THE WHO ISN'T SICK? ISSUE

Downtown area braces for spate of projects

BY NICK TABOREK
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL Bulldozers could soon be the new Priuses in Downtown Santa Monica.

A slate of projects in the city's commercial core and adjacent Civic Center planned for the next five years promises to transform the most iconic parts of the city — and to pose some serious challenges for businesses, their customers and City Hall planners during construction.

No matter how you spin it, the list of projects expected to break ground before 2015 is impressive. It includes the renovation of the California Incline, the re-building of a Downtown parking structure on Second Street, a new Civic Center park, the Expo Light Rail station on Colorado Avenue and a multi-screen movie theater slated for Fourth Street. There's also the Civic Auditorium renovation, an expansion at Santa Monica High School, a new bridge leading up to the pier and The Village housing development across from City Hall.

Tonight, Santa Monica officials overseeing the projects will present their plan to deal with the impacts to the City Council, and residents and business people will get an opportunity to raise concerns.

Mayor Richard Bloom said everyone who will be affected by road closures and other inconveniences needs to recognize that there will be some unavoidable disturbances. In the end, he argued, the benefits of the projects will be well worth their costs.

"The staff is looking at this as a time when there will be some level of disruption, and the objective is to minimize that," he said. "We simply cannot have progress on these issues without experiencing some level of disruption, but the dividend at the end of the day is that our downtown area is going to be even more spectacular than it is now."

HIGH SCHOOL SPORTS ROUNDUP

Samohi girls' team remembers Lacy

BY DANIEL ARCHULETA
Managing Editor

SAMOHI The late Norm Lacy, Santa Monica High School's longtime athletic director who passed away last year, was honored before a girls' basketball game on Saturday.

Head Coach Marty Verdugo presented Lacy's widow, Patty Lacy, with a ring celebrating last season's California Interscholastic Federation Southern Section Division 1A title and a jersey bearing the number he wore during his days playing football at USC.

Verdugo said that he decided that the girls' basketball program's annual Westside Challenge was the appropriate time.

"Norm really meant so much to all of us at the school," Verdugo said.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RANCHO PALOS VERDES A 3.1-magnitude earthquake has struck in the ocean channel off the coast of the Palos Verdes Peninsula in Southern California.

The small quake struck about 15 miles offshore from Rancho Palos Verdes at about 4 p.m. Monday.

Police and sheriff stations on the mainland and on Santa Catalina Island said they didn't feel the tremor and didn't receive any reports of damage.

Global warming in pictures

A traveling photography exhibit and program highlighting global climate change, developed by the Swiss government, is making a stop in Santa Monica this week.

The "ThinkSwiss Climate Trail & Polar Wonders: Photographs From the End of the World" event will provide a unique opportunity to get an artistic and scientific impression of climate change.

The educational displays and photography exhibit will be dispersed throughout the Santa Monica Main Library Lobby and Youth Services Area at 601 Santa Monica Blvd. from Feb. 1-9.

A presentation and reception will take place on Wednesday, February 2nd at 7 p.m. in the Martin Luther King Jr. Auditorium.

This presentation is open to the public, free of charge, and offers the Santa Monica community an opportunity to:

- Meet award winning photographer Daisy Gilardini and hear her speak about her expeditions to the polar regions.
- Learn about climate change from a scientific perspective as Konrad Steffen, Director, Cooperative Institute for Research in Environmental Sciences at the University of Colorado will discuss the global issues and answer your questions.
- See a film by documentarian Corina Gamma about the wildlife in Antarctica.

$46M spent on failed global warming measure

DON THOMPSON
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO More than $46 million was spent for and against a failed November ballot measure that would have suspended California's landmark global warming law, according to campaign finance reports filed Monday.

Out-of-state oil companies and their supporters spent $10.5 million promoting Proposition 23, while opponents spent more than $36 million.

The initiative would have suspended the state's 2006 greenhouse gas reduction goals until California's unemployment rate, now 12.5 percent, drops to 5.5 percent and holds there for a year. That has occurred just three times in three decades.

Voters defeated Proposition 23 by a margin of 61.6 percent to 38.4 percent.

The initiative seeking to undo California's global warming law was one of nine propositions on the November ballot, which also included a failed initiative seeking to legalize recreational use of marijuana. Supporters and opponents for all propositions faced a Monday deadline to file their final fundraising and spending reports.

Opponents of the global warming initiative were able to entice support from big business, venture capitalists, environmental groups and Hollywood notables such as movie director James Cameron by turning the petroleum industry into a villain, said Bill Day, spokesman for Valero Corp. The Texas-based company contributed more than $5 million to the campaign.

"I think that probably had a detrimental effect" on contributions, he said.

The oil companies and their supporters argued that the state law will drive businesses out of state and should be delayed until the economy improves.

Steve Maviglio, a spokesman for the groups fighting against Proposing 23, said the petroleum companies were overwhelmed by state and national groups that see green energy and jobs as the next wave in the California economy.

"California's business community rallied to save the fastest-growing business sector in the state," Maviglio said. "It also became a flashpoint nationally for the future of clean energy."

Schwarzenegger championed the 2006 Global Warming Solutions Act as a hallmark of his administration. It made California the first state to approve greenhouse gas regulations, limiting industrial emissions beginning in 2012 and adding fossil fuel energy reductions in 2020.

In addition to rejecting the marijuana legalization, voters in November refused to enact a vehicle fee to fund state parks and repeal business tax breaks. They lowered the margin needed to approve state budgets in the Legislature from a two-thirds vote to a simple majority and gave an independent panel the authority to draw congressional districts.

Stop whaling now, Obama

Editor:

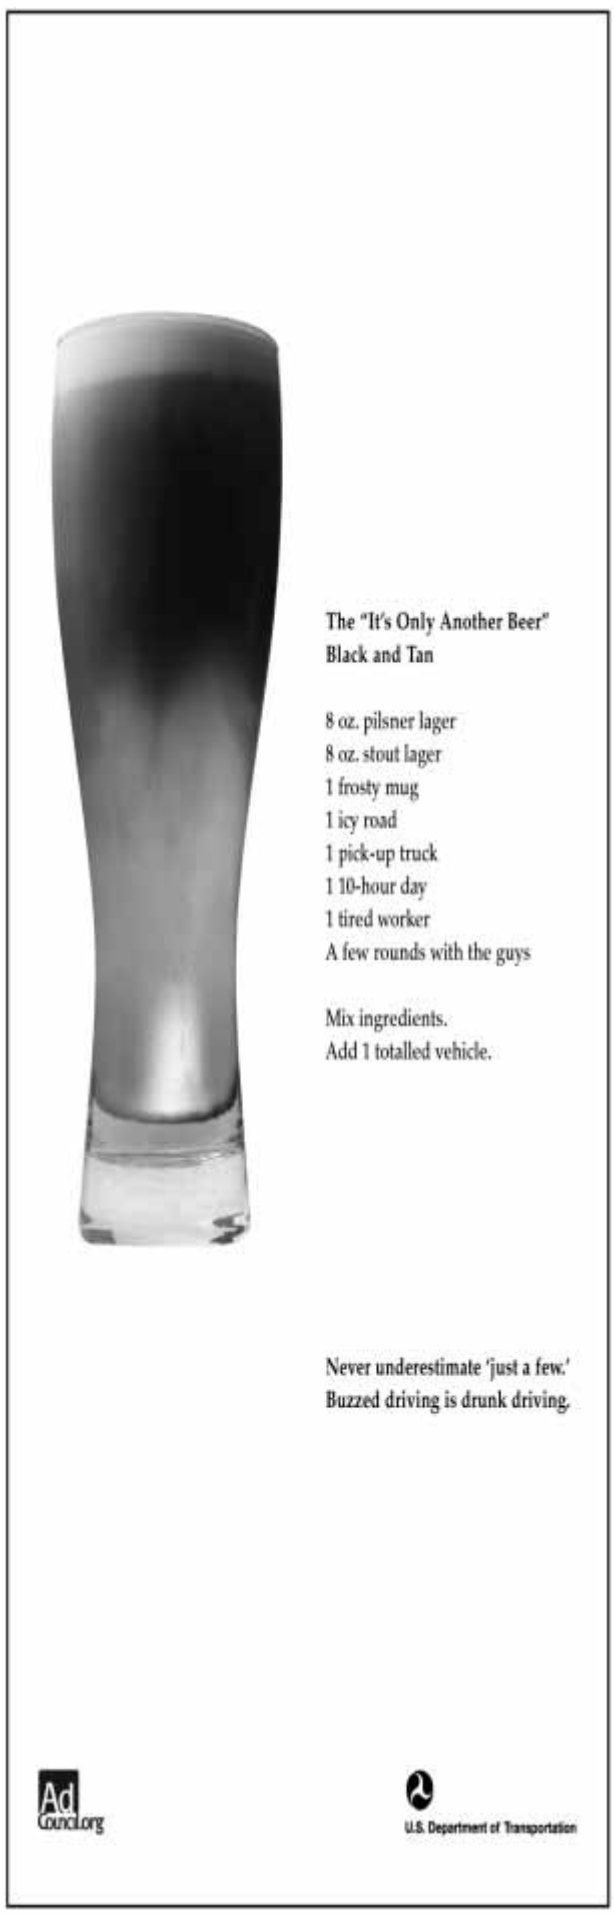

Right now the Japanese whaling fleet is in the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary hunting whales.

This is the fourth time the Japanese have gone to the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary since President Obama made the statement that, "Allowing Japan to continue commercial whaling is unacceptable."

According to a recent Greenpeace poll, 83 percent of Americans want the President to stand by his pledge to strengthen the ban on commercial whaling.

President Obama must use all the diplomatic tools available to him to reform the International Whaling Commission and stop the Japanese from whaling in the Southern Ocean Whale Sanctuary.

Sunset salutations

SOME DAYS ARE JUST BETTER THAN others. Some days the sky is bluer and the air is sweeter. Other days, not so much. But living in Santa Monica allows me take a walk along the pier, see the sun set on the Pacific and remember that each day here is blessed.

If you haven't been down to the pier at sunset lately, I highly recommend it. Take someone you love and enjoy the view. Take yourself and have a moment of solitude at the end of the pier. There are stairs on the end of the pier that make for a wonderful seat to watch the seagulls play as the sun drops down and sky turns from azure blue to jet black, then speckled with the first stars of the night.

The pier is one of the most dog-friendly places we have around town, and I like taking my dog down there. He is on a perpetual cheeseburger hunt, and though he rarely finds the burger, he frequently finds the fries, or a lost piece of a churro that some child has probably dropped.

Having a dog in public is a great conversation starter. He makes it easy for people approach me and ask questions. Oftentimes I am asked for directions or a recommendation to a restaurant that's close by, most of the time I send people to the restaurants that are one-offs and owned by men I know. It's either Bruno's for a pizza and pasta (usually if they have kids it's a good fit — a total family place and Bruno or his wife, Mrs. Bruno as I call her, will take care of you.) or Chez Jay's is the place for those couples who are looking for a stiff martini and a steak.

These neighborhood places are a welcome break from the overly produced corporate food that passes these days as well-made. I like the fact that the Caeser salad at Bruno's is made after it is ordered. It's nice to have a bit of control over what goes into it. No creamy dressing from a 2 gallon jug for Bruno. Each Caeser is specially made and if you want anchovies or not, they will make it to your tastes. Extra lemon or garlic — not a problem. It's that consideration that makes me want to go back time and again.

I frequent the pier area often. This time of year it is an ideal spot for dog walking and to end the day. My dog is with me most of the time. He comes to my law office, he stays in the car when I'm working out at either Equinox or the Loews Hotel. Our routine is to go for a walk along the boardwalk and see the pier performers. There's the drum guy who likes to perform just north of the Hot Dog on a Stick and talk women into hula-hooping. I like him a lot, he has a wonderful array of outrageous hats and outfits.

The name-on-a-grain-of-rice guy is usually out, and depending on the day sometimes there's the silver robot dude, and his twin the gold robot dude. On weekends there are usually more performers and artists, which attracts more people, and I prefer to stay away on those days.

Large crowds can become overwhelming for me as I try to navigate with a dog that stands about 10" tall at the shoulders. People don't expect him to be there so I have to pay special attention to them, so that he doesn't get stepped on accidentally.

I do my best to be aware of my surroundings and the flow of people around me. It's important to be alert when we're on top of each other in close quarters, which the pier becomes. My experience is that people are not always as considerate as I would like them to be, which means that I have to be more so. I understand it, the pier, or any attraction like it, has many distractions for a reason. That's the point of being there. There are the bells and buzzers of the arcade, the roar of the rollercoaster as it whizzes past, and the intermittent music of the performers.

The fun of the pier is that it has a craziness to it. It's not a manic insane craziness, but an excited, happy craziness. When there are lots of little kids running around ecstatic that they won some 2 cent piece of plastic it makes for a nice end to the workday of stress and anger that I deal with on a regular basis.

Report: Immigration law not enforced consistently

KATE BRUMBACK
Associated Press

ATLANTA Some local law enforcement agencies, particularly in the Southeast, are turning over illegal immigrants who commit even minor offenses to federal authorities for deportation, while others are focused on deporting more violent criminals, according to a report released Monday.

The report by the Migration Policy Institute, a Washington-based nonpartisan think tank, said conflicting messages from the U.S. government and local political pressure may account for the discrepancy.

The study, which examined a program that allows participating local agencies to enforce federal immigration law, found that several agencies in the Southeast were turning over every illegal immigrant taken into custody. An influx of immigrants in the generally conservative region has heightened political tension, the report said. North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and South Carolina were in the top six in terms of growth rates of foreign-born populations from 1990 to 2009.

"This regional pattern reflects common political pressures that stem from rapid demographic change," the report said.

The study focused on the 287(g) program — named for the section of federal law governing it — overseen by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. The U.S. Homeland Security Department, which includes ICE, in 2009 wrote new contracts for the local-federal partnerships and issued new guidelines telling local officers to focus primarily on illegal immigrants charged with crimes like rape, murder, robbery or drug offenses.

But top U.S. government officials — who have said the program that is in place in 71 jurisdictions nationwide can also be useful for deporting illegal immigrants when resources allow — offer a conflicting message, the report said.

ICE spokeswoman Gillian Brigham said in an e-mail that the study affirmed the way ICE enforces immigration law, but that it underestimated the value of deporting people accused of drunken driving, domestic violence and other misdemeanors that affect public safety.

The report said ICE needs to do more to ensure consistency in the program, which critics have said has given rise to racial profiling and civil rights violations.

The study is based on visits and interviews in seven 287(g) jurisdictions: Cobb and Gwinnett counties in Georgia; Frederick County, Md.; Los Angeles County, Calif.; Prince William County, Va.; Las Vegas; and the state of Colorado. Researchers also analyzed data provided by ICE on all people processed through the program in all participating jurisdictions.

In the first 10 months of fiscal year 2010, about half the immigrants detained under the program for transfer to immigration authorities had been accused of serious crimes, such as rape and murder, according to ICE data. The other half had been charged with misdemeanor or civil offenses, or only immigration-related crimes.

Enforcement varied widely in the seven jurisdictions studied. For instance, more than 70 percent of those detained for transfer in Las Vegas had been charged with serious crimes. That figure dipped to less than 10 percent in Colorado, Prince William County, Va., Frederick County, Md., and Cobb County, Ga.

Although about 68 percent of those handed over to immigration authorities in Colorado were not charged with criminal violations, ICE and state officials say many of those people were high priority because they were passengers in smuggling or human trafficking operations.

In Frederick County, Md., and in Cobb and Gwinnett counties in Georgia, authorities flagged for immigration authorities nearly everyone who could be deported. However, officials in those counties said they had enough jail space to detain any person who could be deported, the report said.

The Cobb County Sheriff's Office was the first of four sheriff's offices in Georgia to participate in the program, signing the agreement in 2007.

"Immigration is a federal issue. However, when illegal aliens come into our community and commit a crime, it becomes a local issue," Cobb County Sheriff Neil Warren says on his department's website.

Warren did not immediately respond to a request for comment Monday.

Gwinnett County Sheriff Butch Conway said in a statement that he hadn't had a chance to read the whole report but that most of the cases flagged by his agency involve felony and misdemeanor offenders, not traffic cases.

Los Angeles County is unique among the sites studied: Officials don't check immigration status until someone is convicted of a crime. Still, some 40 percent of people detained for immigration authorities there had committed only minor offenses. On the other hand, the 10 jurisdictions with the highest percentage of people turned over to immigration authorities after committing only traffic offenses are all in the Southeast, the report said.

PROJECTS

Chief among concerns for business people is the impact the projects pose to parking in the commercial core. According to a tentative construction schedule contained in a City Hall report, the re-construction of Parking Structure No. 6 on Second Street is expected to overlap with the demolition of Parking Structure No. 3 on Fourth Street, which is being removed to make room for the planned movie theater project.

That could mean a temporary net loss of about 680 parking spaces during 2013 while construction of both projects is underway, though a temporary lot at Arizona Avenue and Fifth Street could mitigate the loss.

Don Patterson, City Hall's parking guru, said he's been making the rounds with a plan to offset the temporary decline in available parking spaces and believes there's significant buy-in from the business community.

"They recognize that there's going to be an impact and the impact should be on those that stay parked all day" rather than on those who come to shop, he said.

To that end, City Hall plans to require some 500 people who have monthly permits to park Downtown to shift to Civic Center and Main Library structures, which should free up more spaces next to stores for shoppers and visitors to Downtown offices, he said.

Parking rates could also change, he said, in order to incentivize parking in the peripheral structures, which typically have empty spaces during peak hours while the centrally located lots are at capacity.

Also on the table are new "wayfinding improvements" like better signs and a smart phone application to help direct drivers to available parking. A shuttle system to connect the peripheral parking structures to Downtown is also under discussion.

Kathleen Rawson, the CEO of the Bayside District Corp., which manages Downtown and represents merchants' interests, said some concern remains about how construction will affect business over the next several years, though she agreed the planned projects are "good for the long-term vitality" of Downtown.

Santa Monica Pier bridge

Santa Monica Civic Auditorium

She said most of her organization's members are on board with the thrust of City Hall's strategy but are reserving judgment until they see the results.

"I don't get a sense that people are going to say, 'Oh my god this is horrific plan, stop what you're doing'" at tonight's meeting, she said. "I do get the sense that the city will get pressed for details."

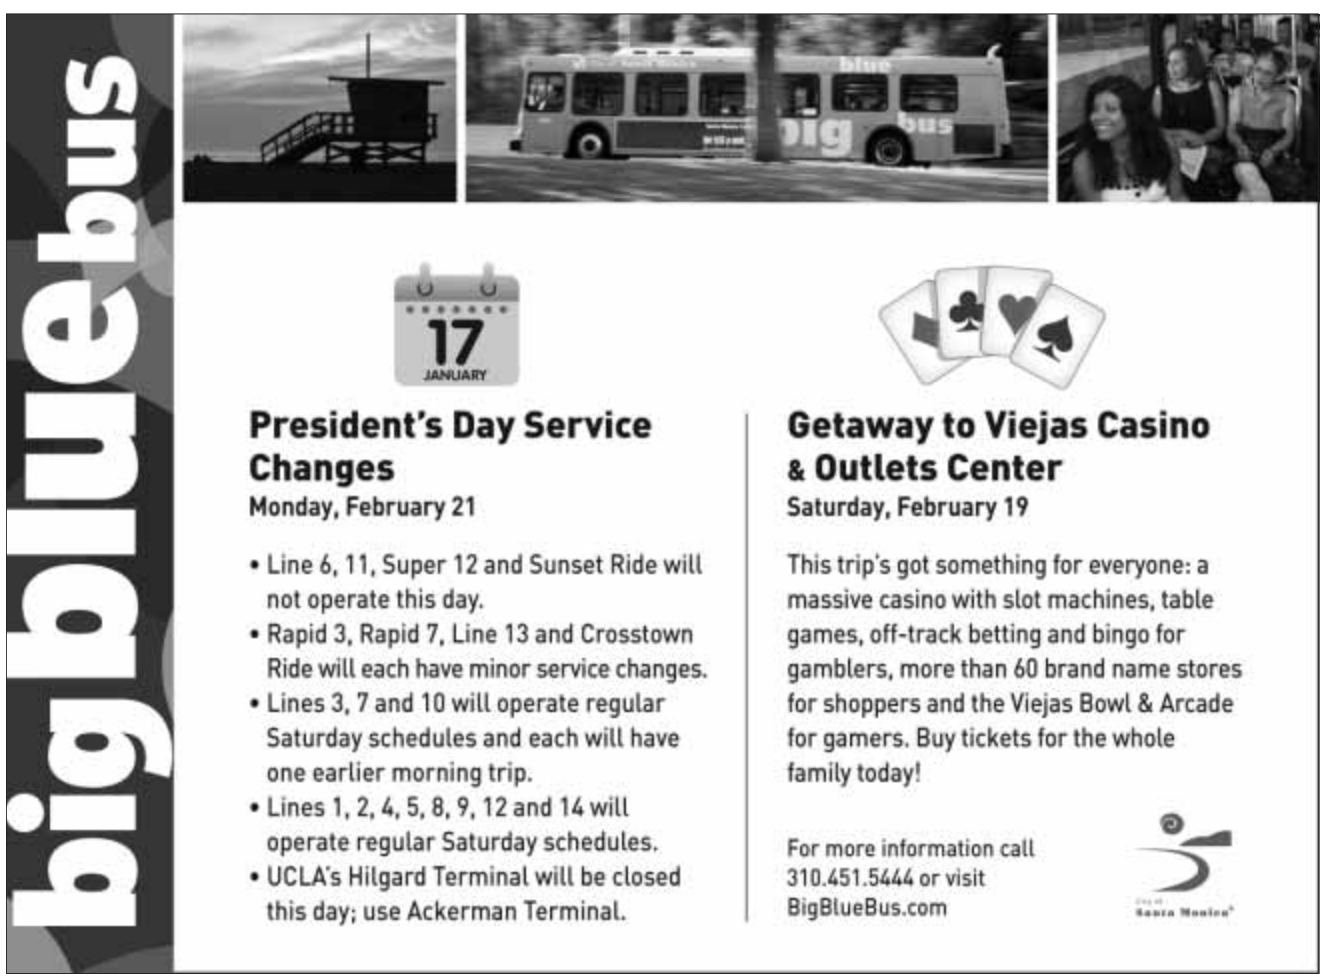

Bayside stakeholders are pleased City Hall has prepared a comprehensive plan to offset construction impacts and that officials have announced their intention to implement what they call the "interim parking plan" before projects get underway, she added.

Patterson said several elements of the strategy will take effect before summer.

"We look forward to starting implementation this spring so that we can make any needed adjustments before the major construction projects start in 2012," he said.

Schwarzenegger to honor Jack LaLanne

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Arnold Schwarzenegger will honor the late fitness pioneer Jack LaLanne at a Los Angeles service.

Schwarzenegger, TV fitness guru Richard Simmons and former "Hulk" TV star Lou Ferrigno will be among those taking part in a "Celebration of Life" for LaLanne today at Forest Lawn Hollywood Hills memorial park. Schwarzenegger spokesman Daniel Ketchell says the former California governor and bodybuilder will speak at the event.

LaLanne was 96 when he died Jan. 23 in Morro Bay.

LaLanne encouraged generations of TV viewers to exercise daily and promoted weight training for women at a time when that was considered revolutionary. He also founded a chain of fitness studios and touted the value of raw fruit and vegetables.

ST. MONICA FOOTBALL PLACES TWO ON CIF-SS TEAM

The honors follow a season that saw St. Monica go 8-3, continuing its rebuilding following a number of down years.

Holguin finished the season with 37 receptions, 722 yards and five touchdowns. He was a vital part of the Mariners' pass-happy offense. He also filled in at quarterback when starter Matthew Partyka went down with an injury.

Lauaki led St. Monica with 54 tackles. He also led the team with 13.5 sacks.

"This is a testament to the good job our team did last season," Athletic Director Rick Bruce said.

ST. MONICA GIRLS' HOOPS ROUTS EL SEGUNDO

St. Monica's girls' basketball team toppled El Segundo, 49-28, in a non-league game on Saturday.

The Mariners were led by senior Kayla La Cour's defensive play. She was able to limit El Segundo's star guard Lauren Sato to no points. Cory Laguardia led the Mariners with 16 points and 14 rebounds. Monique Boe added 13 points and seven boards.

The win improves the Mariners' record to 10-14 overall and 3-2 in league. The win gave St. Monica four victories in the previous five games.

Next for St. Monica is a Camino Real League matchup with Mary Star of the Sea on the road on Thursday. The game is scheduled for 7 p.m.

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

My Personnel File: Why Do I Want it and How Do I Get a Copy?

The permanent record from our youth may have been a ruse cooked up to keep children in line, but these days, we are close to having permanent records due to our rapidly all encompassing digital world. Thankfully, personnel files are not yet in digital format. While we still can, we should at least always be prepared to have access to these records to check and to fix any wrong information. We may also want access when we think we should get a raise and want to use former evaluations, client letters, or training records to get it.

The Why:

More often than not, employees do not even know how to access this information until they talk to a lawyer. And if you are talking to a lawyer about work, something's already gone wrong. Lawyers want to see what your performance record is, any personnel actions and the basis, or any other records that could help determine whether, say, a termination was legally wrongful or justifiable in light of the bigger history. Most of these employment cases turn on performance, the reason the employer gives for the termination, versus whatever you as a plaintiff will show. For example, one good way to maintain better records in your file is to put in writing what you disagree with, such as in a negative evaluation. Later when these are reviewed, and the employee has these notes, it will be more difficult for a bad employer to justify their wrongful behavior through performance issues.

Another reason to keep track is that personnel records can be subpoenaed by a third party, which is something that could happen in any type of legal action where you are involved. The law does require that you are given a notice and opportunity to object to the subpoena. If any of it is relevant to whatever legal action is happening, not necessarily even an employment case, then usually the subpoena is allowed.

The How:

There are no federal laws about these records, but California has very clear laws. Still, some employers do not know them or follow them properly so it is better to know your rights and educate your employer if needed. Here are the types of records that you are legally entitled to get: Pay Records: Employers have to keep for at least three years of your pay records and give their employees a copy within 21 days of request or face civil penalties (Labor Code 226). Personnel Files: Employers have to keep records and give you access to them within a reasonable time (Labor Code 1198.5). All documents you signed: These are the ones signed at hire or as continuing term and condition of employment (not documents signed in the course of conducting business). (Labor Code 432).

Tips: Though these requests do not have to be in writing, it is usually better so that you can keep track of the response time. Employers may have part of your personnel file in different offices. Be sure to know where yours is kept so when the time comes you know how to find it without being given the run around.
Ask for or make copies of all personnel documents as they come up and hold on to the hiring paperwork so that you have your own set for comparison later.

Unemployment Benefits: Do I Qualify?

The news is not getting better about the economy and the unemployment office has to be really picky when it comes to claims. You were not laid off, but instead quit or were terminated. How can you file for unemployment and be approved? This is one of the most often asked questions from my clients. Some who are still working want to know if they should quit or wait to be terminated. The decision will vary from person to person to situation. The decision can also be personal or health related or that you just want to be out of there. Here are some legalities to consider in your decision.

The Quit:

In a situation with a quit, there is generally just one type of circumstance that will get you these benefits. If you can show that you quit because the work conditions were such that no reasonable person could be expected to work there, then you can still qualify for the benefits. This is a high standard limited to what the law requires of the workplace, such as safe conditions, free from harassment, being paid, and free from retaliation. This is not an easy showing to make and so arguments based on personality, rudeness, bad bosses, etc, will not fly.

The Termination:

Most people think that if you have been terminated, there is no unemployment for you. However, there are exceptions to this. Of course, if you have been terminated based on policy violations, gross misconduct, and other severe actions, then you are disqualified. One way to overcome that, if the facts are there, is the exception that the conduct may not have been appropriate but it was an isolated instance of poor judgment, or something excusable that happened the one time for a good reason. Criminal activity at work or assault or harassment is never excusable.

The Wrongful Termination:

If you have been "wrongfully terminated" in the legal sense, you may still qualify for unemployment. Most employees who file lawsuits have been terminated. If the facts are there for a lawsuit, then they should be there to qualify you for unemployment. You need to show that the termination was not based on whatever the employer is claiming, but because of some legal violation they have committed. For example, if you complain of sexual harassment, then a week later, you are terminated for some work issue that happened two months ago, then the termination was retaliation. When an employer retaliates for your report of a prohibited workplace activity, that employer just violated anti-retaliation laws.

Tip: If you are unemployed but develop a disability and you can't work, then you no longer qualify for unemployment. At this point, apply for State Disability Benefits. Again, these is not easy to get and you will need medical proof, but it is one safety we are lucky to have here in California.

Working late, Taurus

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Others, especially a boss or respected authority figure, have great expectations. Can you meet them? Most likely. What is clear is your drive and desire to fulfill this need. Stop. How grounded are these projects? Tonight: Visiting with friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Many people have great ideas. You might appreciate all the suggestions. Most of all, talking and sharing open up your mind to new potential and break down, or at least point out, rigid thinking. A friend could reverse his or her stance or plans at the last minute. Tonight: Working late.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ A partner continues to demand a lot of attention. He or she wants to be more a part of the process. This person sometimes feels left out in the cold. As a door opens and new beginnings occur, realize that you might not totally understand his or her sense of isolation. Tonight: Relax with a good game of Scrabble, or do a crossword puzzle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Deferring to others must get tiring, but you might have little choice ... for now. Unfortunately, those who take the immediate situation as being permanent will find out otherwise. A conversation with a key friend is important. This person is asking you to shed some light on a certain issue. Tonight: Share with a partner or best friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Completing tasks needs to be highlighted. You will have your share of disruptions, some of which you will welcome. Clearly, someone wants to brainstorm. Be flattered, but make sure you want to indulge in this activity with this person. Tonight: Sigh -- finally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your imagination could be funneled into what you are doing, or it could completely distract you from the task at hand. The choice is yours. Do work with an unpredictable partner who can be the source of a lot of problems. Tonight: Choose something soothing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ As you see it, someone might be raining on your parade. You might not be able to focus on what you want until much later. Accept new technology, especially around the workplace. Let ingenuity filter in. Tonight: Live for the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Restraining yourself from saying what is on your mind can be costly, especially to your well-being. Withholding affects the topic or situation you are dealing with. Try verbalizing more often. No one has to always agree with you! Tonight: Relax at home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Stay confident, share your ideas and deal with finances or the root of an issue. Be practical yet responsive to others' ideas, even if they are somewhat off-the-wall. Separate work from pleasure. Still, a wink goes a long way. Tonight: Out and about.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You are in your element. Make the first move rather than stand on ceremony. Be open to a very positive change. An unexpected opportunity needs to be greeted, not shunned. Be sure of your finances before accepting any invitations. Tonight: Gather your bills.

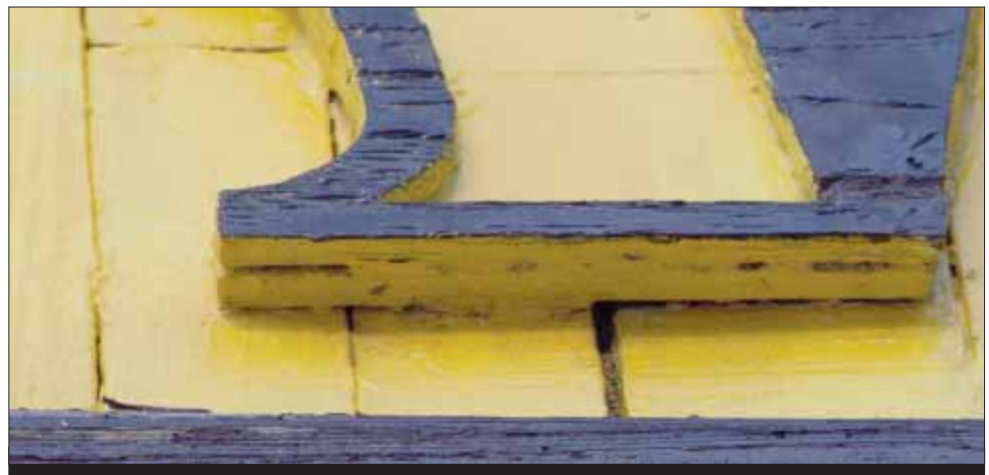

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ You might accomplish a lot if you remain behind closed doors. Note a hunch. This one might be worth following through on. Let understanding grow. Share more of your long-term goals with a trusted friend. Tonight: Finally, a second wind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Realize how close you are to succeeding or completing a major project. Meetings are instrumental. Reveal more of your off-beat thinking. Money gains are likely to be heading your way if you dot your i's and cross your t's. Tonight: Time just for you. You deserve it.

Happy birthday

This year, slow your very hectic pace and look around. See life from a different perspective. Your ability to understand others and see the end results of actions can only be enhanced. Center, meditate and/or do stress-reducing exercise more often. If you are single, you have a unique desirability, probably because you are somewhat withdrawn this year. Others come forward and declare that they want to be yours. If you are attached, the two of you benefit from honoring your deepest feelings. Also, frequent getaways together could be important. CAPRICORN understands you better than you understand yourself!

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™

CrossMath + × − ÷

• Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.

• Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.

• You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.

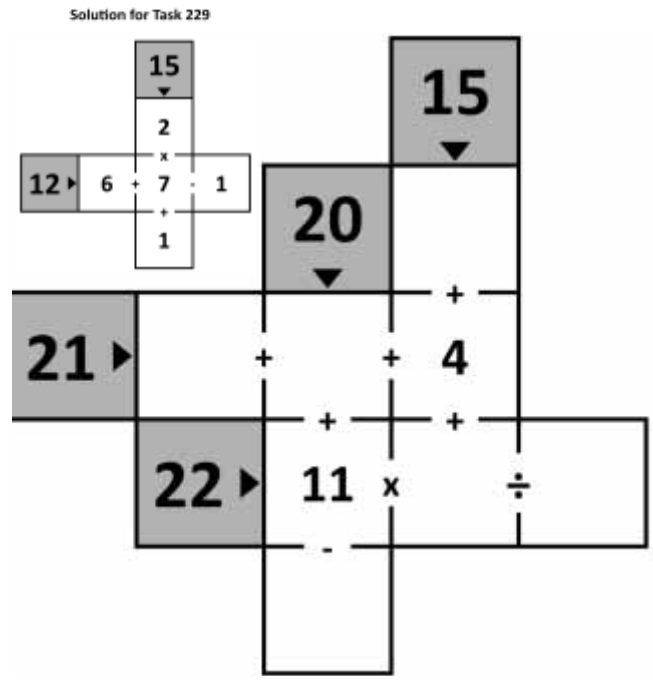

• The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The notoriously isolated North Korean economy only permits new products to be sold as needs arise, and in December (according to a report by Agence France-Presse), the ministries began allowing Western-style "skinny jeans" (having relaxed the rule requiring female workers to wear skirts). Also recently for sale: human fertilizer (owing to the attrition of the animals that previously produced manure for family gardens).

■ The SEGA video company's Japan division began test-marketing its new Toylets game in January, designed for men's urinals. With sensors in the basin and a video screen at eye level, men score points based on the strength and accuracy of their streams. Among the suite of games: sumo wrestling (squirt the opponent out of the circle), graffiti-erasure (strong streams wipe out more graffiti), and skirt-raising (the stronger the stream, the higher a woman's skirt is "blown" upward).
