Seniors increasingly targeted by scams

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

One of the hidden negative outcomes of the pandemic has been an uptick in scam attempts perpetrated against senior citizens.

According to AARP data, people over the age of 60 are significantly more likely to fall for tech scams than members of younger generations.

Molly Davies, the Executive Vice President of WISE & Healthy Aging, a Santa Monica senior advocacy nonprofit, said local residents have reported being scammed via telephone, text, social media, email and snail mail.

"There's different ways that different scammers will try and reach out to people that they're trying to steal money from," Davies said. With tax season upon us, she said IRS scams are on the rise — but the IRS will never call you, Davies cautioned.

A recent panel hosted by State Senator Ben Allen provided tips for older community members to become aware of potential scams and help protect themselves.

"According to the AARP, people over the age of 60 are five times more likely to fall for tech scams," Allen said at the start of the seminar, held virtually via Zoom. "On average, they'll lose more money than younger victims of scamming, with those over the age of 80 losing more than four times the median losses of those in their 20s and 30s — even two to three times higher than other age groups."

Allen's panel included Kevin Durawa of the Contractors State License Board, Jackie Wiley of the Department of Financial Protection & Innovation, and Zuleimy Gonzalez of the California Department of Insurance.

City Council joins SMMUSD opposition to district voting

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

Santa Monica City Council is willing to stick its neck — and, if necessary, its checkbook — out to support the local School District in its challenge against district-based voting.

On Jan. 1, a new law came into effect that allows petitioners to request county school boards implement voting districts in their communities. The rule, under SB 442, is designed to ensure residents of chronically underrepresented neighborhoods — those where a majority of residents are people of color or members of another protected class — do not see their votes diluted by traditional, at-large voting.

"At-large elections may operate to dilute minority votes, and campaigning in at-large elections is significantly more expensive than in by-trustee area elections," the bill's text reads.

SB 442 allows any petitioners to go straight to their county's school board with a proposed map and request voting districts, rather than putting the proposal before a general vote. Designed to speed up the process of creating more equitable voting districts, many in opposition see it as anti-democratic and potentially unconstitutional.

Those opponents include five members of Santa Monica's seven-member City Council, which voted

Museum of Flying invites visitors to let their curiosity take flight

OPEN: The Museum is a Santa Monica institution and has reopened after a Covid closure.

SMDP Staff Writer

After keeping flight doors sealed for most of the pandemic, the Museum of Flying is back in business and inviting residents to come explore the fascinating aviation history of Santa Monica.

Located at 3100 Airport Ave, the museum is a stone's throw from the original site of the Donald Douglas Aircraft Company and contains many planes and memorabilia from the factory, which operated in the city from 1921 to 1958.

"We have a lot of neighborhood history, a lot of aviation history," said Steve Benesch, Museum Director. "The first airplanes to circumnavigate the world were built in Santa Monica by Douglas in 1924. Between 1930 and 1950, 90 percent of all commercial air travel was on airplanes mostly built in Santa Monica airport by the Douglas company."

The museum brings this history to light with several interactive exhibits and almost two dozen aircrafts from a replica Wright Flyer to modern jet age planes. There is also a replica of the Douglas Aircraft Company Executive Boardroom and a recreation of the office of Chairman & Founder Donald W. Douglas.

The aircraft company played a huge role in shaping the history of Santa Monica and at the height of World War II employed around 44,000 people, which was greater than the city's population at the time. The factory brought many people of color to the neighborhood that settled in the vibrant Black and Latino communities in the Pico and Belmar Triangle neighborhoods. According to Benesch, around 60 percent of factory workers were women participating in the workforce for the first time.

The Santa Monica Airport was also the site of the first all women's air race in 1929, where prominent female pilots including Amelia Earthart flew from Santa Monica to Ohio. All of these aviation stories and more are on display at the airport and waiting for visitors to rediscover.

COUNCIL

on Tuesday, Feb. 8, to join the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District (SMMUSD) Board of Education in its opposition to a map currently before the LA County Office of Education that would split SMMUSD into seven districts, including two non-contiguous districts that group areas of Malibu with areas of Santa Monica.

Mayor Sue Himmelrich and Council Members Gleam Davis and Lara Negrete proposed the motion, stating the proposed map "was drawn by the petition's proponents without any input from SMMUSD stakeholders" and that it "seems not to have been drawn in accordance with the California Elections Code." Moreover, Himmelrich, Davis and Negrete said, the petition seeks to "override the Santa Monica City Charter without a vote of the people and without a showing of any compelling interest that would justify doing so."

The motion called for stating opposition to the petition, as well as authorizing city staff "to use City resources, as appropriate, to support the SMMUSD and to publicly oppose the nullification of the City charter in public media, at any hearing held by the County Committee on School District Organization, and, if necessary, through litigation."

Several members of the public wrote in to council before the meeting, with most expressing support for the motion, saying they did not believe the proposed district map was either necessary, constitutional or properly drawn. Those letter writers included School Board members, the nonprofit CEPS (Community for Excellent Public Schools), Santa Monica Renters Rights and the Alliance of Santa Monica Latino and Black Voters.

"My real issue is this: I believe that, first of all, the maps are, in my opinion, absurd," Himmelrich said during the Tuesday meeting. "Districts are supposed to be contiguous. They aren't."

But, Himmelrich added, the other issue is that the maps are a ploy to create an independent Malibu school district. The Mayor called the proposal "just another tactic to do that."

The most outspoken opponent of the Council motion was Council Member Oscar de la Torre, who, when questioned, admitted that his name appeared as a petitioner on the first version of the SMMUSD districting petition. However, the current version, supported by parents from both Santa Monica and Malibu including attorney Kevin Shenkman, an outspoken proponent of district-based elections, does not name de la Torre as a petitioner.

"The School District has the power to put this before the voters, if the School District wants to do that, to resolve their political conflicts," de la Torre said, adding, "Even if this fails, it's not going to go away. These conflicts have been there for a long time and they've only escalated in the last few years. So, I just think it's not really our role. We should keep a hands off [approach] on the School District. It sets a bad precedent [not to do so]."

The final vote was 5-2, with de la Torre and Council Member Phil Brock voting against the motion. Brock raised concerns with the potential expense of offering legal support to the SMMUSD to challenge SB 442. Saying he wasn't "thrilled about districts that cleave Santa Monica," Brock still maintained he would vote against the motion — "reluctantly."

Davis said it was important to offer support in litigation, since the crux of the argument was that the law illegally overrides the Santa Monica City Charter.

"We need to authorize our City Attorney to appear in court on our behalf and make our position that we're supporting the School District clear," Davis said, "and that's why the reference to litigation is important."

Santa Monica Public Library goes fee and fine free beginning on March 1

As part of its continued recovery and to remove barriers to accessing the Santa Monica Public Library, the Santa Monica City Council approved a new Fine Free for All program. Beginning March 1, the Library will eliminate fines for overdue books and materials.

"Overdue fines create barriers to access for the very community members and populations that the library intends to serve. Removing fines will give cardholders increased access to services and use of the library and its materials both virtually and at any of our locations," said Erica Cuyugan, Interim City Librarian.

The new program for all cardholders comes after a similar program launched in July 2018, eliminating fines for youth (0-18 years) who are Santa Monica Public Library cardholders. That program successfully increased Library use by that age group and supported the goal of building stronger ties with Santa Monica youth. During the pandemic, the Library temporarily suspended fines to support the community as it dealt with the impacts of COVID-19. This change applies to overdue fines only. Charges related to lost or damaged materials will continue to apply.

Now, building on these efforts, the City Council adopted the Fine Free for All program at its February 8 meeting, joining a host of local libraries who have adopted similar programs removing fines for library cardholders, including LA County Public Library, Burbank Public Library, Los Angeles Public Library, and more.

"We are proud to join the nationwide movement to eliminate library fines and ensure free and equal access to books, information, and lifelong learning," said Santa Monica Mayor Sue Himmelrich. "If you are avoiding our libraries for fear of past or possible fines, please come back to take advantage of the tremendous resources and entertainment available."

Help the Santa Monica Public Library celebrate the launch of Fine Free for All. If you haven't been in the Library in a while, come back. If you are new to Santa Monica, join us. Follow the Library on Facebook @SMpublib and Twitter @SantaMonicaLibr for the latest updates.

MUSEUM

"There's a lot of history that people who grew up here don't even realize," said Benesch. "I think the museum is a valuable asset to the community; not just the aviation community, but the community at large."

The museum is historic in and of itself and was founded in 1974 by the son of Donald Douglas and second President of the Douglas Aircraft Company, Donald Douglas Jr. Over the years it has hosted many special events including a tribute to the Tuskegee Airmen; galas honoring the original Mercury, Gemini, and Apollo astronauts; and a 60th anniversary celebration of the Battle of Britain. Now in its third location, the Museum of Flying holds its largest ever collection of artifacts and aircraft.

The exhibitions are suited for both children and adults and have several engaging and interactive elements. There is a museum theater and screening room for special events and educational movies as well as several aircrafts that visitors are welcome to climb into and explore.

Benesch described the area surrounding the museum as a hidden gem and said it has all the components of a perfect family day out. It has ample free parking and is adjacent to Airport Park, which has a children's play area, soccer fields and a dog park. Benesch recommends visitors also grab a bite at the nearby Cloverfield restaurant and check out the views from the airport's observation deck.

The museum is currently open Thursday through Sunday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and tickets cost between $6 and $10. To learn more visit https://www.museumofflying.org/

Presenters offered a wealth of information about how to avoid scams, from shady contractors to falsified financial statements.

"It's really sad, and it just gets worse and worse every day," Wiley said. "We can only do our best by being proactive and become empowered by the information that we're here to provide for you."

Wiley said her agency — formerly called the Department of Business Oversight — regulates many types of financial institutions including banks, credit unions, lenders, loan companies, debt collectors and credit reporting agencies.

"When these scammers call, [or] if they're texting or if they're emailing you, the main goal is to get our personal information and to drain our accounts," Wiley said. First and foremost, it is crucial to verify the information scammers offer: "Do your homework before you make a move," Wiley said.

Common scams include individuals calling and posing as relatives. Verify that the person on the line is who they say it is. A major red flag is having someone, either posing as a relative or a debt collector, requesting victims buy hundreds of dollars worth of gift cards and read the card numbers over the phone. Do not fall for it, Wiley cautioned.

Another scam Wiley flagged is a false Social Security Administration call stating that personal information has been compromised and requesting verification.

"We all know that the Social Security Administration will never call you, so please remember if you get fearful — and all these calls are very frightening — don't believe that," Wiley said. "Don't call the number that's left on your answering machine. Pull up the Social Security Administration [contact information] to verify it. Go to the source."

It's also best to be wary of "free" financial relief opportunities offered over the phone. If your credit card company calls you offering a better plan, hang up, look up their official contact information and then call them back — the same is true for car payments and insurance rates.

"Remember, if they call you with the opportunity, please be mindful that that's a red flag," Wiley said.

A new COVID-19 era scam involves offering at-home testing kits, where scammers collect bank info or social security numbers and promise to provide tests or vaccines. It is always better to rely on hospitals, doctor's offices and reputable sites run by the government.

A classic scam that has evolved during the pandemic is perhaps the most grim: preying on lonely, single elderly people, especially women. Scammers pretend to be romantically interested, shower victims with affectionate words and promises, and eventually convince their victims to send money or share private information.

Be on guard, Wiley said. Don't send money to people you've never met in person.

Many romance scams are sophisticated, with scammers creating profiles based around real people, using real photos, Davies said. That way, if you search for them elsewhere online, their provided information checks out.

Key things to look out for are rushing toward intensity, like saying "I love you" very early on; never finding time to meet in person; poor grammar or grasp of English; moving quickly away from communicating via the app and toward texting, email or phone calls; overly professional looking photos; and asking for money or making threats.

"If someone is legitimately wanting to date or meeting you, they'll want to meet in person, right?" Davies posed. "That's the whole point of those dating services is to have an in person relationship with somebody." Davies suggested that if someone on a dating site asks for money before they make time to meet, simply cut off communication.

Davies said WISE & Healthy Aging also offers an online support group for victims of romance scams.

"We see a lot of people who ... feel very ashamed and don't want to talk about what happened to them — don't want to tell their families about it because they're so embarrassed and ashamed," Davies said. "And it's one of those crimes that, you know, we're often still blaming the victim for, but it's not their fault."

WISE & Health Aging provides resources online and over the phone. If you feel you may be the victim of a scam, or have questions about the validity of an information request, call 310.394.9871 or visit www.wiseandhealthyaging.org/elder-abuse-prevention.

The hour-long panel discussion, with much more insight from Wiley and other panelists, is available to watch on Allen's Senate website, at www.sd26.senate.ca.gov/videos.

SURF FORECASTS

WATER TEMP: 60.3°

MONDAY - POOR TO FAIR - SURF: 1-2ft Knee to thigh high
Smaller blend of SSW and NW swell leftovers will be swamped out through the AM high tide. Might be rideable on a big board as the tide drops.

TUESDAY - POOR TO FAIR - SURF: 1-2ft Knee to thigh high
Smaller WNW swell but could see a rise in shorter to mid-period NW swell through the day. Worth keeping an eye on the lower tide in the afternoon -- just have some wind blockage in mind.

WEATHER

Monday: Mostly sunny, with a high near 72.
Monday Night: Partly cloudy, with a low around 52.
Tuesday: A slight chance of rain after 10am. Partly sunny, with a high near 61. Breezy.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (FEBRUARY 14)

You'll shine as you influence, teach, help many and get paid. Celebrate to the hilt; you've long worked for this. You'll see a happy resolution to a family problem. Your personal life gets velvety smooth, which makes all else feel good, even breathing. Also featured: Hot tickets and a brilliant investment. Leo and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 2, 7, 1, 17 and 30.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You want to get to know someone but you're not ready to reveal everything about yourself just yet. Don't think too hard about how to proceed. It's a dance, not a science. Feel the rhythm and go.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Realizing the implications, you are not sure if you want to jump at the opportunity for more power. Authority implies responsibility for others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Socially, you have many options today. Don't be discouraged by those who seem to relish creating doubt. To surround yourself with positive people is to live in sunshine.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). This isn't a fairytale but a love story, full of magic stitched into the details with golden thread. Tend to the little things and the big picture shimmers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Affection comes in many forms. It can feel like butterflies that accompany high hopes of connection, the pangs of longing or something similar to what you feel when you see food coming at a restaurant. It's all good!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Love is a verb. Today you are likely to work love, play love, dance love and speak love today. Just don't buy love because if it's for sale, it's probably not love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You're a skilled sculptor, shaping relationships and turning them into works of art. The choices you make will define your love, and the actions you take will confirm it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Despite knowing that the person who cares the least in the relationship has the most control, you would rather care more and submit to the wide array of feelings attachment can produce.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You will be attracted to the person who challenges you. You'll sing the song, play the game, meet the challenge ... and then you'll do it all over again at the next level and then the next.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). While you are inspired and impressed by people with noble qualities, it is also important to be around people who make you feel like you belong and are accepted. You'll get the best of both worlds.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). True happiness is impossible to achieve in isolation; it is dependent upon the contentment of others. You'll have evidence of their contentment today, fortifying your sunshine agenda.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Like every other human, you occasionally experience moments of self-doubt. Yet you show up, a beacon of competence, ready to take on the challenge. The power of your presence attracts love.
