Vons Broadway development set to impact local business

Scott Snowden

COLLATERAL DAMAGE: Timeless Symbols will be forced to close in February.

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

As the Vons superstore at 710 Broadway continues to empty its shelves, residents and local businesses based around the Lincoln Blvd and Broadway intersection brace for what could turn into significant disruption.

The 280-apartment development includes space for a new 53,500 square feet Vons superstore on the ground floor with 1,500 square feet of outdoor dining space plus an additional 34,000 square feet of retail, restaurant and fitness use. It also includes two subterranean levels to accommodate 354 vehicle parking spaces and 523 spaces for bicycles.

An approximate comparison would be the Trader Joe's at 500 Broadway, with its underground car park access on 5th Street, between Broadway and Colorado Ave. However, the existing Vons site has no underground space, so this will require extensive excavation. And this in turn will require the constant removal of unwanted material off site and the transportation of necessary construction equipment on site.

However, reactions to the impending whirlwind of construction chaos from the local businesses surrounding the site are, for the most part, cautiously optimistic.

"It's probably going to be pretty difficult in terms of having all that construction and nobody wants to be living amongst construction

Muir/SMASH project to now include structural upgrades

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

While the announcement last week that the reopening of the John Muir Elementary and Santa Monica Alternative School House campus will be delayed by up to a year came as a disappointment to students and parents eager to return, Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District (SMMUSD) officials say it is for good reason.

"We have decided to incorporate a full structural upgrade to the current code as a part of that project," SMMUSD Deputy Bond Program Manager Kevin Klaus told the Board of Education at their Jan 19 meeting.

This means the campus's four buildings, which were built in 1995, will all be retrofitted to be in line with current structural codes, in addition to work to address the water damage that caused the campus's closure in May 2021.

Klaus said the decision to undergo

First U.S. Flagship Location for Arte Museum Coming to Macerich's Santa Monica Place

Macerich has announced that the first U.S. flagship location for global art and technology phenomenon ARTE MUSEUM is coming to Santa Monica Place.

The 48,000-square-foot immersive art destination will replace the former ArcLight Cinemas location on the open-air property's third level and is set to open in late 2023. ARTE MUSEUM is expected to draw one million visitors annually to Santa Monica Place.

"We are very pleased to welcome ARTE MUSEUM, the internationally lauded media art exhibition space, to Santa Monica Place, which also is the permanent home of Cayton Children's Museum and has hosted a number of other highly successful experiential attractions, including the first retail property location for Candytopia," said Cory Scott, Executive Vice President, Asset Management, Macerich. "The immersive, experience-driven ARTE MUSEUM is an excellent fit for Santa Monica Place and provides a terrific example of how Macerich consistently works to evolve the retail, dining and entertainment offerings in each of our markets to match consumer preferences. This new use represents the first executed lease in our planned repurposing of the former Bloomingdale's box, and we look forward to announcing details on the other uses – including high-end fitness – for the remainder of this exceptionally well-positioned space."

ARTE MUSEUM, which will also open in Las Vegas in early 2023, is planned and produced by d'strict, a world-class digital design company. ARTE MUSEUM is Korea's most popular media art exhibition space, attracting more than 3.7 million visitors in the 26 months since its debut in 2020. d'strict has left a significant legacy in the history of media art exhibitions with LIVE PARK, the world's first 4D art park that debuted in 2011 at KINTEX, Ilsan, Korea. LIVE PARK provided a journey and story through holograms, mega-sized media facade walls, 360-degree interactive theater and kinetic sculpture.

Santa Monica Early Childhood Lab School Earns LEED Platinum

The Santa Monica Early Childhood Lab School — a groundbreaking child development facility born out of a decades-long collaboration and conversation between Santa Monica College, City of Santa Monica, RAND Corporation, and the Santa Monica Early Childhood Task Force — has earned a LEED Platinum certification from the U.S. Green Building Council (USGBC). This is the preeminent, highest rating given by the USGBC to buildings that "save money, improve efficiency, lower carbon emissions, and create healthier places for people."

Designed by Los Angeles-based Carde Ten Architects, the 20,000 square foot building located in Santa Monica's Civic Center houses an innovative childcare facility operated by locally-based nonprofit Growing Place. The lab school also serves as a setting where SMC students preparing to become teachers in the early childhood development field attain practical experience and discover new approaches in working with children three months to six years of age. The lab school's construction was funded partially by SMC's 2004 voter-approved bond Measure S, and general fund monies from the City of Santa Monica. Santa Monica residents and employees have priority consideration for enrollment.

SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery called the LEED Platinum certification "a win for all of community partners who collaborated on the development the Santa Monica Early Childhood Lab School, who stand united in a commitment to sustainability and building an educational foundation that embraces and supports the diversity of the families the school serves."

Santa Monica Mayor Gleam Davis shared: "The LEED Platinum designation is another part of how the Early Childhood Lab School is a Santa Monica success story. We are educating our youngest learners and training future teachers in a space that reflects our value of environmental stewardship. Congratulations to everyone involved."

"Congratulations to Brian Ten and Carde Ten Architects for guiding the Early Childhood Lab School to this triumphant achievement!" said SMC Board Chair Barry Snell. "We are proud to have yet another facility associated with Santa Monica College recognized for being a terrific example of green building done right, and well!"

Platinum, the highest level of LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certification, requires at least 80 of the available 110 LEED points. The Santa Monica Early Childhood Lab School is a state-of-the art facility that includes a well-planned physical environment which supports the implementation of the high-quality program provided by the College's operating partner, Growing Place, the Santa Monica-based nonprofit child development program with three Santa Monica locations. Currently 71 children are enrolled at the Early Childhood Lab School, more than half of whom are Santa Monica residents, including more than 15 percent from low-income Santa Monica families.

SMC's Education and Early Childhood Department has launched classes, observation sessions, and community resources at the Early Childhood Lab School. As of Spring 2023, nine classes are being held in the SMC classrooms on the Lab School's second floor. SMC early childhood/education students are regularly observing Growing Place's outstanding teaching from the high-tech computer lab that interfaces with specialized cameras in the infant, toddler, and preschool rooms, as well as from the observation deck, and directly in the children's classrooms.

For more information on the history and collaborative purpose of the Santa Monica Early Childhood Lab School, visit smc.edu/labschool, and to enroll children/find more details on this innovative childcare facility, visit growingplace.org/lab-school.

The Fox Singers in A Serenade to Music

The 39th season of the Verdi Chorus continues with the Fox Singers, presented by the Verdi Chorus and the Sahm Family Foundation, in A Serenade To Music for one night only at the First Presbyterian Church in Santa Monica on February 25, at 7:30 p.m. Led by Founding Artistic Director Anne Marie Ketchum, the Fox Singers comprise the professional ensemble of the Verdi Chorus, which is the only choral group in Southern California that focuses primarily on the dramatic and diverse music for opera chorus. This program, celebrating classical vocal music through art songs and arias, will feature the music of Vaughan Williams, Debussy, Fauré, Copland, and sequences from Mozart's Don Giovanni, Puccini's Tosca, La rondine and more!

The Fox Singers demonstrate the mission of the Verdi Chorus to provide performance opportunities to young professional singers, and these fourteen highly promising singers, named in memory of long-time Chorus and Board member Walter Fox, not only serve as section leaders and rehearsal coaches for the Verdi Chorus, but also have opportunities to perform as featured singers in performances, and perform on occasion independently of the full Chorus. They are sopranos Tiffany Ho, Christina Kushnik, Megan McDonald, and Dina Murphy; mezzo-sopranos Alexandra Bass, Amelia DeCoster, Rachel Labovitch, and Ariana Stultz; tenors César Ballardo, Elias Berezin, and Joseph Gárate; baritone Jamie Sanderson; and basses David Peterson and Esteban Rivas.

A Serenade To Music will be presented one night only on Saturday, February 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church in Santa Monica, located at 1220 2nd Street. California's Marine Protected Areas

The problem is simple: the plants and animals in our oceans are dying. They are under attack from oil drilling, overfishing, and climate change, and we need to increase protections before it is too late. I know the phrase "before it's too late" gets thrown around a lot in relation to climate issues, but the timeline is especially important in the case of setting marine protection standards in California. Currently, only about 10% of California coastal waters are classified as marine protected areas (MPAs), and experts say these protections must be increased to 30% to protect California from environmental collapse.

Here's where the pressing timeline comes in: this March, California state agencies are making some decisions about marine protections. They are going to increase, decrease, or keep marine protection goals the same. And here's the catch: this is the last time coastal protections will be decided on for the next ten years. 10% is a long way away from 30%, so we have to demonstrate a huge wave of public support to Governor Newsom for an increase in these protections.

Here's how you can help: call, email, or send a letter to Governor Newsom's office urging him to tell state agencies to increase protections this March, take photos with posters at the beach and post them on social media tagging Governor Newsom, write letters to the editor (like this one!) about why increasing marine protections is important to you, and, finally, spread the word. A huge wave of support requires a huge number of people, so get the word out however you can!

RESTAURANT REVIEW

The Lotus Dim Sum House

Jason E. Trott

FEAST: The dishes are affordable and good.

When the only Chinese restaurant in the Palisades closed its doors last month I was devastated. Their moo shu shrimp was so delicious.

Then I noticed that a new Chinese restaurant had taken over a restaurant that had been part of a Chinese chain that was not too exciting, but I decided to try the new iteration. And whenever I go to a Chinese restaurant, I try to take a Chinese person with me. In this case I invited my gourmand friend Bryan and his beautiful wife Ming. And I asked them to do all the ordering.

The result was an incredible Chinese feast. We started with a cucumber salad, very tasty although a bit more marinating was called for. I then had the wonton soup, one of my favorite Chinese dishes, and it was very flavorful. Next, we had the battered crispy shrimp appetizer, which was one of my favorites (and enough to serve for a main course). The pork Xiao Long Bao was very authentic, fresh, and delicious. We ate many different dumplings, some fried, some steamed, and some in little tinfoil cups.

The two dishes that we picked as our favorites were the Singapore Style Noodle and the Minced Chicken Lettuce. The noodles had a lot of complex flavors. The minced chicken dish came with a half loaf of lettuce which we used like a tortilla as a wrap for the diced chicken.

On the table were a nice selection of sauces, including soy and chili, which we carefully added to many of the dishes.

This whole feast for three was just over $100, and there was enough to take home for one more meal.

The restaurant provides a menu with a checklist on it so you can order by checking off the items you want. Be sure to look on the back of the menu as well, where there is a list of fried rice dishes (which we didn't try) and six vegetable dishes which look wonderful, and I will try next time.

Also on the back is the drink menu with beer and wines at reasonable prices, including "Kungfu Girl" sparkling wine, and some cocktails such as "lotus lychee" martini - which I might try.

The Lotus is on the southwest corner of 4th and Wilshire and is worth the trip.

For many California children, Medi-Cal mental health services lack urgency they need

Courtesy photo

CHILDREN: Paloma, 7, Irma, 8, and Almarissa Segura, 14, are sisters attending San Antonio Elementary School in Lockwood, Calif., on Wednesday, May 11, 2022. Paloma, currently a 2nd grader, is in the same class as her sister Irma in 3rd grade; Almarisa is presently in 8th grade and will soon attend Soledad High School.

BY NANCY NETHERLAND

Despite California's unprecedented investment in child and family wellbeing, the gap between promising policies on paper and what they actually accomplish for young people and families has never felt so vast.

My children, former foster youth living with complex medical needs, are considered high priority for behavioral health care and yet still have waiting times for services measured in months and – on more than one occasion – years.

I have a lot of privilege and experience working in health care that spans decades. But despite my understanding of the necessary health policies, I am unable to access behavioral health care for my children in a timely manner, if at all.

I can only imagine what it is like for families with less understanding and fewer resources to navigate this system.

While at a recent meeting citing the U.S. Surgeon General's 2021 report warning that youth mental health had become a "devastating" crisis, I was already a few months into my attempt to get my 15-year-old daughter back into medical care for her ADHD and depression. Her psychiatry referral had been in place since she was 12, but it was inexplicably closed due to an apparent paperwork glitch. We were told we would have to restart the entire process.

So while I appreciate Instagram posts raising awareness of adolescent mental health, and applaud efforts to highlight the disparities Black children (like my daughters) face in terms of elevated risks for depression and anxiety, I also know firsthand that the system is deeply flawed.

This is especially true for families like ours who are insured through Medi-Cal. At best, Medi-Cal's behavioral health services are hard to access. Most of the time they are a vast sieve through which children and families are lost by no fault of their own.

This is not a new problem. When my youngest daughter was diagnosed with a debilitating and incurable disease at 5 years old, I asked her pediatrician how I could access behavioral health resources to build her resiliency and support our family. Unfortunately, my daughter needed a mental health diagnosis to get those services through Medi-Cal, which required a longer wait.

There was no preventive care available for her or our family.

While that particular policy changed last year and now children with Medi-Cal who are system-involved or have experienced trauma theoretically have access to benefits, the ability to actually receive care has not materially improved.

My same daughter, now 14, was diagnosed with post-viral syndrome after in the place that they live or work," Cody Romness, co-founder of Allegiate Gyms said.

"In the short term it's far from ideal, but it's not going to be the worst thing in the world if we can clean that area up," Romness said.

Hector Padilla, general manager of Bay Cities Italian Deli is no stranger to the disruption caused by large building developments. "There's an increase in traffic even now because they're working on this side of the building [1550 Lincoln Blvd]," he said.

The extremely popular delicatessen is located almost opposite the nearly-completed NMS Lincoln Blvd apartments, which itself has been under construction for more than two years and could be considered as an introduction-of-sorts of what to expect from the 710 Broadway project.

"Over maybe about the past year, or year and a half, the roads would close around here and it was mayhem then. So yeah, to be honest, we've been there and done that already," Padilla said.

However, no local business will be affected quite as much as the quaint, quirky little street fair-style store seemingly stuck onto the side of the actual Vons building. Called Timeless Symbols, it sells incense, jewelry, statues and other imported goods, specifically from India, Tibet and Nepal. Unlike any of the other businesses surrounding this intersection, this merchant will have to actually move and relocate to a new site.

Owner Asha Smith has been at 710 Broadway since 2006. Her business endured the "Great Recession" from late 2007 into 2009 and more recently, the Covid pandemic, but sadly, it couldn't survive gentrification.

"I met with the vice president of Safeway, I think it was, and he told me they had a space, where there was just a vending machine and where the homeless sleep. So I said I'll take it. I just wanted to display my merchandise. I was a very small business," Smith said.

While only receiving a very limited amount of information regarding the new development, Smith said that Vons parent company called her unexpectedly about two weeks ago and asked that she vacate the tiny territory immediately.

"They called me and said my lease had expired and said 'we want you to leave now.' I think it was the first day of the storm and I said 'I can't leave now, it's raining and I have to find a new location.' Then my husband spoke to them after, I think the second or third time they called and now we have until the end of the month."

While any parking not directly connected to shopping inside the Vons store is frowned upon and occasionally discouraged, the 140-or-so car parking spaces were undeniably useful to local business. Bay Cities Deli has the unique feature of having its own car park, albeit a very small one. So while traffic congestion will almost certainly worsen once construction has begun, customers can at least continue to access the parking lot adjacent to the delicatessen from Lincoln Court. But Padilla doesn't think the loss of Vons car park will affect his business.

"You know, it might a little bit, bit that won't affect the die-hards. Many customers do park there and that will soon be gone, so it'll be a challenge, but I know our base core of customers here and I know they'll find a way, even if they have to park down the street. But, it will be a challenge, just how bad remains to be seen," Padilla said.

"It's definitely a valid and fair concern," Romness said. "You know, we occasionally get a call from Vons saying our members are parking there and that they'll get towed and I totally get it. And of course we tell our members not to park there, but look, anything that makes it one step harder to get into a gym doesn't help sell gym memberships or encourage people to get involved. So, yeah, it's gonna be difficult."

There are additional side effects that also might not be immediately obvious; prescriptions from Vons pharmacy can be transferred to Tri Tech Rx, which also offers delivery services. It's believed that everything will eventually transfer to Rite Aid on 14th and Wilshire Blvd. And as if all of that wasn't bad enough, with the Starbucks located inside of Vons also now closed, it means folk have to walk an extra five blocks for their hot chocolate.

The Daily Press has also learned the fate of the California palm trees that currently adorn the car park. According to a statement received from the City of Santa Monica, "There aren't requirements for the relocation of trees on private property. Because the site is being completely redeveloped, 39 of the existing palms on the property are to be removed. However, the palm trees in the public right of way (city-owned on 7th St) are being retained. Additionally, the project has an approved landscape plan that proposes trees."

COVID, and her symptoms exacerbated her existing illness, triggering the onset of depression and anxiety. Her pediatrician (who is fantastic) told me there were no more pediatric psychiatry referrals available through the practice, but if she became a danger to herself I could call 911 or visit urgent care.

As a former therapist, I know that when children – especially adolescents – tell you they are suffering, there is a critical window of opportunity for treatment that cannot be delayed. And yet all California's mental health system could do was tell me to wait.

Our children are not OK. We need something better than hotlines, first responders and local hospitals as a safety net. State leaders must acknowledge the depths of the current emergency and support the mental health needs of our system-involved youth, who are some of the most vulnerable populations in our state.

Specifically, the state needs to allocate dedicated, non-federal funding to counties in this year's budget to move the promising new Specialty Mental Health Services eligibility criteria policy into practice. If we are going to help our children, local behavioral health delivery systems need to be immediately and sustainably resourced, supported and informed.

this structural work came after meetings with the Division of the State Architect (DSA) – the body responsible for approving such projects – during which the District was informed that the work they intended to do at the site could not be considered "maintenance" but must instead be treated as a construction project. This designation has additional implications for the project, Klaus told the Board.

"One of the main implications of DSA not considering the work we are doing to be maintenance is this is going to count toward a threshold where they will impose other code implications," he said.

He explained that once construction work done to a building reaches a cost that is above 50% of DSA's estimated cost to replace that building, it must include additional upgrades. While the project is currently below that threshold, Klaus said District Staff believe it is best to make the upgrades now to avoid the possibility of having to go back and do it in case future work on the campus pushes costs past the 50% mark.

"The project scope already lends itself to incorporating this upgrade…" he said. "We're already removing all of the stucco and exposing all of the shear walls and the improvements may mean replacing some of that plywood or doing a nailing pattern that's closer together or more modern, but the work is exposed and it makes sense to do it now."

He added that the decision is the result of careful consideration and that the upgrades will be beneficial for the campus.

"We had a lot of talks about this and we just believe this is the right thing to do," Klaus said. "It improves the structural safety of the buildings and district staff just believe it's the right thing to do."

At DSA's recommendation and to help minimize the delay, Klaus said the District plans to submit separate proposals for work at each building.

"Some of these buildings have fewer issues and the design to remediate them is more straightforward, so those submittals will go to DSA first with the expectation that they will come back first," he said. "Then we can bid the work and we can start construction in those areas while other buildings with more complex problems and more detailed remediation requirements are still in the DSA process."

Even with this plan, the start of construction will be delayed from April to August of 2023 at the earliest, with an earliest possible completion date of December 2024 rather than July, as previously estimated. This means the campus will not reopen for students until January 2025 at the earliest and August 2025 at the latest – a full year later than originally anticipated.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 23)

Illuminated connections are a theme for you this year as you come together in bright moments with special people, fascinating subjects of interest, scenes and scenery that positively lights you up. More highlights: a valuable found item, being chosen for an important job and giving a gift you've dreamed of giving. Gemini and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 14, 31, 30 and 1.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You did what was logical and a little of what seemed magical, too. Trust that you're absorbing the lessons of your journey and don't overthink it. Give things a chance to marinate. Come back to it in three days.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). It will feel good to give in a way that's specific to an individual or to the problem at hand. Your happiness will have to do with helping another person out in a way that others wouldn't have thought to.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You want your life to be exciting because you take the risks that serve purposes that are meaningful to you. Random thrills, however, hold no interest. Your next moves will be carefully considered and expertly calculated.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). What the other person is doing is a function of their own wants, needs and processes. You'll be as successful as you are objective. Detach and stand back so you can see where your own needs overlap.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You have luminous qualities, and it would take more energy to hide them than it does to let them shine. Like the sun, you'll burn off energy while churning to your depths for new sources of fuel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're likely to keep thinking about something in the same way over and over unless and until you air your thoughts. Different people can give you different ways to think about this. Self-expression is key to gaining better perspective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). A lasting contentment may be better than a trophy in your hand, but you can't help it — you still want that victory. This won't be easy, and that's part of the reason it appeals so strongly to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll be relaxed and in control. Maybe you'd like people to take a particular action or behave in a certain way, but you won't need to explain or persuade them to do this; you'll model it instead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're not the same person you were when you were in that long-ago situation. That was a version of you, and many updates have happened since then. Others will need to adjust to accommodate the way things are now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You might be surprised by what your competitors are doing nowadays. Seeing what's out there could make you feel like you've been settling for less than the market dictates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're not trying to figure out what went wrong so you can blame someone. You just want to know so you can avoid the same outcome in the future. You'll pinpoint possible corrective actions and decide the best way to proceed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Typically, it's better to discuss ideas than to trade complaints about minutiae. However, sometimes a complaint can be the first step to thinking along inventive lines. You'll keep an open mind to what people gripe about.
