after year - the gold of your character that everyone else sees, too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Be wary of grandiosity. When the pendulum swings the other way, grandiosity turns into something else - usually absence - as a person realizes there's no way they can make good on delusion-based promises.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're brimming with creative potential today, and there are multiple ways to apply it. Decide what most needs your clever fix, your beautiful twist or your inventive hand. Then get to work, and in two hours things are already different.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're like a reporter for a highly reputable publication that thoroughly checks the facts. Every bit of information that comes your way warrants further investigation. Reserve all conclusions for the final edit.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Somehow, it is socially acceptable to feel sorry for others, why not yourself? Microdoses of self-directed pity and sympathy just acknowledge the injustice of an experience and give you a foundation to push off from.
