Examining another world through the lens

BY MELODY HANATANI
Daily Press Staff Writer

VIRGINIA Jona Frank was walking across a campus parking lot, en route to cover another assignment, when a startling sight forced a sudden stop.

Parked before her was a late model Geo Metro, covered in bumper stickers supportive of conservative causes, including a centrally placed, "Bush Cheney '04."

But it was one in particular that awoke the storyteller and photographer in Frank, causing her to grab her camera and begin snapping away, capturing the most telling shot of a sticker that read, "Smile! You could have been aborted."

It was the perfect way to visually communicate the prevailing pro-life view at Patrick Henry College, a small evangelical school in Virginia where the Santa Monica resident spent approximately four semesters examining the student body in the conservative educational community, publishing photographic works in her new book "RIGHT: Portraits from the Evangelical Ivy League."

"They are pro-life and it says it in one

Artists feel the squeeze

BY TEDDY LESHNICK

DOWNTOWN For most local artists, actors, and musicians the slumping economy isn't an abstraction.

As art patrons and collectors are seeing their assets dwindle away, they are more reluctant to spend money on shows and pieces. This leaves artists struggling for a way to keep their studios and stages open through these tough times.

"The pressure is a little greater, but it's the same landscape," Chris DeCarlo, co-artistic director of the Santa Monica Playhouse, said. "It's always a touch-and-go, hand-to-mouth situation."

Keeping the playhouse open isn't easy. With $40,000 per month in overhead, money is especially tight.

"It's a big nut to crack," DeCarlo said.

The Santa Monica Playhouse is designed like a European theater company, DeCarlo said. Therefore every member acts, teaches, performs maintenance, and administrative work. Despite all this work, members only get paid for 1/2 to 3/4 of their time, DeCarlo said.

Part of the administrative duties are writing lots of grant proposals. Over the last 10 years, the playhouse has focused on getting grants from the city and state, DeCarlo said. These grants help subsidize ticket costs. The playhouse charges $25 per ticket when it would really take $50 to cover all the overhead.

"No small theater can charge $50 a seat," DeCarlo said.

Recently, DeCarlo spent 100 hours filling out grant proposals for the possibility of $7,000. It would take a professional accountant 40 hours, but rearranging financial figures for each individual grant is difficult for an actor, DeCarlo said.

This time spent for little monetary gain pays off in other ways. When an organization is publicly funded, private donors are more willing to plunk down hard earned cash.

"It's all about building up credibility over time," DeCarlo said.

Grandma: Octuplets' mom is obsessed with kids

BY RAQUEL MARIA DILLON
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES The woman who gave birth to octuplets this week conceived all 14 of her children through in vitro fertilization, is not married and has been obsessed with having children since she was a teenager, her mother said.

Angela Suleman told The Associated Press she was not supportive when her daughter, Nadya Suleman, decided to have more embryos implanted last year.

"It can't go on any longer," she said in a phone interview. "She's got six children and no husband. I was brought up the traditional way. I firmly believe in marriage. But she didn't want to get married."

Nadya Suleman, 33, gave birth Monday in nearby Bellflower. She was expected to remain in the hospital for at least a few more days, and her newborns for at least a month.

A spokeswoman at Kaiser Permanente Bellflower Medical Center on Saturday said the babies were progressing daily, with all eight breathing unassisted and being tube-fed donated breast milk.

While her daughter recovers, Angela Suleman is taking care of the other six children, ages 2 through 7, at the family home in Whittier, about 15 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

She also said she warned her daughter: When Nadya gets home, "I'm going to be gone."

Angela Suleman said her daughter always had trouble conceiving and underwent in vitro fertilization treatments because her fallopian tubes are "plugged up."

There were frozen embryos left over after her previous pregnancies and her daughter didn't want them destroyed, so she decided to have more children.

Her mother and doctors have said the woman was told she had the option to abort

Cruelty-to-elephants circus case heads to trial

BY DAVID CRARY
AP National Writer

After more than eight years of legal skirmishing, a trial is scheduled to open Wednesday in a lawsuit filed by animal welfare groups alleging that Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus routinely abuses its performing elephants.

The plaintiffs — including the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Animal Welfare Institute — allege that trainers' use of sharp tools called bullhooks and the prolonged use of chains on the Asian elephants add up to an egregious violation of the federal Endangered Species Act.

They seek an order from U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., halting these practices, which some activists hope would force Ringling Bros. to give up elephants altogether.

The non-jury trial before U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan is expected to last three weeks.

Ringling Bros. and its parent company, Feld Entertainment, have defended themselves aggressively since the suit was filed in 2000, contending their treatment of all circus animals is state-of-the-art.

Circus officials note that government regulations permit use of chains. They say the elephants are chained in place at night to keep them from foraging their companions' food, and during train rides to prevent sudden weight shifts that might derail their freight car.

The plaintiffs have asserted that Ringling Bros.' own train records show the elephants are chained in railroad boxcars for an average of more than 26 straight hours, and often 60 to 70 hours at a time, when the circus travels.

The circus also defends the use of bullhooks, saying the sharp tools have been used for centuries in Asia to control elephants humanely. Activists say the implements — which resemble long fire pokers — often inflict wounds that leave scars.

Michelle Pardo, a lawyer for Feld Entertainment, said the defense will prove that the elephants "are healthy, alert, and thriving."

"Animal special interest groups are distorting the facts by making false allegations about the treatment of Ringling Bros. elephants as part of a long-running crusade to eliminate animals from circuses, zoos and wildlife parks," Pardo said.

Stop the assault on Gaza

Editor:

The Los Angeles Israeli Consul said of the large peaceful Westwood protest Saturday on the Israeli war on Gazans, "They are not demonstrating for the chance at peace or for moderate Palestinians ... they are strengthening the radicals in the region ("Marchers gather in Westwood to back Palestinians," L.A. Times, Jan. 11).

So look at what Israel is doing, in the name of peace.

Israel's assault on Gaza, by air, sea and land, has killed more than 600 Palestinians, with more than 2,700 injured (as of last week), many women and children.

Besides the deaths and injuries, the people of Gaza are suffering a catastrophic humanitarian crisis, unacknowledged by the Israeli government.

For the past three years of the heightened repression on Gaza – Israel has clearly maintained itself – yet the Palestinians live trapped, medical care is scarce, they don't get basic foodstuffs, they don't get electricity, they don't get water.

This is being moderate according to the Israeli government?

As Avraham Burg said (L.A. Times, "Bullets or bridges," Jan. 11), "War cannot be the one and only solution in a modern world such as ours," he said.

The time is now to abide by world sentiment, and Israel must stop this outrageous war on their neighbors.

Council arrogance clips tree project

LAST TUESDAY, TWO STREET beautification items were on City Council's agenda.

Everybody seems to support a plan to "green" Ocean Park Boulevard between Lincoln Boulevard and Neilson Way. For years, Ocean Park neighbors have been urging the city to beautify a largely unused, concrete section of OPB with landscaping, bike and pedestrian amenities without substantially altering existing traffic flow. After commenting, City Council gave the go-ahead to one of the OPB streetscaping proposals.

Unfortunately, It was a different story with 20th Street and Cloverfield Boulevard in the Pico Neighborhood. In 1999, Pico residents asked for trees and landscaping on 20th Street and Cloverfield Boulevard between Pico Boulevard and the I-10 Freeway.

Preliminary landscape designs were presented to neighbors about two years ago. Although there were concerns about loss of parking and curb bump-outs on Cloverfield (since rectified), neighbors liked the straightforward proposal for 20th. Later, during two design reviews, various City Council members suggested removing or shrinking traffic lanes, adding medians, traffic islands, bike lanes and curb bump-outs because "landscaping didn't go far enough." Hmmmm.

So, city staff and its outside design consultants created four proposals. One was just "greenscaping" and three involved various physical changes to the street and its traffic flow. After public surveys and three community meetings, the proposals affecting traffic were rejected because neighbors feared additional congestion and gridlock.

Last week, City Council reviewed all four designs and staff's recommendation to complete the landscaping and save street alterations until after the citywide traffic plan revision was finalized in a year or two.

Nevertheless, Councilman Kevin McKeown disagreed, insisting on bicycle lanes (which would mandate removal of one or more traffic lanes on a busy four lane section of 20th that carries 19,000-plus vehicles a day) if any work were to commence. Mayor Ken Genser desired medians and pedestrian enhancements which would also contribute to increased congestion and gridlock. Surprisingly, even Councilman Bobby Shriver agreed on the need for bike lanes.

During public comment, three bicycle lobbyists (one from Sherman Oaks and one from Los Angeles) addressed the dais on the need for bike lanes. The third cyclist advocate, who didn't identify where she was from (raising the question, "Why aren't public speakers providing addresses like they are supposed to, Mr. Mayor?"), agreed with her friends.

Forgetting who his constituency is, McKeown, a bicyclist himself, lauded the out of towners. I'm thinking he didn't even acknowledge the six dozen residents who answered surveys, attended meetings and sent letters or e-mails because they disagreed with him — this after attending at least one of the public forums I attended and hearing concerns about additional traffic for himself. Obviously, it's personal agenda, not resident wishes, that count with McKeown.

Micro manager Genser stated "community education was lacking" which was why neighbors weren't "seeing the light." Yep, time to crank up the city propaganda machine and "sell" non-believers on something else they don't want.

"This plan is insufficient," Genser added, proving that he's a big advocate of piecemeal planning and bad piecemeal planning at that. After 20 years on council, Genser knows it all. He even questioned a fire department document that said traffic mitigation would affect timely emergency vehicle deployment — as if he knows more about public safety than the experts.

Genser pointed out with pride that Pico Boulevard has medians and they're not a problem. Pico Boulevard? The slalom course with narrow, undulating traffic lanes downright hazardous to motorist and pedestrian alike? Please. Genser isn't facing reality.

Genser and McKeown refuse to accept that this is/was just street beautification, not street engineering. Together, they've turned a decade old request for trees from a molehill into a mountain and added hundreds of thousands of dollars (approaching $625,000) in extra outside design fees alone.

Councilman Richard Bloom urged moving forward stating the landscaping proposal "was a dramatic improvement." Councilman Bob Holbrook fretted about reducing street capacity, now over 19,000 vehicles, daily. Mayor Pro-Tem Pam O'Connor wondered if 20th might not become the ideal "complete street" that McKeown and Genser envision.

Council voted to continue discussion after asking a reluctant staff to reconsider bicycle and pedestrian "enhancements" that'll surely cause gridlocked traffic to short-cut through adjacent residential neighborhoods. Bottom line: this will add a least another year and a couple million dollars to the project's present $6.7-million cost and force something neighbors don't want down their throats.

Common sense says plant trees now, and wait to make traffic alterations based on a unified city-wide transportation plan instead of piecemeal. With revisions due in about 60 days, Genser and McKeown will get their own way or delay the project forever. Public be damned.

Want to bet that this silliness won't end at the freeway. You know that "traffic calming" and "complete street" elements will extend up 20th to Wilshire and San Vicente boulevards next and eventually spread to a thoroughfare near you.

When not struck in gridlock, Bill can be reached at mr.bilbau@gmail.com.

Down the drain?

Dear EarthTalk

Are any major brands of disposable tissues, paper towels, napkins and toilet paper yet using recycled content and chlorine-free bleaching?

Sylvia Comstock,
Montpelier, VT

NOT MANY. IN FACT, SOME OF THE biggest names in disposable paper products are the worst offenders. According to the nonprofit Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), forests at home and abroad are being destroyed to make toilet paper, facial tissues, paper towels and other disposable paper products. Giant paper producers such as Kimberly-Clark (Scott, Cottonelle, Kleenex and Viva) and Procter & Gamble (Puffs, Charmin and Bounty) are, in the words of NRDC, "forcing the destruction of our continent's most vibrant forests, and devastating the habitat for countless wildlife species in the process."

Much of the virgin pulp used by these large manufacturers comes from Canada's boreal forest. Some 500,000 acres of boreal forest in Ontario and Alberta alone — key habitat for caribou, lynx, wolves and scores of birds — are felled each year to provide pulp for disposable paper. Beyond wildlife concerns, Canada's boreal forest, which stretches from coast to coast, comprises perhaps the world's largest terrestrial storehouse of carbon dioxide, so it is critical to keep it intact to help mitigate global warming.

Kimberly-Clark uses some 1.1 million cubic meters of trees from Canada's boreal forests each year to produce 465,000 metric tons of pulp. Only 19 percent of the pulp it uses to make home use disposable paper products comes from recycled sources. Some of its brands, including Kleenex and Scott, contain no recycled content whatsoever. Nor do Procter and Gamble's Bounty, Charmin or Puffs, says NRDC.

Another issue with tissue (and paper overall) is the use of chlorine for whitening. Chlorine used in many bleaching processes contributes to the formation of dioxins and furans, chemicals that end up in our air and water and can cause cancer. Safer processes use oxygen compounds and result in paper that is "totally chlorine free," "process chlorine free" (chlorine free except for recycled fibers that were previously chlorine-bleached) or "elemental chlorine free," which substitutes safer chlorine dioxide for chlorine.

WIPED AWAY: Some 500,000 acres of boreal forest in Ontario and Alberta alone — key habitat for caribou, lynx, wolves and scores of birds — are felled each year to provide pulp for toilet paper, paper towels, paper tissues and other disposable household paper products.

NRDC and other groups are pressuring the tissue products industry to change its ways, and are working to educate consumers about their options when buying tissue paper products. NRDC's online "Shopper's Guide to Home Tissue Products" offers reams of free advice on which brands to look for — and which to avoid. Marcal is the only household name that NRDC rates high on paper sourcing (100 percent recycled and 40 to 60 percent post-consumer content) and chlorine use (process chlorine-free). Brands ranking highest (up to 80 percent post-consumer content and process-chlorine free) include 365 (the Whole Foods brand), Seventh Generation, Earth First, and Planet, among others. No brands are totally chlorine free.

In general, consumers should seek out brands that specifically tout use of 100 percent recycled materials with a high percentage (40 percent or more) of post-consumer waste, and not just keywords like "green" or "eco" on their labels, which may be misleading. Also, before you even purchase that next roll of disposable paper think about how you can reduce the amount you use in the first place. Paper tissues, towels and napkins, for example, have re-usable options in handkerchiefs and cotton towels and napkins.

The Q Line

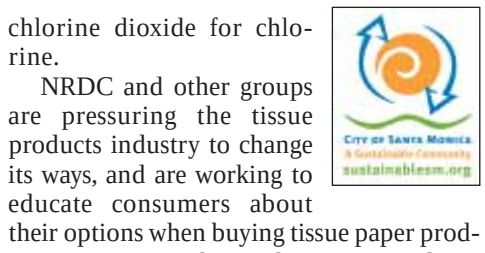

More control?

The City Council recently released over $800,000 to the school district that it was withholding due to problems with special education. As part of the discussion, some called for the council to wield more control over the district.

So this week's Q-Line question asks:

Should the council have more control over the school district as part of the joint-use agreement, which is currently being renegotiated?

Call (310) 285-8106 before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. Please limit responses to a minute or less.

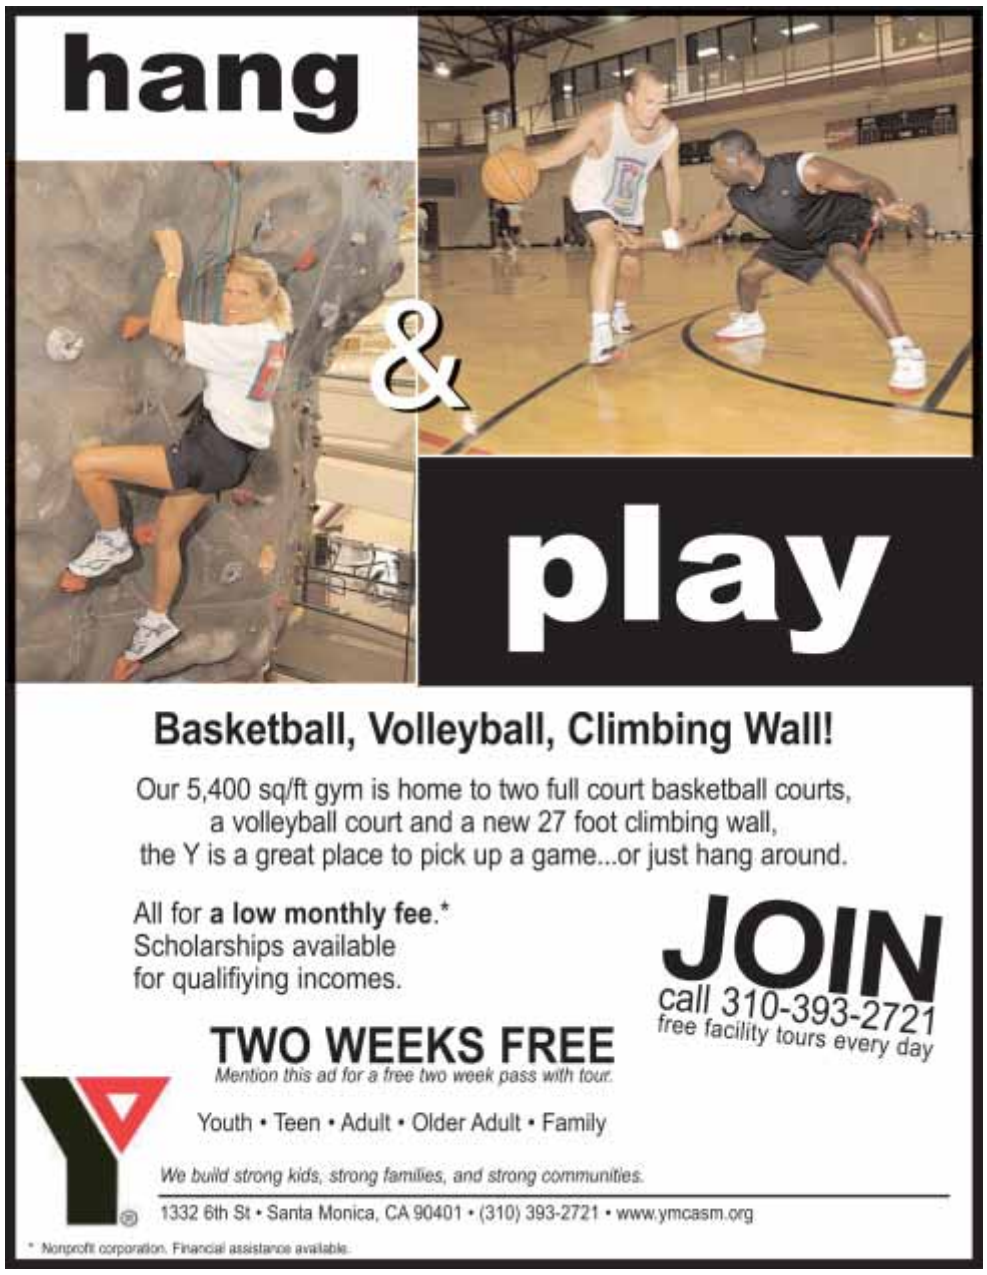

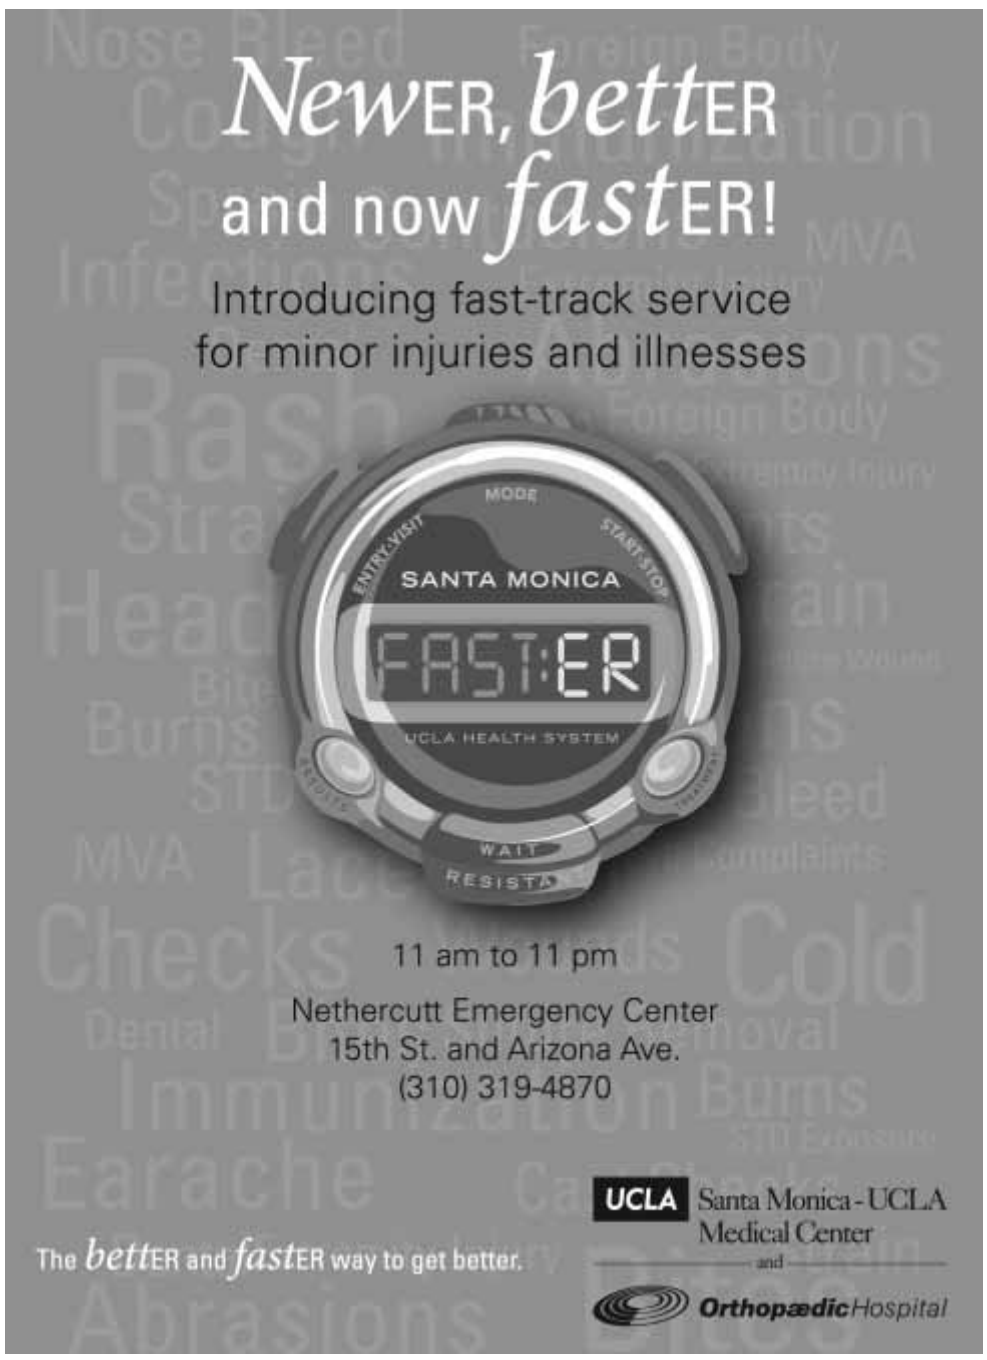

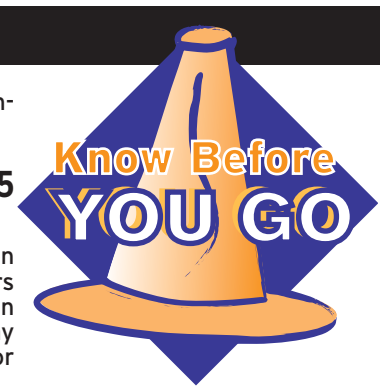

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

"Know Before You Go" is a weekly update on construction projects throughout Santa Monica.

Annenberg Community Beach House (415 Pacific Coast Hwy.)

Beach Parking Lot 10 will be closed for rehabilitation until project completion in early 2009. Beach users are advised to use the beach bike path or park in Beach Lot 9, just south of Lot 10. The self-pay machine in Lot 9 allows payment for either all-day or two-hour parking.

Annual Tree Trimming Project

City trees will be trimmed at various locations. For the address and location please visit the KBUG website (www.knowB4ugo.smgov.net). The annual tree trimming schedule is subject to change without notice due to inclement weather, emergencies, community events, budget conditions, street repairs or other public improvements. Residences and businesses will be notified in advance of tree trimming operations, blocks will also be posted with no parking signs.

Back On the Beach Café (445 Pacific Coast Highway)

Beach Parking Lot 10 will be closed for rehabilitation until project completion in early 2009. Beach users are advised to use the beach bike path or park in Beach Lot 9, just south of Lot 10. The self-pay machine in Lot 9 allows payment for either all-day or two-hour parking.

Big Blue Bus Campus Expansion (1620 Sixth St.)

No public parking at the eastside of Sixth Street (South of Colorado Avenue). Construction is currently under way through Aug. 25, 2009: No parking along, and no pedestrian access to west sidewalk of Seventh Street, between Colorado and Olympic Boulevard. No parking along and no pedestrian access to south sidewalk of Colorado, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Colorado Ocean Relief Sewer Project

Eastbound Colorado will not be allowed to turn left onto northbound Second Street and Ocean Court Alley will be blocked at Colorado.

East Colorado Improvement Project

Pedestrian and neighborhood traffic improvements on Colorado Avenue between 20th Street and Centinela Avenue. Streets will be reduced to one lane both east and west bound from 20th Street to 26th Street. Some parking lanes will be removed during various construction phases. Pedestrian walkways will also be reduced during the construction period.

Citywide Street Repair Project

The contractor will perform sidewalk removal and replacement, curb removal and replacement on Washington Street between Ocean Avenue and Fourth Street. In addition, the same work will occur on Idaho Street from Ocean Avenue to Second Street, the south side only. Please note the "No Parking" signs that will be posted at least 24 hours in advance of work. A notice has been distributed to all affected addresses. There is a temporary parking permit on the back of the notice that will allow you to park within a two block radius of your address. It will exempt you from getting ticketed on street sweeping days.

Parking Structures 1-6 Façade Improvement Project

This project entails repainting and maintenance repairs of the existing downtown parking structures 1 through 6. Construction is currently on the way on Parking Structures 4 – 1321 Second St. and 5 – 1440 Fourth St. The southbound parking lane on Fourth Street (south of Santa Monica Boulevard.) will be used between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. All travel directions will be maintained. This work may temporarily affect a maximum of 25 parking spaces at all parking structures.

Parking Structure #4 Seismic Retrofit

Construction is currently under way. It entails seismic retrofit of Parking Structure no. 4, bathroom remodel/expansion in addition to the sweeper storage area to Parking Structure no. 2. There will be reduced parking capacity through March 20, 2009.

Pico Area Resurfacing Project

The street and sidewalk maintenance work consists of removal and reconstruction of damaged sidewalks, curbs and gutters; tree root pruning, asphalt overlay, and striping at various locations in the Pico Area, bound by Lincoln Boulevard, Cloverfied Boulevard, Pico Boulevard and the I-10 Freeway. The majority of the project is substantially completed, remaining paving work on Michigan Avenue is scheduled for February 2009.

For more information on projects, please visit the Know Before You Go website at: www.knowB4ugo.smgov.net

Buyers feeling cautious, sticking to top-tier work

Nonprofit organizations like the Santa Monica Playhouse apply for grants through City Hall's Cultural Affairs Division. This division of City Hall allocates $500,000 per year to art programming, subsidized art space and grants, Jessica Cusick, cultural affairs manager, said.

"Our budget has been pretty steady and pretty constant," Cusick said.

The budget for art funding probably won't change because it's highly valued in Santa Monica, Cusick said. Forty-three percent of Santa Monica residents make their living in an art related field. Recently, City Hall hired an economist to gauge Santa Monica's art production against other American cities. Per capita, Santa Monica has more people working in the creative sector than Los Angeles and New York, Cusick said.

Because people value the arts in Santa Monica, most nonprofit art organizations are confident they will keep operating by exercising budgetary restraint during hard economic times.

"We're weathering through the storm but we are very cautious," Dale Franzen, director of Santa Monica College's Broad Stage, said.

In November and December the Broad Stage had a hard time garnering private donations, Franzen said.

"People were scared and they weren't answering their phones," she said.

Things have started to turn around in January, but people are usually donating half of what's asked, she said.

Although there won't be the same number of programs next season, the Broad will achieve it's goal of becoming a miniature Lincoln Center and the most important cultural center in Santa Monica, Franzen said.

The 18th Street Art Center is undergoing the same budget restraints that the Broad is experiencing. The center leases studios below market rate to artists selected on a peer review process and showcases their artwork.

"We're being very mindful of the circumstances and very conservative in our projections," Jan Williamson, executive director of the 18th Street Art Center, said.

In the past six months the center has received 10 donations, but Williamson said this generosity could change because of the economic climate.

"We aren't seeing an immediate impact right at this moment," Williamson said. "But our individual donors all haven been impacted by the poor economy."

Some Santa Monica artists see hope in the economic stimulus package proposed by President Barack Obama.

"This is the first president that had an arts platform as part of his campaign," William Turner, owner of the William Turner Gallery and council member of the California Arts Council, said. "We have a president and a legislature that understands that the arts are not only essential to our culture but also our economy."

The stimulus package plans to grant $50 million to the National Endowment for the Arts. In general, every dollar invested in the arts returns four to five fold, Turner said. Legislators generally cut funding to the arts because they aren't informed about data showing these metrics, Turner said.

Most artists act like small businesses creating individual products or making art on a consignment basis. These products fluctuate in value like any commodity.

"People [are] still willing to pay for top tier works by top tier artists," Turner said. "But, the economy makes people much more cautious."

Other than blue chip art — work from famous artists that is guaranteed to appreciate — people are reluctant to buy right now, Turner said. Collectors won't buy from a less famous artist unless they are getting a great deal, he said.

"We are starting to see the bottom feeders circulate," Turner said.

This puts a strain on artists and galleries that rely solely on sales, especially the financially unprepared. Several galleries in Culver City and Santa Monica have closed recently, Turner said.

"It's a difficult business in the best of circumstances," Turner said.

Even though selling art is always difficult, artists and patrons agree that art shouldn't have a concrete monetary value placed on it.

"People feel the ultimate and intrinsic value of art more than ever before," Turner said.

As an actor, DeCarlo said he doesn't mind being poor because he gets to express his inner artistic voice.

"The emphasis is not the product but the journey," DeCarlo said. "There is a freedom in the art realm not available else where."

Search glitz fixed

that time likely saw the message "This site may harm your computer" accompanying every search result, the company said.

Google said it routinely flags any search results with that message if the site is known to install malicious software in the background or otherwise surreptitiously, a practice aimed at protecting its users. Google said it maintains a list of suspicious sites based on criteria developed with StopBadware.org, a nonprofit project headed by legal scholars at Harvard and Oxford universities who research consumer complaints.

Saturday's error happened when Google erroneously applied one of its periodic list updates in such a way that the warning would apply to all URLs, the company said in a statement.

The glitch was caught by on-call staff and the file was quickly fixed, Google said. Since the updates are applied in a staggered and rolling fashion, the errors began appearing at 9:27 a.m. EST and disappeared no later than 10:25 a.m. EST, with the duration for any particular user approximately 40 minutes, it said.

"We will carefully investigate this incident and put more robust file checks in to prevent it from happening again," said Marissa Mayer, vice president of search products and user experience, in the statement.

shot," Frank said.

The shot of the bumper sticker-adorned car is part of a group of photos that have been pulled from the book and featured in a new show at the Sherry Frumkin Gallery, called "Church and State." The gallery is located at the Santa Monica Art Studios.

The photographer and filmmaker spent two-years capturing the lives of students at the college in Purcellville, Va., a nine-year-old institution that was founded by Michael Harris, who also started the Home School Legal Defense Association. Many of the students at the college, which is nicknamed "The Harvard for Homeschoolers," were not educated in a traditional classroom.

Her shots show a school community where many students wear business suits and aspire to a career in politics, interning for the White House and lobbyists.

In some cases, Frank attempted to capture the students' lives at home, photographing their families and snapping shots during homeschooling sessions.

For a photographer who lives in perhaps one of the most progressive cities in the state, visiting the college was a different experience.

"It's great to meet people who make different choices and (learn) why they make those choices," she said. "When you go into a project like this you have to test yourself and test the ability to suspend your own belief.

"I did not set out to denigrate them."

The idea for the project came to Frank when she read an article in the New Yorker about Patrick Henry College, thinking of what it would be like to take a closer look at the young Republicans.

"The students at the school really felt that they had a hand in re-electing (George) Bush in 2004 and they became known as foot soldiers for Bush, which is something they were proud of," Frank said. "The more time I spent there, the more I thought what was happening there was unusual."

"Right" is Frank's second published book of her photographic works, following her 2004 series on social hierarchies in high schools across the country.

The book, called "High School," examines how students dress themselves to communicate for the group to which they belong.

"It's the whole notion of what it takes to fit in," said Frank, who visited 18 schools for the project.

She is currently working on a book about California boys, a project that started three years ago.

Originally from Cherry Hill, N.J., Frank is an award-winning photographer whose work has been exhibited across the globe, including the Getty Museum and the Museum of Modern Art in San Francisco. Her photos have also been featured in The New York Times Magazine and Newsweek.

She became involved in photography as a freshman in college when she began taking shots with her Nikon camera, which later got stolen. After receiving her master's degree in film production at USC, Frank moved to San Francisco where she lived for 11 years, making documentary and short films.

In 2003, Frank and her family moved to Santa Monica where her studio is also located.

For Frank, her time with the students at Patrick Henry College showed her how philosophically diverse society is.

"You don't have to go to the far reaches of the earth to find cultures and places that are very different from your own," Frank said. "This was a world unto itself."

Mother has 14 kids

some of the embryos and, later, the fetuses. She declined.

Her mother said she does not believe her daughter will have any more children.

"She doesn't have any more (frozen embryos), so it's over now," she said. "It has to be."

Nadya Suleman wanted to have children since she was a teenager, "but luckily she couldn't," her mother said.

"Instead of becoming a kindergarten teacher or something, she started having them, but not the normal way," her mother said.

Her daughter's obsession with children caused Angela Suleman considerable stress, so she sought help from a psychologist, who told her to order her daughter out of the house.

"Maybe she wouldn't have had so many kids then, but she is a grown woman," Angela Suleman said Friday. "I feel responsible and I didn't want to throw her out."

Little psychological research has been pursued into the reasons why some mothers seem hooked on repeated pregnancies. David Diamond, a co-director for the Center for Reproductive Psychology in San Diego, said mothers can be drawn to repeat pregnancies for a number of reasons, with some finding the experience so satisfying they choose to become surrogates.

Diane G. Sanford, a psychologist and author specializing in women's reproductive mental health, said while she doesn't know much about Nadya Suleman's background, women that have obsessive-compulsive disorder can become preoccupied with different obsessions.

"Her obsession centers around children, having children and being a mother," she said. "To what degree are her esteem and identity based on being a mom and why has this from a young age been such a preoccupation of hers?"

Yolanda Garcia, 49, of Whittier, said she helped care for Nadya Suleman's autistic son three years ago.

"From what I could tell back then, she was pretty happy with herself, saying she liked having kids and she wanted 12 kids in all," Garcia told the Long Beach Press-Telegram.

Her fertility doctor has not been identified. Her mother told the Los Angeles Times all the children came from the same sperm donor but she declined to identify him.

Birth certificates reviewed by The Associated Press identify a David Solomon as the father for the four oldest children. Certificates for the other children were not immediately available.

Angela Suleman told reporters Friday that doctors implanted far fewer than eight embryos but they multiplied. Experts said this could be possible since Nadya Suleman's system has likely been hyperstimulated for years with fertilization treatments and drugs.

News that the octuplets' mother already had six children sparked an ethical debate in the reproductive medicine field and lively Internet conversations.

"You should always shoot for one," said Marcelle Cedars, a professor at University of California, San Francisco.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.
Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Still in the limelight tonight, Leo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You might want to make some major changes. Pressure builds between what you need to spend and a long-term desire. Can you make your budget work better for you? Tonight: Pay bills first, then go off and enjoy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your smile makes a difference. If you don't react to a difficult boss or elder, you'll come out just fine. You don't need to engage in others' issues, even if you might be triggered by their choices. Tonight: Worry less about what night it is, and enjoy yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Touch base with your inner needs. Stay on top of your game. Your instincts come through for you on a level you haven't seen lately. Tonight: Do something just for yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Don't hesitate to zero in on what is important. You might want to rethink a situation more carefully that surrounds a friendship. You might not always have the best answer, but most certainly you have a strong suggestion. Tonight: Where the gang is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Others often look up to you. Investigate what might need to happen, even if you feel tense about a key associate or friend. Someone at a distance demonstrates his or her caring in an unprecedented manner. Tonight: Still in the limelight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Creativity and ingenuity mix well. Still, at the same time, you might want to detach in order to find the right solution. If it helps to broaden your mental and emotional outlook, investigate another idea or way of thinking. Tonight: Put on music while answering e-mail.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Work with others directly to get desired results. You discover that dialoguing and brainstorming make a big difference in a solution. A child or loved one could play a big role in events. A partner suddenly becomes easier. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Others clearly want to and will dominate, no matter what goes on. Suddenly, a more gentle and caring attitude touches you and others. Listen to what is being shared. A must appearance affects you deeply. Tonight: Just don't play the recluse!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You get a lot done quite quickly. However, be sure you have cleared up a problem. A boss, or even you, might be fussy or hard. Tonight: Relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Your creativity bubbles up, whether you are dealing with an idea or a family member. Use your endless imagination to make a situation work or to take a project to the finish line. Remain anchored. Tonight: Let your hair down.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You find that you are in a bind no matter which way you turn. Acknowledge a potential change. You don't have to love it, but you might not have a choice either. Tonight: Happy at home

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might want to revise your thinking and walk in a new direction. How you handle a personal matter could change once you gather all the facts. Investigate what you believe to be true, and confirm it. Tonight: Your treat.

Happy birthday

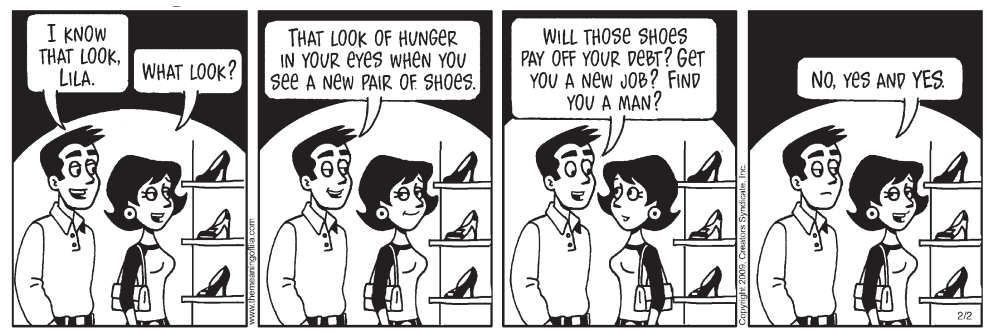

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

You will want to take a stronger stand this year. Be sure it benefits you to adopt an attitude of rigidity in a certain area. Your caring attitude and way of handling situations make you a star in your immediate circle. You often might wonder which way to go within partnerships. If you are single, you'll meet people with ease, often close to home or through friends and family. Take your time choosing Mr. or Ms. Right, as you will have many choices. If you are attached, consider different ways of handling prime security matters. Also be willing to split household chores and responsibilities. TAURUS can be tough to deal with.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Among the medical oddities mentioned in a December Wall Street Journal roundup was "Jumping Frenchmen of Maine Disorder," in which a person, when startled, would "jump, twitch, flail their limbs and obey commands given suddenly, even if it means hurting themselves or a loved one." It was first observed in 1878 among lumberjacks in Maine but has been reported also among factory workers in Malaysia and Siberia. It is believed to result from a genetic mutation that blocks the calming of the central nervous system (but could be merely psychological, from the stress of working in close quarters).

■ In January, police in Cape Coral, Fla., were seeking LaKeitha Watson-Atkinson for shoplifting from a TJ Maxx. The thief escaped after running from store security, but not before she was knocked down twice by her getaway car. In the commotion, a check made out to Watson-Atkinson fell to the ground.

■ Marie-Eve Dean, 23, was ordered into intensive therapy in December by a judge in Ottawa, Ontario, after her conviction for mischief in making more than 10,000 crank phone calls to the city's 911 line, apparently just to protest the legal system's treatment of her former brother-in-law in a child-custody case.

■ A South Korean man identified only as Kim, wanted in Seoul for murder, had a more enduring grudge. Police charged the 37-year-old man with the November slaying of his high school music teacher after stewing for 21 years over the teacher's 1987 accusation that Kim cheated in class.

■ An exceptionally cold winter brings more instances of the annual tragedy of young boys (rarely, girls) who could not resist the age-old physics experiment to see what would happen if, in sub-zero temperatures, they tried to lick a metal pole. In fact, it happened on successive days: a 10-year-old in Hammond, Ind., on Jan. 14 and a 6-year-old in Omaha, Neb., on the 15th. Both episodes ended badly with traces of the boys' tongues left on the poles.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1943 The remainder of Nazi forces from the Battle of Stalingrad surrendered in a major victory for the Soviets in World War II.

1536 Present-day Buenos Aires, Argentina, was founded by Pedro de Mendoza of Spain.

1653 New Amsterdam – now New York City – was incorporated.

1848 The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, ending the Mexican-American War, was signed.

1870 The "Cardiff Giant," supposedly the petrified remains of a human discovered in Cardiff, N.Y., was revealed to be nothing more than carved gypsum.

1876 The National League of Professional Base Ball Clubs was formed in New York.
