Speed limits revised

BY MATTHEW HALL

Daily Press Editor

A quick decision by the City Council reduced speed limits throughout the City at their Feb. 9 meeting.

Council took 15 minutes to approve a package of speed limit alterations based on state mandated rules. Most of the changes resulted in lower speeds but an increase in speeds along Marine was a concern for the council and residents.

Speed limits are set locally but the speeds are determined by a state mandated formula and every street in the state is categorized by Caltrans. State defined "local" roads have a default limit of 25 miles per hour (mph). Enforcement of that limit does not require posted signs or a specific survey. All other roads default to 55 mph, and while a municipality can lower those limits at will, doing so without a state approved speed survey prohibits the use of radar/lydar by police and effectively undermines any attempt to enforce the rules.

Speed surveys are conducted on a rotating basis every five to seven years depending on road conditions and changes. A survey determines the speed of flowing traffic and then sets the limit to the nearest five-mile increment (rounding up). Agencies can lower that limit by at most 5 mph.

The most recently scheduled survey was in 2013, however some streets were accidentally included in that report by mistake. In addition, residents of the Sunset Park neighborhood asked for revisions to speeds in their area after the conclusion of the 2013 survey citing particularly narrow streets.

City cites corporate greed as motivation for new airport complaint

BY MATTHEW HALL

Daily Press Editor

The City of Santa Monica has responded to the latest airport complaint by claiming the new Part 16 hearing is an attempt by corporate interests to undermine residential control of the Santa Monica Airport.

Mark Smith, Kim Davidson Aviation Inc., Bill's Air Center Inc.,

Justice Aviation Inc., the National Business Aviation Association Inc. (NBAA) and the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association (AOPA) filed a complaint with the Federal Aviation Administration on Feb. 5 alleging financial misconduct by the City.

Their complaint has three central arguments: that the City has

Giolito has sights on MLB debut

Santa Monica prospect heading to Nationals camp

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN

Daily Press Staff Writer

Standing near the fence on the east edge of Memorial Park, Lucas Giolito looks the part of a Major League Baseball player. His 6-foot-5 frame is imposing, even when it isn't positioned atop a pitcher's mound. His bold red Washington Nationals cap matches the color of his long-sleeve team warm-up shirt. His dark beard blankets much of his face.

But long before Giolito was a top prospect on the arduous path to recovery from an elbow injury, he was just another local kid.

"I've lived in Santa Monica since I was 5," he said. "It's where I come home every offseason."

This offseason, though, has had a different pulse than the others in Giolito's budding baseball career. Having played in the minor leagues over parts of the last four years, the locally bred right-hander reports to Nationals spring training camp this month with realistic hopes of making his MLB debut before long.

"It's getting closer and closer," he said. "It's

Skechers Performance Los Angeles Marathon prepares for warm race day temperatures

The current weather forecast for Sunday, Feb. 14 calls for unseasonably warm weather. Participants should be advised to take precaution, hydrate early and often and consider slowing down their pace on race day.

The National Weather Service is currently predicting a high of 83 °F in Century City (Mile 19) and 80 °F at the Finish Line in Santa Monica. The race will begin at 6:55 a.m. from Dodger Stadium.

"Given that most runners have been training in cooler temperatures, we advise that they begin hydrating now and slow their pace down on race day. Last year with a weather forecast similar to what is currently predicted, we were pleased to see that many athletes took precautions seriously and were able to enjoy the race," said Tracey Russell, Chief Executive of Conquer Endurance Group. "We are planning to implement similar measures as 2015 because they were effective."

The Skechers Performance Los Angeles Marathon is taking the following measures to reduce the risks for runners:

- Continuing wave starts to ensure proper runner spacing and enabling more efficient replenishment of supplies at early aid stations.
- Stocking all 22 aid stations at the same ample levels as in 2015 and distributing water and Gatorade Endurance Formula at all aid stations.
- Providing 'cooling buses' at all 10 medical stations along the course and at the finish line.
- Providing misting stations, cold towels and ice.
- Providing regular updates as to additional resources added for the event.

AID STATIONS

The Skechers Performance Los Angeles Marathon has set up 22 fully-staffed aid stations along the course that feature both water and Gatorade Endurance Formula (Lemon-Lime). Aid stations will be available regularly on the course, beginning at Mile 2 until Mile 25.

At each aid station, Gatorade Endurance tables will be first, followed by water. If the first aid tables at any aid station are crowded, participants should continue moving through the aid station to the next set of tables in order to minimize congestion and provide all runners with convenient access to obtaining fluids.

MEDICAL SUPPORT

There is medical support at the start and finish lines as well as along the course. Beginning at Mile 6, medical tents are staged every two miles along the course - Miles 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, and 24. Medical tents are located at the finish line and in the post food & fluid area on Ocean Avenue in Santa Monica. Medical stations are staffed with volunteer physicians, nurses and assistants, and are coordinated by Keck Medicine of USC.

MEDICAL ADVICE

As more than 25,000 runners prepare to take to the streets of Los Angeles for the Skechers Performance Los Angeles Marathon, Marathon Medical Director Glenn Ault, M.D. of Keck Medicine of USC reminds runners to take proper precautions for race day.

Dr. Ault offers the following preparation tips to all participants:

- Hydrate. Drink the proper amount of fluids, both water and electrolytes.
- Study the race course. Be aware of water and aid station locations.
- Cover all exposed skin with sweat resistant sunscreen to prevent sunburn.
- Listen to your body. If you're dizzy, light-headed, nauseous, vomiting or in a lot of pain, go to a water or medical station with staffed medical personnel and get help immediately.
- Dress appropriately—avoid cotton fabrics, long sleeves and long pants. Wear lightweight, breathable fabrics ("technical" running gear) that will help to keep you cool.
- At the finish line, keep moving to acclimate your body to a more sedentary state. Watch for "hot walkers" assigned to help runners keep moving if you need assistance.

Bernie, maple syrup and teddy bears

SUNDAY IS VALENTINE'S DAY, WHICH, NO offense, is essentially a holiday for women. After all, most Valentine's commercials are for flowers, chocolates and diamonds, items not normally associated with male desires.

Currently there's a series of commercials airing for the Vermont Teddy Bears; humongous, stuffed animals that apparently women find irresistible. Instead of tall, dark and handsome, "Lovey Buddy" is tall, stuffed and furry.

One commercial shows a young woman on the bed in sexy red lingerie and seemingly highly amorous with her furry friend. She gazes into his plastic eyes as if to say, "Where have you been all my life?" Or perhaps she's saying, "You're naked, (except for a bow tie) and now it's my turn."

On the plus side for a Lovey Buddy for Valentine's is that flowers eventually wilt and chocolates can put on weight. That, of course, leaves diamonds. But not many diamond rings start at $89.99, which is what a 3-foot Lovey Buddy costs (Shipping is extra). Or, you could get a 4-foot Lovey for $99.99 or a 6-foot Lovey for $199.99.

In the commercials we see beautiful women hugging Lovey, curling up with Lovey or reading a book while stroking Lovey's fur. Frankly, it's a little disturbing. Is true love so difficult to find these days that we're looking for it with a very large stuffed animal?

Founded in 1981, the Vermont Teddy Bear Company is located in Burlington. I'll say this, at least they have a sense of humor. For example, if you send them your email address they'll make you a "Pre-Fur'd Member." They have over 80 different bears, including an "Adult Teddy." Holding a blindfold and handcuffs, he's called the "Fifty Shades of Grey Bear."

Other than Teddy Bears and Bernie Sanders, Vermont is best known for its maple syrup, which comes from the sap of various maple trees in cold climates. (In February, I'm told it doesn't get much colder than in Vermont.)

Maple trees are tapped by drilling holes into their trunks and collecting the exuded sap. It's then processed by heating to evaporate the water, leaving the concentrated syrup. Actually, Quebec produces 3/4 of the world's maple syrup, but Vermont is the largest U.S. producer and accounts for 5.5-percent of the global supply. (Where else can you get this essentially pointless information?)

That brings us to Vermont U.S. Senator and presidential candidate, Bernie Sanders, whose candidacy a year ago might have been considered pointless. Not now. On Tuesday he had a huge (pronounced "yuge") victory over Hilary Clinton in the first in the nation primary in New Hampshire. Sanders received 60-percent of the popular vote, while Clinton got only 38-percent, meaning it was a bruising loss. (Meaning Bill is probably very crabby!)

If you told me a year ago that a 74-year-old Jewish socialist from a state with a population of 627,000, the second smallest state in the country, would win a presidential primary, I might have called you meshugenah. (Yiddish for "bonkers.") And yet, it seemed on Tuesday that all of New Hampshire was "feeling the Bern."

Before I forget, you've got to see last week's "Saturday Night Live." The guest host was Larry David, who plays a better Bernie than Bernie. One sketch was particularly hilarious, "Bern Your Enthusiasm!" (Google it asap.)

The skit features David as Bernie on the day before the Iowa caucus with the SNL cast playing the characters from HBO's "Curb Your Enthusiasm." It builds to a perfectly exasperating ending where Larry David, as Bernie, has only himself to blame for the exceedingly narrow loss in Iowa.

Bernie Sanders actually showed up in person at SNL that night. In one sketch he, Larry David and the cast, spoofed the Titanic. In the bit, Bernie has had it with the 1-percent getting preferential treatment, even aboard a sinking ship. (Google "Bernie and Larry Titanic.")

But back to New Hampshire, Donald Trump also scored an overwhelming victory. However, at a rally the night before the election he promised he would "bring back waterboarding and worse." Has he ever heard of a thing called the Geneva Convention?

Speaking of "worse," Trump was disparaging Ted Cruz when a woman in the crowd called the Florida senator an ugly epithet that rhymes with "wussy." Inexplicably, The Donald had the woman shout out the offensive term and even repeated it for those who didn't hear.

Trump boasts he's an evangelical and yet uses vile language and admits he's never once asked God for forgiveness, one of the essential tenets of Christianity. Of course he proclaims he's "pro veterans" but says, "John McCain is no hero." Can you say hypocrite?

That's it for this week, gang. Have a happy Valentine's. If you ordered a Lovey Buddy, I hope having a giant 6-foot stuffed animal around the house is... bear-able. (Sorry about that.)

illegally diverted airport revenues away from airport uses, that leases are being unfairly enforced in a way that inappropriately favors non-aviation tenants and that pilots are subject to unreasonably high fines/fees.

According to the complaint, the city has diverted money through mishandling loans. Specifically the City is accused of charging interest on loans at rates in excess of FAA policy and charging the airport for loans that are not supported by documentation.

The complainants single out landing fees as a burden on pilots, alleging the fees are too high, were adopted without proper procedure, have resulted in illegal revenue surpluses and amount to double charges for some tenants.

The lease arguments allege the City is offering below market rates to Santa Monica College, is unreasonably delaying all aviation lease activity and imposing month-to-month leases for aviation tenants without justification.

Attorney Richard K. Simon filed the complaint on behalf of the complainants and said the City is in clear violation of the rules.

"The City of Santa Monica, in owning and operating the airport, has federal, contractual and legal obligations," he said. "We contend that in several different ways, they have violated those obligations."

The City hasn't released a response to the specific accusations, but did send out a response to the complaint at large.

Nelson Hernandez, senior advisor to the City Manager, said the latest complaint was an attempt by corporate interests to undermine local control of the airport.

"... the Airport belongs to the people of Santa Monica not to corporate interest," he wrote. "Our interest is the public interest. Our interest is to promote the well-being of tens of thousands of residents and control land purchased by the taxpayers of Santa Monica. What NBAA wants is to use our property, public property, for a select group of people that can afford private jets solely for their convenience. Although their arguments are wrapped in beautiful legal prose, when you peel away the curtain what you find is corporate interest who ordinarily believe in property rights except when it is an inconvenience for them."

Simon said his clients are small business owners and private citizens who have received financial support from NBAA and AOPA because it would too expensive for a small business to fight the City without additional aid.

"They couldn't otherwise afford to fight the City, which has spent multi-millions of dollars to defend its illegal actions over the years," he said.

City officials said the new complaint was expected given the ongoing disputes over control of the airport.

"The new Part 16 Complaint filed last Friday by National Business Aviation Association, Inc. (NBAA), an association representing 10,000 corporations nationwide, is yet another expensive example of corporate aviation interests bullying us to preserve amenities that benefit only the upper echelon that can afford traveling by private air," said Mayor Tony Vazquez in a statement. "Our city council will continue our fight to protect the health and wellbeing of our community and surrounding neighborhoods."

Simon said blaming corporations might be an effective public relations strategy, but doing so has no bearing on the merits of the case.

"The City will lose on most, if not all of, these claims, and then I will be very interested to see what their response is," he said. "The City has no answer to most of these. The City basically just stole the money and has no explanation because there isn't one."

A Part 16 complaint is an administrative hearing before the FAA. Federal rules require the hearing before any action can be taken in court. The FAA added the new complaint to their docket this week and doing so indicates the agency finds it credible enough to move forward.

City Hall recently lost an unrelated Part 16 complaint regarding the mandated life of the airport and is appealing that ruling.

Then came the elbow trouble. The UCLA commit was diagnosed with a sprained ulnar collateral ligament during his senior season at Harvard-Westlake, an injury that jeopardized his draft status. He was taken 16th overall by Washington in 2012.

And since undergoing Tommy John surgery later that year, Giolito has been on the rebound. He said the rehabilitation process has been physically and mentally demanding.

"It's been a long road," he said.

Whatever success Giolito finds in the future will be stacked on a foundation of promising work in the minors. In 2014 he went 10-2 with the Hagerstown (Md.) Suns, a Class A affiliate of the Nationals, recording 110 strikeouts and a 2.20 earned-run average over 20 games. Last year he struck out 131 batters and posted a 3.15 ERA in 117 innings, earning a stint with the Class AA Harrisburg (Pa.) Senators that was highlighted by a one-hit, 11-strikeout performance in mid-August.

Now, with Washington's season opener less than two months away, Giolito is out to prove that he's ready for the lime-light.

"It's just a little bit more hard work," he said. "I've got to keep playing well, and I hopefully I get my chance soon."

like you can almost taste it."

Giolito has reason to believe his moment will come soon. The talented 21-year-old is currently listed as the No. 1 pitcher on the MLB list of the top 100 prospects, and he's No. 3 overall behind infielder Corey Seager and outfielder Byron Buxton.

He's also been publicly supported by Nationals general manager Mike Rizzo, who has seemingly indicated that Giolito could work his way into the team's rotation this year.

"We are going to be caretaker [of] his workload and his innings," Rizzo told MLB.com in December. "We expect big things from Lucas Giolito - not only in 2016, but down the road."

Expectations don't seem to faze Giolito, the son of Rick Giolito and Lindsay Frost, who began playing baseball at a young age. He developed his skills in the Santa Monica Little League, where his father has served as a coach.

Speed specifics

Speed limits corrected to 25 mph as a result of an error in 2014 include Olympic Boulevard from 4th Street to 11th Street, 16th Street from Montana Avenue to south city limit, 21st Street from Ocean Park Boulevard to Dewey Street, 22nd Street from Pico Boulevard to Ocean Park Boulevard, 24th Street from San Vicente Boulevard to Ocean Park Boulevard, Airport Avenue from 23rd Street to east city limit, Alta Avenue from 7th Street to 14th Street, Chelsea Avenue from Wilshire Boulevard to Santa Monica Boulevard, Michigan Avenue from 7th Street to 17th Street and Navy Street from Highland to Lincoln Boulevard.

Several speed limits were lowered as a result of the most recent survey including: 26th Street between north city limit and Wilshire Boulevard from 35 to 30 mph, Barnard Way between Ocean Park Boulevard and Neilson Way from 30 to 25 mph, Exposition Boulevard between Stewart Street and Centinela from 30 to 25 mph, Lincoln Boulevard between San Vicente Boulevard and Montana Avenue from 30 to 25 mph and Ocean Park Boulevard between Lincoln Boulevard and 14th Street from 35 to 30 mph.

Three streets had speed limits set to 15 mph based on an engineering and traffic survey that showed the streets to be less than 25 feet wide: Bryn Mawr Avenue from 16th Street to 18th Street, Sunset Avenue from 16th Street to Dewey Street and Wellesley Avenue from Ashland Avenue to 18th Street.

Two streets will have increased speed limits. 4th Street between Colorado Avenue and Pico Boulevard from 25 to 30 mph and Marine Street between Lincoln Boulevard and 17th Street from 25 to 30 mph.

SPEED

The action taken this week removed the 10 mistakes from the municipal code, altered speed limits on some narrow streets and also allowed they City to make refinements to some streets that were surveyed but not altered last time. The new survey resulted in some reductions, but also a pair of increases on Marine and 4th Street.

Councilman Ted Winterer said residents along Marine wanted the speed lowered and asked if there was any way to deviate from the state law.

Traffic engineer Andrew Maximous said the revised survey required the 30 mph limit, but the City can install crosswalks, stop signs, speed feedback signs or other measures to try to lower speeds in the area. He said reducing the speed below 30 mph would limit police to pacing speeding vehicles but the length and configuration of Marine makes pacing practically impossible.

Councilman Kevin McKeown suggested a “Hail Mary” pass of reclassifying the street as “local” thereby dropping to the default limit of 25 mph. However, those classifications are set by the state and while residents might consider roads like Marine, Dewey, 11th, 14th or 17th as “local” the state defines them differently, requiring adherence to the survey system.

In passing the motion, McKeown asked staff to research the Caltrans classifications to see if the City can request its streets be reclassified.

“The important part is for us to find a way to be less shackled to the state rule,” he said.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Chutzpah! (1) Michael Leonard, 53, was charged in December with stealing a package that moments earlier had been dropped off by a courier. The delivery was to a Prince George's County, Maryland, police station, and Leonard, hanging around in the station (to register as a sex offender), walked out with the package when no one was looking. (However, a station surveillance camera caught his face.) (2) Sean Lyons, 23, wanted on an Upper Darby, Pennsylvania, arrest warrant since October as a drug dealer, was arrested in January -- at the police station, where officers recognized him when he came to give information as a victim of an unrelated hit-and-run accident.

■ (1) David Newman, a prominent emergency room doctor at New York City's Mount Sinai Hospital, was recently charged with two counts of sexual abuse, one involving drugging, groping and masturbating onto the unconscious body of a female patient. (2) Well-known restaurateur Dan Hoyt, 53, was arrested in January and charged with exposing (and "pleasuring") himself to two women, repeatedly, at a New York City subway station -- and to one he had blatantly asked, "Can I masturbate to you?" Hoyt is the owner-chef at Quintessence in the East Village and gained notoriety in 2005 when a subway passenger photographed him "in action" during a previous weak moment.

BE IMPULSIVE INSTEAD OF CONTROLLING, SCORPIO

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ A shake-up around midday will force you to regroup and look at a personal matter that's important to you. Nothing is as serious as it first appears to be. You have a tendency to manifest what you want -- just make sure that it's something you truly want. Tonight: Go for the moment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You could feel as if certain situations are working against you. You can't change the social scene, and you can't control anyone but you. A sudden insight becomes likely if you choose to listen more carefully. This could be instrumental to your well-being. Tonight: Enjoy the moment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You might be pleased with the outcome of a meeting. Whether it involves work or some other type of commitment does not matter. You usually don't mix your social life with your professional life, but you could make a new friend nonetheless. Tonight: Let it all hang out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You might be unusually emotional and abrupt in your dealings with others. Don't be surprised if, when this mood passes, you forget about the issue altogether. People still might remember your sarcasm, though. Be careful. Tonight: Out till the wee hours.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You could be taken aback by someone's unpredictability and/or sudden news. In any case, you have what it takes to deal with what comes down the pike. You're likely to have a knee-jerk reaction, after which you will detach. Tonight: Feed your mind, then relax with a favorite game.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Recognize that you keep a key person close because of his or her unpredictability and ability to think outside the box. However, there are moments when you could become frustrated with this person. Try to hold back judgment and just enjoy what is. Tonight: Visit over dinner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You might be unusually serious. You are determined to accomplish a key matter or carry out a key discussion. An element of chaotic excitement runs through everyone's day in some form. Recognize that your timing could be off. Postpone for now. Tonight: TGIF.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You might want to rethink a personal decision that has the potential to affect your daily life. If your focus involves a health matter, check in with a doctor before making any kind of dramatic change. Think before you act. Tonight: Be impulsive instead of controlling.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could be overly tired, but because of an element of high stress and anxiety, you might not even realize it. Ride the adrenalin wave with care, and use it to accomplish what you must. Know that you will need a few days off soon. Tonight: Stop pushing yourself so hard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ You seem to be quieter than usual. A close loved one will be observing you, and might voice his or her concern. Listen to your sixth sense when dealing with an important financial decision that has implications. Tonight: Happiest with one special person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ You are unlikely to jump hurdles right now, especially since all you want is to have a conversation. You will achieve a goal, but it will take more work than you think. Remain optimistic. Take your time and assess whether this path is the only one. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Examine the pros and cons of a financial decision. You might want to check out other options first. You are resourceful, but don't hesitate to reach out to someone else for his or her ideas. There's no such thing as getting too much feedback. Tonight: Pay bills, then decide.
