Council considers new major bike route

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

MICHIGAN AVE Cyclists are on the verge of scoring some major upgrades.

City Council will take a look at the plans for a major bike route in Santa Monica from the incoming Expo Light Rail's Bergamot Station to the Santa Monica Pier.

Council will only consider funding of one part of the route Tuesday night, a section around Santa Monica High School. The rest of the route will be funded over the next eight years and beyond.

City planners studied the Michigan Avenue Neighborhood Greenway (MANGO) with a grant from Caltrans.

One aspect of that plan, which would include traffic diverters at 11th Street on Michigan Avenue, has stirred some controversy in the Pico Neighborhood — where a majority of the route runs — since it passed through Planning Commission last year. These diverters would restrict turns.

One faction of the Pico Neighborhood Association favors the diverters while anoth-

L.A. residents moving east despite lack of available jobs

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES During the recession, Los Angeles County lost tens of thousands of residents to the eastern counties of the Inland Empire despite the area's staggering unemployment rate, new Census Bureau estimates reveals.

The migration marked the nation's biggest net county-to-county movement from 2007 to 2011, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

According to the Census data roughly 35,000 more people moved to the Inland Empire from Los Angeles County than the opposite direction. The migration occurred as Riverside and San Bernardino counties lost 144,000 jobs.

The gulf in housing costs continued to be a powerful force drawing the Pacific coast city's residents eastward, where the median price for a home is almost $200,000 less than the $449,000 average in Los Angeles County, said John Husing, chief economist of the Inland Empire Econimic Partnership.

The people who moved included rich and poor spanning across educational levels, according to the newly released Census Bureau estimates.

"People respond to prices," Husing told the

State health exchange planning for budget deficit

MICHAEL R. BLOOD
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES Covered California, held up as a jewel in the nation's up-and-down health care overhaul, is setting aside nearly $200 million to fight off projected budget shortfalls as it prepares for what it says is a challenging financial future without hundreds of millions of dollars in federal aid.

Officials brimmed with confidence after the agency tallied 625,000 individual or family health care enrollments through mid-January, the most of any state. They also say its survival is not assured, in part because of the uncertainty around sign-ups that are key to the exchange's success.

The greatest vulnerabilities include the "long-term sustainability of the organization" after federal grants that have been its sole source of support, more than $1 billion so far, dry up this year, the agency's executive director, Peter Lee, wrote in December to the California Department of Finance.

Lee outlined a list of potential risks that, along with the pace of enrollments, included safeguarding personal data, staff training and turnover, and protecting the agency from fraud and waste. To be self-sustaining, he said,

MAKING A GO OF IT: Santa Monica High School's Mikhail Brown attempts a shot against Beverly Hills on Friday at home. Beverly Hills walked away with the win, 58-45, and seized control of first place in the Ocean League in the process.

Santa Monica loses pivotal matchup with Beverly Hills

BY ED GONZALEZ
Special to the Daily Press

SAMOHI Santa Monica High's campus was excited all week for a first place Ocean League basketball showdown against rival Beverly Hills on Friday.

Yet it all seemed to slip away for the Vikings in the opening minutes of a 58-45 loss to the Normans.

Santa Monica never led as Beverly Hills began the game on a 9-2 run, held a 13-5 lead at the end of the first quarter and pushed their advantage to 20 points with four minutes left until half-time.

It was not how Santa Monica head coach James Hecht wanted his team to start the contest.

"Not at all. I give all the credit to Beverly; they jumped out on us early. We did not respond until the deficit was too large to overcome." Hecht said.

The Vikings had trouble stopping Norman point guard Siavash Yektafar. The senior had a 30 points performance, including four three-pointers.

Santa Monica's leading scorer, Jonah Mathews, had 14 points but was held to only two points in the first half as the Beverly Hills defense prevented him for touching the ball.

"The last time we played them, I scored a lot. They wanted to shut me down and did a good job of it in the first half," said Mathews.

Another factor for their poor first half according to Mathews and senior point guard Ray Mancini was the large contingent of Beverly Hills' fans that got rowdy after the Normans took the early lead.

'Lego Movie' opens with big $69.1M box office

JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

NEW YORK "The Lego Movie" clicked with moviegoers, assembling an exceptional $69.1 million debut at the weekend box office, according to studio estimates.

The better-than-expected result made the Warner Bros. collaboration with the Danish toy company easily the biggest hit of the year so far. A sequel is already in development for the 3-D animated film, digitally drawn to mimic a world composed entirely of Lego bricks.

The film has drawn raves from critics. Co-directors and co-writers Phil Lord and Chris Miller ("21 Jump Street," "Cloudy With a Chance of Meatballs") gave the film a playful tone to capture the whimsy of a child playing in a box of Legos. Characters are largely voiced by comic actors like Will Ferrell and Chris Pratt.

The film marks the biggest animation hit for Warner Bros., a studio that despite popular live-action franchises has struggled to develop animated hits on par with other studios.

"I can't imagine this not turning into a long-term franchise," said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst for box-office tracker Rentrak. "This is such a runaway success that Warner Bros is now a major player in the animated genre."

Dan Fellman, head of distribution for Warner Bros., said the film, made with a production budget of $60 million, resounded because of the popularity of the Lego brand. This is the first feature film for the toy company. Fellow toy-maker Hasbro has seen mixed results since the launch of the "Transformers" franchise, which was followed by "G.I. Joe: Rise of the Cobra" and the notorious flop "Battleship."

George Clooney's World War II caper "The Monuments Men" opened in second place with $22.7 million. Reviews have been weak for the based-on-a-true-story tale about the mission to retrieve artwork stolen by the Nazis.

The Sony Pictures film was postponed from a Dec. 25 release because, Clooney then said, more time was needed to finish the visual effects. Clooney served as director, co-writer, producer and star on the film.

Managing traffic

Editor:

An ongoing story at Planning Commission meetings in the second half of 2013 was information secured by commissioners that discloses weaknesses in the city's efforts to mitigate the effects of additional traffic generated by new developments. Most recently, Commissioner Jim Ries appears to have succeeded in persuading fellow commissioners to raise to $150,000 the sum recommended to be required of one developer for efforts to mitigate traffic congestion associated with a new project (the Planning Department had recommended a payment of $15,000). It is obvious that a more robust program of traffic mitigation will be required if city streets are to absorb the new traffic associated with current development proposals.

In a front page article of Friday, Jan. 24, ("City Hall says all but one development in compliance"), the SMDP reports that the city is meeting its targets for traffic mitigation associated with new development agreements in the city. Only one party, the new Agensys campus on Stewart Street, was found to have failed to meet its target of reducing vehicle traffic among employees by 50 percent. Instead, Agensys' reduction was found to be closer to 30 percent. Doubtless, this helps.

One reason for the good news is the fact that prior development agreements do not require parties actually to achieve the targets for reductions set by the city. By definition, then, projects that fail to meet these targets such as Saint John's Health Center and the Colorado Center are not in violation of code since there is no requirement in place.

Experience to date indicates that the most promising way to reduce new commuter traffic is to levy a fee for each day that a particular vehicle travels into and out of the city during morning and late-day rush hours. The city is slowly moving in this direction although the fees currently proposed for the new Hines project between 26th and 28th Streets at Olympic Boulevard are likely to prove an insufficient deterrent.

Building near transportation

Editor:

The Hines project at Bergamot is consistent with our city's strategy of directing growth to this station area, helps us meet our sustainability goals and prepares us for the future. Transit oriented communities like this proposal are a key solution to our gridlock, allowing increasing numbers of people to live car-free and car-light lifestyles. Pam O'Connor has been a tireless leader in promoting this same vision in her work on our City Council as well as on Metro.

That the Hines project is consistent with these values indicates to me that our city's leaders have been effective in promoting this vision to those who want to build here. In this light, I find Councilmember O'Connor's acceptance of legal donations from Hines no more troubling than any candidate's acceptance of funding from people who share their views.

City Hall drives us crazy

LAST TUESDAY NIGHT, CITY COUNCIL approved a development agreement (DA) allowing Texas developer Hines to build nearly 767,000 square feet of creative office, commercial and residential space along Olympic Boulevard.

Most residents strongly opposed the Bergamot Transit Village (BTV) DA because of the traffic congestion that will result. Despite letter writing campaigns and massive rallies on City Hall's lawn that urged council members to "just say 'no,'" they just said "yes."

For the record, Mayor Pam O'Connor, Mayor Pro-Tem Terry O'Day and council members Bob Holbrook and Gleam Davis supported the DA while Kevin McKeown, Tony Vazquez and Ted Winterer didn't

What's next? The project will be officially approved by council at a second reading tomorrow night, then we'll find out if enough Santa Monicans are angry enough to stop it.

A new organization called Residocracy.org will launch an official referendum petition to overrule council's decision on the Bergamot development and "Take Our Town Back."

A "Referendum Launch Event" will be held on Wed., Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. at the SGI Auditorium at Sixth Street and Wilshire Boulevard. Printed petitions will be available at the event and on Residocracy's website to download, print, and circulate for registered voter signatures.

There's also talk of litigation and the Santa Monica Coalition for a Livable City (SMCLC) will announce their plans later this week.

I'm hearing that O'Day and O'Connor who voted "yes' on this (and virtually every new development that's come before them) think that most Santa Monicans support all these projects and that opposition only involves a couple hundred hysterical no-growthers.

They're in for a big surprise. O'Connor's vote along with her acceptance of many campaign contributions from developers such as Hines will pretty much kill any chance for her re-election effort this fall. Plus, O'Connor specifically has been targeted for "retirement."

Holbrook, whose term is up this fall, isn't likely to run again which is just as well. His consistent pro-development votes have made him a target, too. O'Day and Davis will feel the wrath of voters in 2016.

As bad as the traffic and congestion from the BTV promises to be, MANgo or the Michigan Avenue Greenway project from Stewart Street to Santa Monica High School — and eventually on to the beach is worse. It's also on council's agenda for review, tomorrow.

Thirty members of planning staff including three paid consultants came up with this latest experiment in traffic calming to force us to walk more and ride bicycles. It'll turn Michigan Avenue into the city's longest recreational park.

MANgo is being promoted as "a safe and comfortable place for neighbors of all ages to walk, bike, relax and interact with one another." Yep.

The fact that it essentially semi-privatizes the street by limiting public access in front of the home of a vocal Santa Monica cycling advocate may or may not be relevant. But, to the unicorn chasers in City Hall, it's too good of an opportunity to pass up.

Planners promise that MANgo "will make it easier to get around the Pico Neighborhood," however traffic diverters at key intersections, turn restrictions, shrinking traffic lanes, mid-street islands and roundabouts, wide sidewalks, mini-parks, curb extensions that interfere with turns and bulb-outs that make cars maneuver around extended planted areas built into current parking spaces contradict that promise.

Michigan Avenue intersections with Seventh Street, Lincoln Boulevard; 11th, 14th, 17th and 20th streets will all have street impediments to slow and discourage traffic.

Staff's Pollyanna vision is a shared space/street with gamboling children, strolling pedestrians, carefree bicyclists and contented motorists in the same space at the same time. I'm wondering how fire and delivery trucks or emergency vehicles will handle the obstacle course?

Pico neighbors are upset because, at the last moment, someone slipped "a maximum target of 2,000 vehicle trips per day along the greenway" into the concept plan. "It's nothing more than a thinly veiled strategy aimed at imposing traffic diverters on a community that has overwhelmingly rejected the concept of diverters," one angry Pico resident told me.

City Council will also review concepts for the "Safe Routes to School" scheme for Michigan, Seventh Street and Pico Boulevard near Santa Monica High School. This is where pedestrians, dual-direction bicycle lanes and a single, one-way vehicular traffic lane will all collide next to Samohi. I question the safety benefits of this mess.

Plans include reducing vehicle lanes to 10 feet wide on Pico between Sixth and Seventh streets to accommodate a 12-foot wide, bi-directional track for bicyclists riding to/from Ocean Park. Plus, there's a whole host of other traffic jamming elements proposed for the entire area. City Council will love it. You'll hate it.

An item calling for the same kind of road alterations for Berkeley Street between Wilshire Boulevard and Montana Avenue is also on council's agenda.

Alterations proposed include realignment of Berkeley's intersection with Stanford Street; two median islands (between Stanford and Lipton Avenue), a traffic calming circle at Lipton along with two curb extensions; and channelizers at the Wilshire intersection. It's a recipe for more gridlock. Council will be ecstatic.

Until there's a turnover in political thinking in City Hall and staff is forced to respond to real citizen needs — like solving traffic problems instead of pursuing pipe dreams — we're going to have lot's more ludicrous traffic proposals guaranteed to make congestion worse.

Panel says federal wolf plan used unproven science

MATTHEW BROWN
Associated Press

BILLINGS, Mont. A proposal to lift federal protections for gray wolves across most of the U.S. suffered a significant setback Friday as an independent review panel said the government is relying on unsettled science to make its case.

Federal wildlife officials want to remove the animals from the endangered species list across the Lower 48 states, except for a small population in the Southwest.

The five-member U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service peer-review panel was tasked with reviewing the government's claim that the Northeast and Midwest were home to a separate species, the eastern wolf.

If the government were right, that would make gray wolf recovery unnecessary in those areas.

But the peer reviewers concluded unanimously that the scientific research cited by the government was insufficient.

That could make it difficult for federal officials to stick with their proposal as it now stands, further protracting the emotionally charged debate over what parts of the U.S. are suitable for the predators.

"The process was clean and the results were unequivocal," said panel member Steven Courtney, a scientist at the National Center for Ecological Analysis and Synthesis at the University of California in Santa Barbara. "The science used by the Fish and wildlife service concerning genetics and taxonomy of wolves was preliminary and currently not the best available science."

Wolves were added to the endangered species list in 1975 after being exterminated last century across most of the Lower 48 states under government-sponsored trapping and poisoning programs.

Hunting for wolves already is allowed for roughly 5,000 wolves in the Northern Rockies and Great Lakes, where protections were lifted in 2011. More than 900 of the animals have been shot or caught by trappers in the two regions during this winter's hunting season.

A struggling population of several dozen Mexican gray wolves in the desert Southwest would remain on the endangered list under the government's plan. The Southeast is home to a separate species, the red wolf, which remains highly endangered.

The release of the peer review findings opens another round of public input on a proposal that has received more one million comments.

"Obviously we do take the comments from peer reviewers very seriously and we need to take those into account," Fish and Wildlife Service spokesman Chris Tollefson said.

The Fish and Wildlife Service already faced fervent opposition to its plan from some scientists, wildlife advocates and members of Congress. They've argued that protections should remain in place given that vast areas of potentially suitable wolf habitat remain unoccupied in the southern Rocky Mountains, along the West Coast and in the Northeast.

Carlos Carroll, a wolf researcher at the Klamath Center for Conservation Research in Orleans, Calif., said the problems highlighted by the peer-review panel had been raised previously by others. He said he hoped they would now get more attention from wildlife officials.

"This gives them a chance to re-evaluate their strategy and say it's time to listen to the science," Carroll said.

The ranking Democrat on the U.S. House Natural Resources Committee, Oregon Rep. Peter DeFazio, on Friday called on the Fish and Wildlife Service to rescind its proposal in light of the peer review.

But feelings run strong on both sides of the issue. Many Republican lawmakers, agricultural interests and hunting groups have pushed equally hard for jurisdiction over wolves to be passed to states so they could manage the population through annual harvests.

Those efforts have been motivated in large part by wolf attacks on livestock and big game herds in areas where the predators have recovered.

David Allen, with the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, said that after several years of hunting, it's clear the harvests are not driving down the wolf population too aggressively.

An earlier peer-review panel charged with reviewing the delisting proposal was dissolved last summer, after criticisms arose when three scientists who had been critical of the government's wolf plan were told they couldn't serve.

One of the three — Robert Wayne at the University of California Los Angeles — was later named to the panel that came up with Friday's report.

Officials had aimed for a final decision on the matter this summer. That's now uncertain after delays in the peer review and time lost to the federal government shutdown in the fall.

The Q Line

Vote it down?

The City Council last week approved the controversial Bergamot Transit Village despite considerable opposition from a number of local residents. There is now a movement afoot to create a referendum to give the public a chance to vote the project down.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Would you vote to nix the development and why?

Contact qline@smdp.com before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. You can also call 310-573-8354.

WHICH WAY TO GO? The 2011 Fukushima nuclear disaster did cause many nations to reconsider their nuclear commitments, but many countries are still looking to nuclear power as a way to increase energy production without adding to greenhouse gas emissions.

Fate of nuclear power

Dear EarthTalk:

I thought Japan's 2011 Fukushima nuclear plant meltdown would have sealed nuclear power's fate, but I keep hearing otherwise. Can you enlighten?

Jacob Allen
New York, NY

THE 2011 FUKUSHIMA NUCLEAR DIS-aster did cause many nations to reconsider their nuclear committments, though many European countries — Switzerland, Belgium, Austria, Germany, Italy, Spain and Sweden — had already begun phasing out nuclear power decades earlier. After Fukushima, Germany, Belgium and Switzerland all moved to decommission their nuclear facilities altogether by 2022, 2025 and 2034 respectively.

Japan's nuclear program, which provided 30 percent of the country's electricity needs before the March 2011 disaster, is now essentially non-operational due to public safety concerns. Furthermore, Japan announced in November 2013 that, due to the shuttering of Fukushima and other nuclear facilities, it was backpedaling its on prior commitments to cut greenhouse gas emissions 25 percent from 1990 levels.

Here in the U.S., Fukushima has not had any major effect on our nuclear industry. No nuclear plants have been closed, license extensions for existing facilities continue to proceed, and the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) has even greenlighted construction of two new reactors at a nuclear power plant in Georgia. But public concerns over the safety of nuclear power and what to do with spent fuel indicate that nukes will likely become a smaller and smaller slice of the U.S. energy pie moving forward.

Elsewhere, however, many countries are looking to nuclear power as a way to increase energy production without adding to greenhouse gas emissions. Casey Research reports that developing countries are increasingly relying on it to supplement coal and other fossil fuels. The International Energy Agency predicts global electricity demand will grow 70 percent by 2035, with the majority of the increase coming from developing countries-China and India combined will account for half of the projected growth.

"Serious pollution problems mean that those developing countries cannot produce all that electricity by burning coal," says Amir Adnani, CEO of Uranium Energy Corporation, a uranium mining company. "The plans to develop nuclear power in China and other countries are very much driven by a set of realities that is very different and very acute. People are dying every year in China, literally choking to death, because of all the toxins that are being put into the environment by burning coal."

China now has 17 nuclear plants in operation and another 29 underway. India has 20 plants running and seven more being built. And the Russian Federation operates 33 and has another 11 in the works. So while it might be premature to call it a "nuclear renaissance," much of the world doesn't seem too worried about what happened at Fukushima. Indeed, nuclear power looks like it could be around for a long time.

According to MIT's Center for Energy and Environmental Policy Research, the real impact of Fukushima has been to remind us all to take safety much more seriously: "While the international nuclear industry appears so far to have dodged being hit square in the head by a bullet from Fukushima, it should not expect that it will get another chance if there is another serious nuclear accident anywhere in the world."

Medical marijuana gains traction in the Deep South

CHRISTINA A. CASSIDY
Associated Press

ATLANTA Medical marijuana has been a non-starter in recent years in the Deep South, where many Republican lawmakers feared it could lead to widespread drug use and social ills. That now appears to be changing, with proposals to allow a form of medical marijuana gaining momentum in a handful of Southern states.

Twenty states and the District of Columbia have legalized medical marijuana, and this year powerful GOP lawmakers in Georgia and Alabama are putting their weight behind bills that would allow for the limited use of cannabis oil by those with specific medical conditions. Other Southern states are also weighing the issue with varying levels of support.

The key to swaying the hearts of conservative lawmakers has been the stories of children suffering up to 100 seizures a day whose parents say they could benefit from access to cannabidiol, which would be administered orally in a liquid form. And proponents argue the cannabis oil is low in tetrahydrocannabinol, or THC, the psychoactive compound in marijuana that makes users feel high.

"I'm an unlikely champion for this cause," said Georgia Rep. Allen Peake, a businessman from Macon who attended the evangelical Dallas Theological Seminary. "Once people realize it's not a 6-year-old smoking a joint, most folks realize this is the compassionate thing to do."

Peake's bill has already earned the backing of more than 80 state lawmakers, including several members of the House Republican leadership, who signed on as co-sponsors and the state's largest professional association of doctors. The bill would revive a long-dormant research program allowing academic institutions to distribute the medical cannabis and would be "limited in scope, tightly restricted, well regulated and managed by doctors," Peake said.

Alabama Rep. Mike Ball, a retired hostage negotiator for the State Patrol, is behind a bill that would allow people to possess the cannabis oil if they have certain medical conditions. It passed a key committee vote on Wednesday.

"The public is starting to understand what this is," said Ball, who chairs a powerful House committee and is a prominent voice on law enforcement issues. "The political fear is shifting from what will happen if we pass it, to might what happen if we don't," Ball said.

The bills in Georgia and Alabama still have more vetting, and their ultimate prospects are not certain. But what is happening offers a strong signal of what's to come in other states.

In Louisiana, although a bill has yet to be introduced, a recent committee hearing at the Capitol on legalizing medical marijuana drew a standing-room-only crowd, and Gov. Bobby Jindal made comments last month indicating he was willing to consider it.

"When it comes to medical marijuana ... if there is a legitimate medical need, I'd certainly be open to making it available under very strict supervision for patients that would benefit from that," Jindal said, according to a report in The Advocate.

Technically, both Georgia and Louisiana have laws on the books from the 1980s and 1990s that allow for the use of medical marijuana, but those programs essentially ended before they could start. Georgia's law established the academic research program for those diagnosed with glaucoma and cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy and radiation, but the program stalled when the federal government stopped delivery of legal cannabis.

Louisiana's law allowed for glaucoma and cancer patients and those suffering from spastic quadriplegia to receive marijuana for therapeutic use but regulations to govern the program were never developed.

In Mississippi, Republican state Sen. Josh Harkins of Brandon is sponsoring a cannabis oil bill similar to the ones in Alabama and Georgia. Harkins said one of his constituents has a 20-month-old daughter with Dravet syndrome, a form of pediatric epilepsy, and the oil can help reduce the number of seizures.

Elsewhere, both Kentucky and Tennessee have medical marijuana bills under consideration although they have yet to gain traction. Kentucky Senate President Rover Stivers, R-Manchester, has said he's not convinced marijuana has legitimate medical purposes and called it an area ripe for abuse.

In Florida, it's likely to become a campaign issue in the fall given that Gov. Rick Scott is up for re-election and a proposed constitutional amendment will be on the ballot that would allow for the medical use of marijuana as determined by a licensed physician. Former Republican Gov. Charlie Crist, now a Democrat seeking to challenge Scott, has called it "an issue of compassion, trusting doctors and trusting the people of Florida."

Meanwhile, Alabama Gov. Robert Bentley has signaled a willingness to discuss medicine that might be derived from marijuana with appropriate federal regulation.

"If someone wants to use the medicine that is in marijuana, go through the same testing that you have to go through when you do that through the (U.S. Food and Drug Administration), you go through all of that, do the testing, the drug testing, that's fine," Bentley said last month. "I have no problem with that. I am not just for prescribing marijuana."

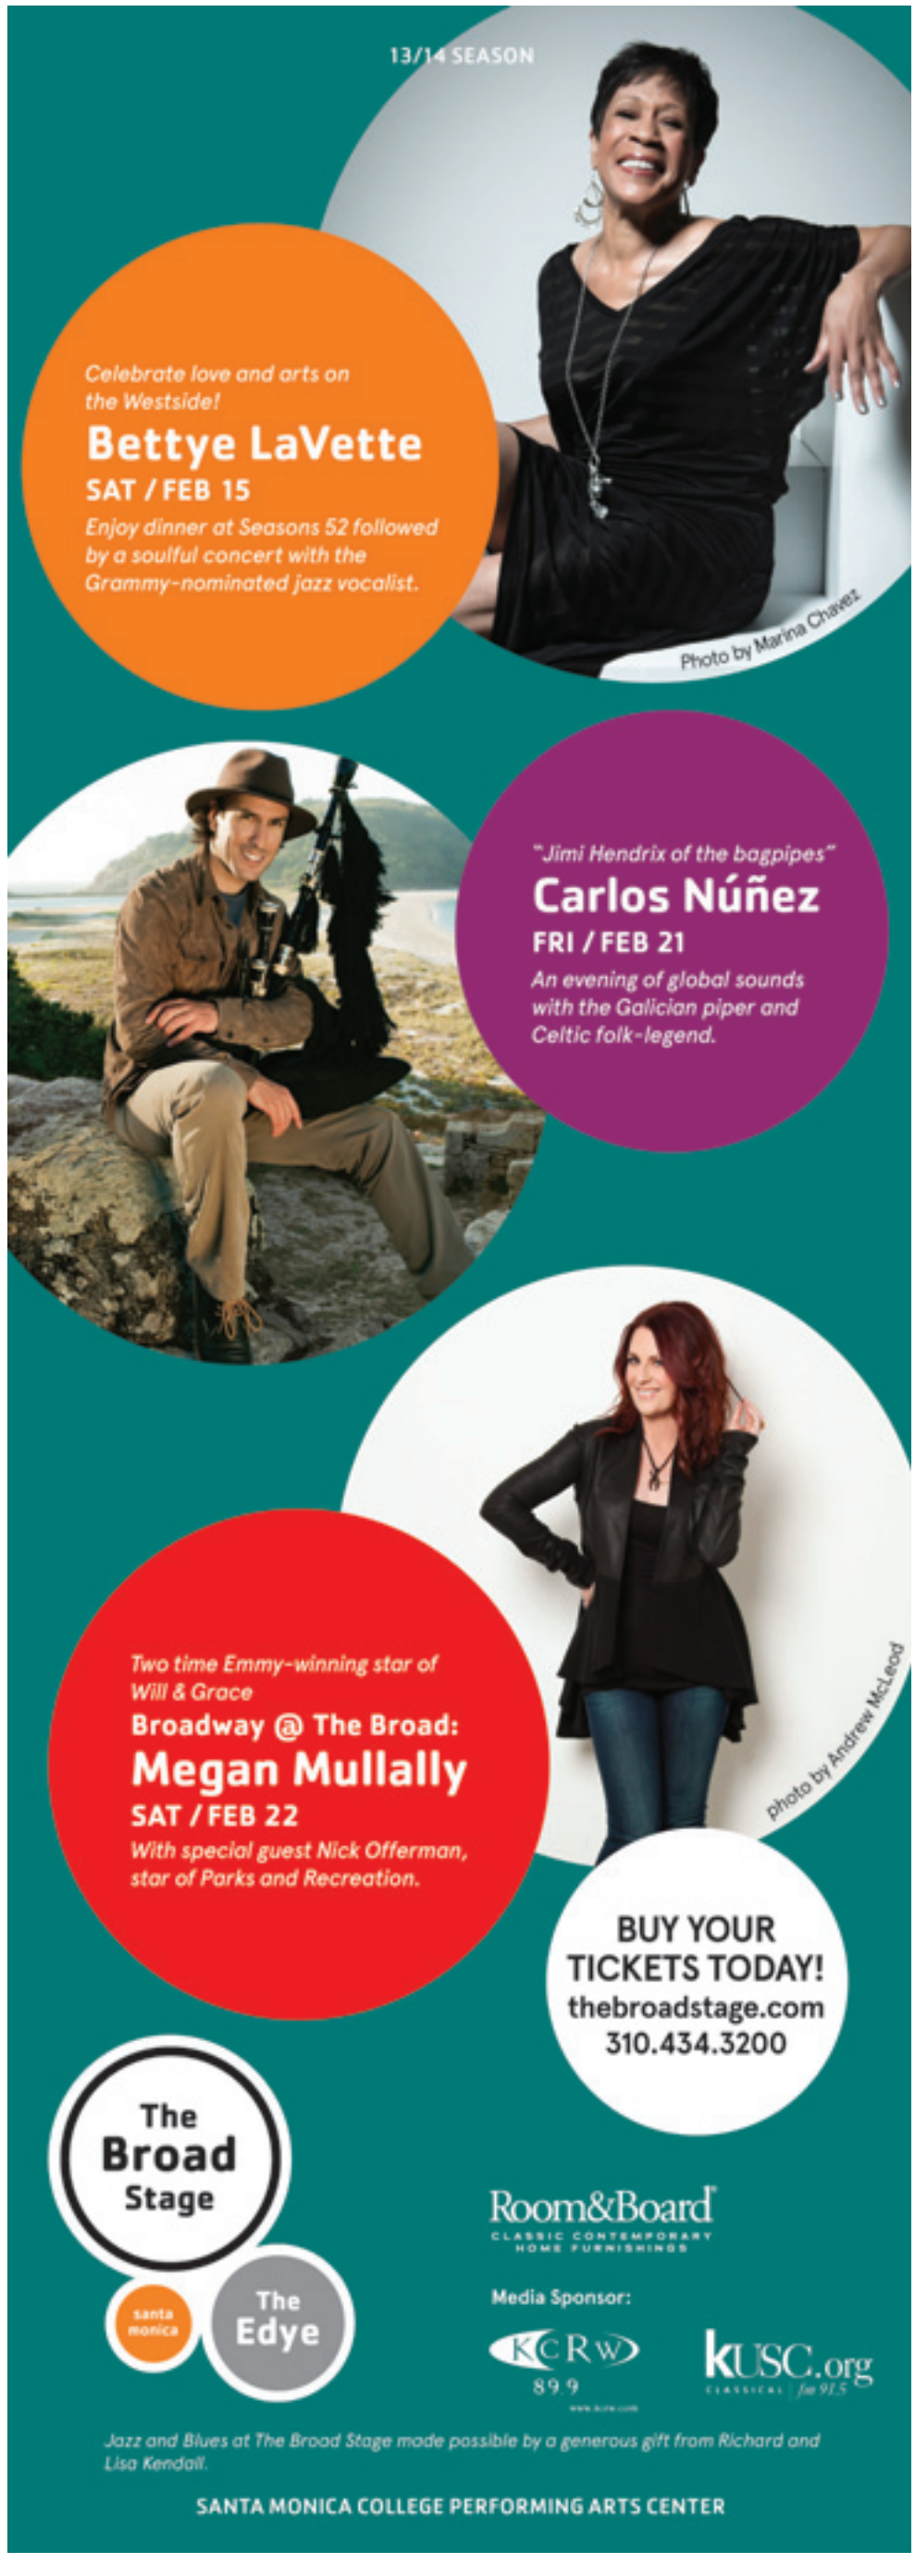

Georgia Gov. Nathan Deal has declined to take a position, but noted the "strong case being presented by some of the families with very serious situations involving their children."

Dustin Chandler, a police officer in Pelham, Ala., has been a major part of the effort there. His daughter, 2-year-old Carly, has three to five seizures each day from a severe neurological condition she has had since infancy. Chandler believes cannabidiol could help control his daughter's seizures and improve her cognitive functioning based on anecdotal evidence seen elsewhere.

Overall, public opinion in support of legalization has shifted in less than a decade, according to William Galston and E.J. Dionne, who co-wrote a paper last year on the topic for The Brookings Institution. The authors noted proponents were shrewd in focusing the earliest campaigns on efforts to allow the use of marijuana for medical purposes, citing a 2013 Pew Research Center survey that three-quarters of Americans, including 72 percent of Republicans, believe marijuana has legitimate medical uses.

Among critics' biggest concerns is that allowing medical marijuana even under a narrow list of circumstance would eventually open the door to widespread use. Peake, the Georgia lawmaker, has been adamant that will not be the case.

"I am concerned as anyone that we would get to a slippery slope of a broader scope of marijuana use in the state," Peake said. "I promise you I will fight that with every bit of energy in me.

the agency will make changes "to reflect ... revenue realities."

That followed a state audit last summer that labeled the agency "high-risk" because of the uncertainty around enrollments. The financial test comes as Minnesota and other states contend with meager sign-ups and questions about the potential for financial bailouts unless participation begins to surge.

The exchanges being operated by 14 states and the District of Columbia are supposed to be self-sustaining by next year, according to the Affordable Care Act. A monthly surcharge on insurance policies is intended as the main money-maker for Covered California.

In its short life, Covered California has grown to oversee a $400 million budget, more than 860 employees and offices throughout the state. The agency is in the process of hiring 350 additional call-center employees, mostly in Fresno.

If the agency fails to generate enough income to pay for its operations, it's not clear whether California taxpayers would be on the hook.

The state law that created the California exchange requires it to operate with a balanced budget and a cash reserve. Additionally, it's prevented from drawing dollars from state government's main checkbook, the general fund, which is supported by taxpayers.

That is, unless there is a separate action by the Legislature, now dominated by Democratic lawmakers who generally support the ACA's goals. The law contemplates the potential for a cash crisis and a "contingency plan should it be impossible to operate the exchange without the use of general fund moneys."

Covered California considers the potential for a taxpayer bailout remote. "So far, our enrollment numbers are outpacing our projections, so we don't anticipate any shortfalls in our budget that might create a need for this," exchange spokeswoman Anne F. Gonzales said in a statement.

The pace of enrollment so far suggests the agency will be able to support its operations in 2015 and into future years, provided sign-ups continue to increase through 2016 and then at least remain stable, said Dylan H. Roby at the University of California, Los Angeles' Fielding School of Public Health.

Roby said in an email that the agency's goal is to maintain a reserve that could cover its expenses for a minimum of three months, even if its income stalls, and that monthly fees paid on policies could be raised if necessary to generate more money.

Agency documents show Covered California plans to put aside $184 million of the more than $1 billion in federal grant money it has received to date as a hedge against anticipated budget shortfalls.

The records show the exchange will need $78 million in reserves to plug a budget hole after July 2015, when expenses will outrun income, and another $34 million to cover a deficit the following year.

While agency officials say Covered California is on track to meet enrollment targets — nearly 2 million individuals by June 2016 — planning documents and government reports sketch out the danger if those numbers ebb.

The state auditor raised the possibility of a troubling cycle in which enrollment falls and fees are raised to fill the gap. The threat is that higher policy premiums would then push sign-ups even lower.

In one scenario, the auditor said that if enrollment dips sharply below projections, individual fees in the year that begins July 2015 could surpass $20 a month, up from $13.95, to keep the agency solvent while retaining a reserve.

Sluggish enrollment also could force cuts to service-center staffing and other expenses to keep the budget in line.

"Covered California's financial sustainability is wholly dependent on enrollment," the auditor concluded.

Enrollments were averaging about 100,000 a week in December, but they fell to an average of 58,000 in the first two weeks of January, according to agency figures. Agency officials hope enrollment will be robust so fees paid by individuals and small businesses can be lowered.

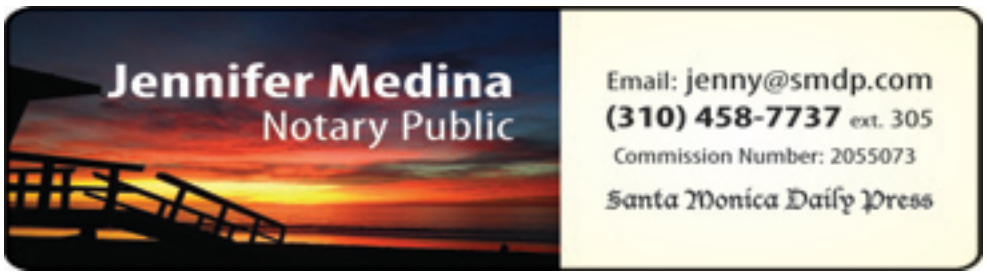

Since insurance policies purchased under the ACA took effect Jan. 1, the agency has faced criticism for lackluster sign-ups among Hispanics and younger people, as well as confusion over billing and paperwork problems that have left an unknown number of consumers in limbo.

There also are complaints about long wait times at the exchange's three telephone call centers and problems with the online enrollment site — issues that could discourage enrollment.

A state lawmaker last week called for a probe of the agency's balance sheet and advertising spending, which is on track to top $300 million for TV ads, billboards, door-to-door visits and other sales pitches intended to encourage sign-ups.

"I'm not sure the way it's structured it's actually going to contain costs, and I'm not sure what the costs are going to be," said state Sen. Ted Gaines, a Republican who submitted the request to the Joint Legislative Audit Committee.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

er opposes it. These groups performed separate surveys about the diverters and came back with opposite results, city planners said.

As a compromise, planners recommend the traffic diverters being in place only during rush hours. During weekends and off-hours, car access would be allowed.

A cycle track, only for bikes, was originally proposed but was removed for the council proposal because residents were unhappy about the possibility of losing parking on Michigan Avenue.

The route will protect bikers and pedestrians through enhanced lighting, crosswalks, additional landscaping, sharrows, traffic circles, chicanes and slow-movement intersections.

While the project is largely unfunded at the moment, a connector to Samohi got an $880,000 Safe Routes to School grant, which requires a $100,000 City Hall match.

This will likely be the first part of the greenway to be constructed.

City planners are recommending one-way traffic for sections of Michigan Avenue and Seventh Street.

"A change in the flow of vehicles would allow continuation of the existing drop-off and pick-up locations here, while reducing the number of students crossing midblock in front of vehicles and across on-coming traffic," planners said.

Michigan Avenue would become one-way westbound west of Lincoln Boulevard and connect to a southbound one-way on Seventh Street to Pico Boulevard.

The idea drew some dissent at meetings last year when residents adjacent to the school expressed fear that the one-way streets would cause traffic in the area.

Samohi students spoke at a public meeting in October, explaining that they had been doored, or knocked off their bikes by students opening car doors in front of their path.

A new traffic signal and crosswalk would be added at the corner of Pico Boulevard and Seventh Street. New bike lanes would be added to the area as well. Some trees would have to be removed or relocated to make room.

A traffic study prepared by City Hall showed that no intersections would be significantly impacted by the changes.

If council approves the route, planners are hoping construction will be finished over Samohi's summer break.

GETTING HOME: Santa Monica High School students leave campus along Michigan Avenue.

"We were undisciplined in the first quarter and let the crowd get to us," Mancini said. "We were trying to shut the crowd up with one shot."

Mathews followed up on the size of the crowd.

"It was a hyped game, I did not think [Beverly] would bring that many fans." Mathews said.

Santa Monica trailed 42-29 at half-time and by the same 13 points at the end of the third quarter.

They seemed to finally get some momentum when back-to-back three-point baskets by Chris Johnson and Mathews were followed by a Mikhail Brown put back as a Vikings 10-2 run cut the Beverly Hills lead down to four.

However, Santa Monica could never get any closer as Beverly Hills' guard Ryan Manoocheri drilled a three-pointer to end the rally.

"We cut in down to four then had a couple of turnovers in a row. Beverly did not have many turnovers tonight. They kept their poise and composure," Hecht said.

Beverly Hills (17-8, 7-1 Ocean League) struggled at the free throw line down the stretch last year in Santa Monica but made 9 of 12 from the charity stripe in the final five minutes.

It was a tough way to lose to a rival on senior night, but Mancini knows his team fought to the bitter end.

"We kept battling and battling. We were going down swinging and we kept swinging," said Mancini who had seven points. "We gave them a good fight but they beat us in 12 rounds."

The loss drops Santa Monica (14-10, 6-2) into a second-place tie in the Ocean League standings with Inglewood.

They still have a chance to claim a share of the conference title if Inglewood defeats Beverly Hills and the Vikings win their final two games against Hawthorne and Morningside this week.

newspaper. "The difficulty is that people move before the jobs move."

At the worst point after the downturn, unemployment rates topped 14 percent in the Inland Empire, well above the California average.

The flow of people further inland and away from the coast will continue to shape how California plans for transportation, schools and water supplies, said Public Policy Institute of California senior fellow Hans Johnson.

"And all these discussions are driven by the fact that this population is moving to find more affordable housing," he said.

People with less education left Los Angeles County for elsewhere in California and the nation at higher rates than did people with more schooling, according to an analysis by Brookings Institution demographer William Frey.

At the same time, the flow of immigrants into Los Angeles County from Asia, Central America and other parts of the globe included some 17,000 people with bachelor's degrees or more advanced education.

The influx from abroad is the only reason Los Angeles County increased its number of residents with college degrees from 2007 to 2011, Frey said.

The recession helped slow the rate of relocation of Los Angeles residents.

The eastward migration was far higher before the downturn.

Between 2000 and 2006, roughly 300,000 more people relocated from Los Angeles County to Riverside and San Bernardino counties than moved in the opposite direction.

TREAT YOURSELF TONIGHT, GEM

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You will tap into your intuitive feelings in the morning. As a result, a far-out idea is likely to surface. You will want to work with it, yet you might realize that it could take you down a strange path. No matter what, you will land on your feet. Tonight: Happily head home.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ You need to understand what is happening behind the scenes with a friend. You will get a better sense of that when in a meeting with this person. Idealism is wonderful, but it needs to be anchored. Tonight: Catch up on news.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Your finances are more important than you might realize. You understand money and its power well, but you probably have never seen someone look at it the way an associate does. Money could be the driving force behind this person's decisions. Tonight: Treat yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You might feel as if you can't easily be stopped, no matter what you do. Consider your alternatives in a difficult situation. You are likely to succeed in whatever you do, as you seem to be carrying a lucky rabbit's foot in your back pocket. Tonight: As you like it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ You might sense that a low profile will work better for you in increasing your efficiency. A partner could feed you some interesting ideas. Tap into your creativity, and you'll come up with unique solutions. Tonight: Call a favorite person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ A positive attitude will point to success. You could find that several meetings will give you a lot of feedback. Defer to a partner, and let this person know that you have confidence in his or her abilities. Tonight: Where your friends are.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You must step up to the plate to hit a home run. Others will follow your lead and succeed. You might be overly concerned about your responsibilities, as they seem to find their way to you. Tonight: A must appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You need to reach out to someone at a distance. Your creativity will flourish if you follow your feelings. Know that you will land on your feet. An unexpected development in your daily life could force you to regroup. Tonight: Make it an early night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Work with a partner or an associate directly. You might need to switch gears in order to deal with a problem that arises. Others will see you in a special light. Opportunities could arise from out of the blue. Be ready to jump on a good idea. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Be more forthright with an opportunity involving someone you care a lot about. Communication is likely to excel. You seem to know who is on the phone before you even pick it up. Your sensitivity will be at its peak. Tonight: Go along with someone's request.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ "All work and no play" doesn't suit you. You'll need to maintain a positive attitude in order to make a dream a reality. You will need time to consider your various options. Make it OK to head down a new path. Tonight: Buy a favorite treat on the way home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Your creativity will appear to be endless, which could excite many people. You know what is going on behind the scenes. Confirm what you think is true, but try not to be overconfident. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

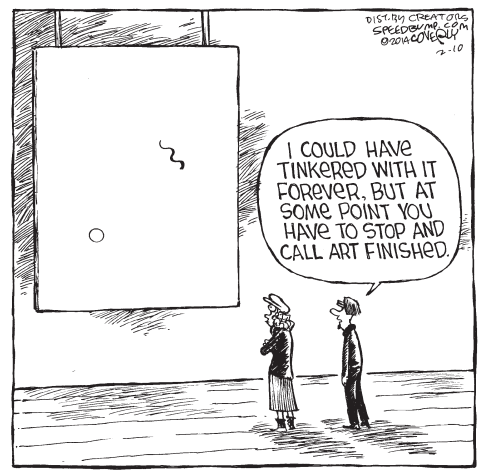

Monday, February 10, 2014

This year you toss yourself into your day-to-day life with the objective of becoming more efficient and fulfilled. You also will be open to learning more, which could lead to transforming your life or your health habits; however, you might not be thinking long term. If you are single, you could be witnessing substantial change in your daily life. The person who appeals to you today might not catch your eye in a few months. Be open and kind to potential suitors -- get to know them better. If you are attached, the two of you will be more upbeat than you have been if you make an effort to make each other's life easier. Let a new hobby evolve. Surprises seem to mark your life together this year. CANCER is far too emotional for you.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Holy Mutations: Deformed animals born in developing countries often attract streams of pilgrims, seeking to touch a creature considered divinely blessed. In December, a five-legged cow in Raipur, India, had supposedly "caused" the last 30 women who touched it to give birth to boys. And a day after that report came one from Phuket, Thailand, in which a newborn gecko with six legs and two heads has become a magnet for visitors seeking clues to winning lottery numbers.

■ The International New York Times edition published in Kuala Lumpur on Jan. 22 carried a page-one story noting increased worldwide demand by meat processors for pigs raised in the fresh air rather than enclosed in pens -- illustrated by a photograph of a cluster of pigs feeding in an outdoor stall. However, the Malaysian printer (who had downloaded the digital pages and set them to paper) had added black boxes to cover just the faces of each pig in the photo. "If there is picture of nudes or (the) like, this we will cover (up)," a publisher's spokesman told the Malay Mail. "This is a Muslim country." (The story, headline and photo were otherwise identical to the versions that appeared elsewhere in New York Times editions.)

Have You Been Injured in an Auto Accident?

If you believe that you or a family member are entitled to compensation for an injury, the best thing you can do is speak to an experienced personal injury attorney. You may be entitled to compensation for your injury including lost wages.

Find out how much your claim is worth right now!

Get immediate consultation 24/7. This a cost free, no obligation call.

Negligence and Auto Accidents

To have a valid car accident claim, you must first determine the negligent party or parties that caused the car crash. You may suspect that another driver, pedestrian, motorcyclist etc. acted carelessly, but cannot identify what traffic laws they violated. A skilled car accident attorney, however, can examine police reports and state traffic laws and speak to witnesses to determine who was at fault for your motor vehicle accident.

Tip: Act Quickly

If you seek legal advice, it's important that you do so as soon as possible after an accident. You're more likely to get the compensation due to you if your attorney is able to act quickly. Our state attorney's are available 24/7 to discuss your claim.
