Automatic approval proposed for affordable housing projects

MADELEINE PAUKER
SMDP Staff Writer

In Santa Monica, both market-rate and affordable developers must guide housing projects through a review process that takes one to three years.

But with a forthcoming state mandate to zone for roughly 6,000 affordable units and 3,000 market-rate units between 2021 and 2029, putting new housing through a lengthy and expensive review process is no longer feasible, Planning Commission Chair Leslie Lambert said Wednesday before the commission voted to support expediting the process for 100% affordable housing and market-rate housing up to 60 feet tall that conforms to existing standards.

The recommendation to City Council would allow many housing projects to bypass the Planning Commission itself — a tradeoff that Lambert said she was willing to make in order to cut down on the cost of projects and the time it takes for them to open. Between 2010 and 2018, the city added about 1,000 market-rate units and 700 affordable units.

Lambert said the commission's power to make changes to projects has been curtailed by the Housing Accountability Act, a 2017 state law that prevents cities from rejecting

New enforcement operation focuses on meth trafficking hubs

KATE BRUMBACK
Associated Press

Federal authorities are targeting methamphetamine "transportation hubs" around the country in an effort to block the distribution of the highly addictive drug, officials announced Thursday.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration Acting Administrator Uttam Dhillon visited Atlanta to announce the launch of Operation Crystal Shield. Atlanta is one of eight cities the agency has identified as a hub where methamphetamine from Mexico arrives in bulk for distribution around the country.

The other cities are Dallas, El Paso, Houston, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Phoenix and St. Louis. By focusing on those hubs, Dhillon said, they hope to attack the entire supply chain and intercept the drug before it is trafficked to neighborhoods and communities throughout the country.

While much of the focus in recent years has been on synthetic opioids like fentanyl, methamphetamine continues to be a leading cause of death and addiction, Dhillon said.

A 2005 federal law that regulated the retail sale of over-the-counter drugs like pseudoephedrine — which can be used to make methamphetamine — largely eliminated the production of the drug in the U.S., Dhillon said. Now, however, almost all the methamphetamine consumed in the U.S. comes from Mexico, where it's produced on an industrial scale and smuggled across the border, he said.

DEA seizures of methamphetamine in the U.S. increased by 127%, from 49,507 pounds to 112,146 pounds, between fiscal years 2017 and 2019, and DEA arrests related to the drug rose nearly 20%, the agency said.

Authorities have seen a dramatic spike in the amount of methamphetamine smuggled across the U.S.-Mexico border in recent months.

From October through the end of January, authorities seized about 50,000 pounds of methamphetamine at U.S.-Mexico border crossings. That's more than was seized for the entire 2017 fiscal year. December was an especially busy month for methamphetamine trafficking, with more than 16,000 pounds of the drug seized at border crossings, which is nearly as much as was confiscated in all of 2014.

Dhillon and other law enforcement officers spoke at a news conference with piles of methamphetamine from two recent seizures in the Atlanta area laid out in front of them.

Firefighters responding to an apartment fire in Cobb County found a meth lab. Inside, authorities found boxes of candles that contained methamphetamine and could be cooked down and processed into crystal meth, said DEA Special Agent in Charge Robert Murphy, who runs the agency's Atlanta field office. The candles had stickers indicating they'd been inspected by authorities at the border, but the drugs went undetected, he said.

Also on display were transparent evidence bags containing about 1,300 pounds of processed crystal meth that were seized in a Clayton County home along with about 100 gallons of a product that could be cooked into about 5 to 7 pounds of crystal meth per gallon, Murphy said. The drugs on display represented about 2.3 million individual doses, he said.

"This is a staggering amount of methamphetamine, and it illustrates the problem that we have," he said.

Murphy said the production of the drug in Mexico results in a scary combination: a drug with higher purity and a lower cost.

The surge in resources associated with Operation Crystal Shield is expected to last at least through the end of the year, and authorities said they will be watching to see how the cartels pivot in response.

Three of the cities in the initiative are in Texas, partly because drugs shipped over its border can be difficult to intercept in the state's vast size.

Special Agent Eduardo Chávez, who leads the DEA's Dallas office, said the additional funding will help cover investigative expenses, including travel costs, and the focus on transit centers will catch traffickers in places they might think are lower risk.

At the crossroads of several major highways, Dallas is a natural hub for legitimate and illicit commerce.

It's "far enough away from the U.S.-Mexico border that perhaps there's a false sense of security," Chávez said. "But thankfully we recognize that too."

Associated Press writer Jake Bleiberg contributed from Dallas.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON FEBRUARY 6, AT APPROXIMATELY 12:30 P.M.

Officers were flagged down by security at the Vons Supermarket, 710 Broadway, regarding a theft that had just occurred. Officers learned that a subject walked into the store, took a bottle of wine off a shelf and started to drink it. The subject left the store without paying for the item. Officers located the subject outside the store and accepted a private person's arrest. Nile Ferguson, 34, from Delano was arrested for shoplifting and public intoxication. Bail was set at $5,000.

"Eco" Movies Offer Hope, But No Popcorn

MOVIE: Emile Hirsch stars in "Into the Wild," free at SMC on March 2.

For those who may doubt climate change, last week Pine Island Glacier in Antarctica had a 120 square mile block of ice, bigger than Atlanta, break off completely. Scientists predict that Pine Island could eventually raise sea levels all over the globe. Meanwhile our "Impeached Forever" POTUS says climate change could reverse itself, adding, "I'm good at predicting things like that." (Somehow I don't find that very comforting.)

What I do find comforting, however, is living in Santa Monica, a city committed to sustainability. I consider myself an environmentalist, albeit a somewhat lazy one. For example, 35 years ago I managed to convince ownership of the Shores 532-unit apartment complex and the city, for the first time ever, to bring recycling bins to the tenants. (And it was an immediate success!)

The process took 18 months but, to be honest, my motivation all along was being tired of driving my recyclables to the center on Michigan Avenue. (Plus, what's the logic of using gas, i.e. fossil fuel, in the cause of helping?)

That brings me to Sheila Laffey, PhD, who's the complete opposite of lazy. Sheila's an SMC Film Studies Adjunct Professor, an environmental activist and a film director/producer.

A week from Monday, on March 2, Sheila begins her 4th year as host of Green Screen Series of dramatic films and documentaries to entertain, inform and inspire people to participate in protecting the environment. The films are free to the public at SMC's state of the art Center for Media and Design, equipped with an amazing screen and spacious seating. (But, unfortunately, there's no popcorn.)

From March through May, there will be seven screenings but the first has a special Santa Monica connection. Into the Wild, written and directed by Sean Penn who was born and raised here, is a compelling 2007, Oscar-nominated film starring award-winning actor, Emile Hirsch. It's the true story of Chris McCandless who, at 23, hiked across North America into the Alaskan wilderness to find meaning in his life.

Hirsch, who will participate in a Q & A, after the film, also starred in the hit feature, Lords of Dogtown, based on the 2001 documentary Dogtown and Z- Boys, which, coincidentally, was narrated by Penn. It traces a group of colorful and talented young surfers, many from Ocean Park's mean streets known as Dogtown, and how they literally revolutionized skateboarding. (Hirsch was also featured in Milk, the 2008 movie that yielded a Best Actor Oscar for Penn.)

On March 30, the series resumes with two short movies produced by Laffey. We All Need the Forest is the story of a boy who meets the "Spirit of the Forest" and discovers ancient principles that help heal his ailing grandfather. In the Middle of the Sea tells the tale of two youngsters taken on a magical journey on a Hawaiian mountain.

April 6 is the screening of Love Thy Nature, winner of 26 awards and narrated by Oscar-nominated actor, Liam Neeson. The film explores ways to reconnect with the natural world. After the screening there will be discussion and Nature Therapy Outdoors with Director Sylvie Rokab.

On April 20, WILD be screened starring Oscar-winners Reese Witherspoon and Laura Dern. Wild is a biographical adventure film about one woman's solo hike along the Pacific Crest Trail.

The next in the series, on May 4, is the documentary, The Condor & the Eagle, followed by talk with Laffey and Students from SMC's Brazil Club. The film follows four Indigenous leaders on an extraordinary transcontinental journey from the Canadian plains to deep into the heart of the Amazonian jungle. Their hope is to unite the peoples of North and South America and deepen the meaning of "climate justice."

On May 11, as Democratic and Republican Presidential Conventions approach, The Revolution Generation will be screened followed by a talk with director, Josh Tickell.

HOUSING

code-compliant housing development.

"The more it costs to build housing, the less affordable the units will be," she said. "Our marginally useful involvement is not worth the cost."

Slow-growth advocate Commissioner Mario Fonda-Bonardi cast the lone vote against the recommendation to allow city staff to process HAA-compliant development.

"We cannot rely on the developer's wisdom to show up and have a perfect project," he said.

The Commission also asked City Council to consider incorporating the city's corporate housing ban and bike, pedestrian and sustainability plans in the standards applied to all housing projects. The commission recommended that developers be required to post plans online and ensure social services for units restricted to very low-income tenants.

Housing activists and developers who attended Wednesday's meeting said exempting affordable and HAA-compliant housing projects — should City Council adopt the Planning Commission's recommendation — is a crucial step toward meeting Santa Monica's 9,000-unit Regional Housing Needs Assessment allocation.

Local progressive activist Jason Islas said the measure will help Santa Monica build enough housing to be affordable for future generations of residents.

"The effect won't happen for 25 years, but that's what courage and leadership is ... planning for a future that meets the needs of a generation that isn't here yet," he said. "We are betraying our progressive values if we don't open up this community to more people."

Leonora Camner, a member of the Santa Monica Housing Commission and managing director of Abundant Housing LA, said solving the housing crisis will require easing barriers to both market-rate and affordable development. She also said meeting the affordable housing RHNA target will require an enormous amount of investment and new financing strategies.

"Pitting affordable and market-rate housing against each other is a false choice," she said. "We need a lot more of both kinds of housing on a really major scale."

Dave Rand, a land use attorney at who represents several local developers, said the city should also streamline the process for projects taller than 60 feet. Tier 3 projects, or buildings between 60 and 84 feet, must go through a minimum of seven public hearings in a two- to three-year process to receive a development agreement from the city.

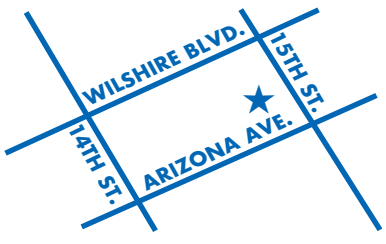

"Those projects don't happen because no one wants to submit to the DA process," Rand said. "Create an easy, streamlined approach ... and you will see developers come to the table."

Sunset and Pasjoli

SUNSET

I've lived in Los Angeles for about 60 years. In the 1950s pretty much all of the really fine restaurants were located either on La Cienega Blvd. or Sunset Blvd. I wonder how many of you remember Sneaky Peet's steakhouse, or La Rue, where we used to walk by Frank Sinatra's table but never look at him. Lawry's is still there, and just the same, which is amazing. Santa Monica was not a hot spot for restaurants, and we had to drive to Culver City to find a Thai restaurant, and while there was a Chinese restaurant in the Palisades, we often drove over to Olympic near Bundy to one a bit more exotic.

I thought I knew every area of town, even if not every restaurant. But last week a friend drove me to the North end of Malibu, turned left on a road I've never been on before. We arrived at a beautiful wide beach, near the end of Point Dume, where she took me to lunch at The Sunset.

Sunset restaurant looks like a converted house with dining inside and outside on a side porch, and it is lovely. The menu is mostly seafood, much like other seafood restaurants, but the food is excellent and the setting, overlooking the beach and the ocean, is perfect. I saw lots of lobsters and platters filled with oysters, clams, shrimp, tuna tartare and Hamachi crudo. I wouldn't call it cheap, with the small patter at $60 and the large at $109 at dinner, but the quality was top notch. I wish it were closer to where I live.

I had the Mediterranean fish stew, and it was as good as it gets — a nice mix of fish and crustaceans a garlic tomato broth with capers and olives. In other restaurants I don't like the mix of fish and shellfish, and the amount of broth. This was just like I like it and served hot.

PASJOLI

I had an equally pleasant treat when friends scored a reservation at Pasjoli on Main street, and four of us shared the pressed duck house specialty. I felt like I was back in France. As advertised, two waiters wheeled over a cart with a nice fat duck, and proceeded to expertly carve it up in front of us. The breast was whisked off to the kitchen, and the rest was stuffed into a duck press and pressed until the juice came out. The juice was then added to a skillet and cooked for a while until the sliced breast came back. The sliced breast was perfect—about 16-20 nice pieces to share between the four of us, over which the sauce was ceremoniously poured. A few minutes later the rest of the duck, carved from the legs, was served with lettuce as duck salad. There was plenty for four people and it was reminiscent of the Tour D'Argent in Paris, which is famous for its pressed duck. Santa Monica is really getting upscale.

Free USC tuition to students with $80K or less family income

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The University of Southern California will phase in free tuition for undergraduate students from families with an annual income of $80,000 or less, USC President Carol L. Folt announced Thursday.

As part of the initiative, ownership of a home will not be counted in determining a student's financial need to attend the Los Angeles private college with 20,500 undergraduates, where tuition and living expenses are above $77,000 annually.

"We're opening the door wider to make a USC education possible for talented students from all walks of life," Folt said in a statement.

The changes will be phased in beginning with first-year students entering USC in the fall of 2020 and the spring of 2021, USC said.

The university also said it will increase undergraduate financial aid by more than $30 million annually. When fully implemented, the expansion will allow USC to provide stronger financial assistance to more than 4,000 students every year.

An undergraduate's estimated full-time, two-semester tuition for 2019-2020 is $57,256, according to USC's website.

Adding fees, housing, meals, books, supplies, transportation and miscellaneous costs boosts the total to $77, 459. For students living with parents or relatives the total estimate is $64,715.

In comparison, the estimated annual average cost for a California resident undergraduate living on campus at the nine public University of California colleges is $36,100. The cost for a student living off campus averages $33,200.

According to USC, two-thirds of its undergraduates receive financial aid and more than 21% of undergraduates are from low-income families.

In all, USC's undergraduate students each year receive more than $640 million in awards from all sources for tuition and expenses. More than half of the total is from USC grants and scholarships.

"With this new initiative, we will be even better positioned to recruit students from all backgrounds and strengthen the USC experience for everyone," said USC Provost Charles F. Zukoski.

Folt, the former chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, became USC's president last year as the university dealt with a series of major scandals, including the college admissions bribery case.

That scandal followed allegations that the school ignored sexual misconduct by a longtime campus gynecologist and an investigation into a medical school dean accused of smoking methamphetamine.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (FEBRUARY 21)

This is a year of exploration, and you'll see many things you never did before. The spirit of adventure will be your guiding light. One key starting point will be the moment you extend a hand to someone outside of your circle. The bonus you get in May is well-earned, and you'll reinvest in July. Aquarius and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 4, 3, 22, 10 and 46.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). A feeling of longing and a longing for feeling -- these are the human elements behind the meaningful accomplishments of the day. You'll be on the lookout for this in yourself and others wherever you go.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Before making a choice, make sure that the lineup of options is actually the best you can do. "Constantly choosing the lesser of two evils is still choosing evil." -- Jerry Garcia

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The difference between challenging yourself and forcing things can be subtle. There's no need to get there faster or show up stronger. Anything that feels pushed is probably wrong.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Once the thing you love gets popular, you'll have less access to it. Right now, it's pretty wonderful to love something that others don't get yet. It allows you the chance to flow appreciation to it openly and without competition.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You've been working hard and the temptation will be to play just as hard. Perhaps "hard" is not going to help matters. What can you do to make both work and play a little easier on yourself?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your love is not a bubble that will pop when it smacks upon a sharp reality. Your love is made of tougher stuff, a durable elastic not duplicated anywhere else in the universe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It happens so very rarely, but this is one of those times. Truly, you'll be better off if you lose your usual diplomacy and get something off your chest. Speak the truth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Getting out of a stuck place will be about the same no matter what kind of "stuck" it is. Jiggle, jostle and turn. Move until something about the situation changes. Wiggle until you're free.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). When you're new, you have to work a little harder, smarter and more creatively than the others. There will be a way to defer to the big shots and still be powerful in your own right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Everyone doesn't have to know what you're good at. If you know, that's enough. The confidence you feel will come through in your posture and your being, no words necessary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). There you go thinking of who you might have been were certain turns not taken. It's only a helpful flight of fancy if it changes your thought process for the next turn. Otherwise, the best policy is: no regrets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll give more than they were expecting. You'll give more than

Time Warner Cable to pay $18.8M in California internet case

Time Warner Cable will pay $18.8 million to settle a lawsuit that claimed it misled more than 170,000 California customers who paid for high-speed internet service that they didn't receive, prosecutors said Thursday.

Eligible customers will receive about $16.9 million in refunds in credits or free service, the Los Angeles County district attorney's office said.

The district attorneys of Los Angeles, Riverside and San Diego counties accused Time Warner Cable of unfair business practices. Their lawsuit alleged that beginning in 2013, Time Warner Cable used misleading advertising to lure customers into paying for higher-end internet service.

"Some customers were issued outdated modems, making it impossible for them to receive the higher bandwidth they purchased. Others paid for higher internet speeds that Time Warner's infrastructure could not deliver," Los Angeles County prosecutors said in a statement.

Internet customers who couldn't get the service they paid for will receive a one-time credit within 60 days, authorities said. Customers who received outdated modems will get a $90 credit, while those who received the modem and also paid for higher internet speeds will get a $180 credit, the statement said.

In addition, Time Warner Cable will offer all California internet customers a choice of two free services. Those who also subscribe to cable TV will be offered three free months of Showtime unless they already subscribe to the channel. Internet-only customers will be offered one free month of an entertainment streaming package called Spectrum Choice.

A Los Angeles Superior Court judge approved the deal on Feb. 14.

Charter Communications, also known as Charter Spectrum, bought Time Warner Cable in 2016.

Under the settlement, Charter agreed to a ban on advertising internet speeds "it knows or should know it cannot consistently deliver during peak hours," according to the Los Angeles district attorney's statement.

Charter Communications settled a similar lawsuit with the New York state attorney general in December 2018 for $174.2 million. It included $62.5 million in refunds to some 700,000 customers. That lawsuit alleged the company delivered internet speeds that were up to 80 percent slower than advertised.

In a statement, Charter Communications said it didn't acknowledge any liability in the California settlement. The company said the allegations involved advertising practices that occurred before it bought Time Warner Cable.

"Charter has made and continues to make, substantial investments enhancing internet service across the state including raising entry-level speeds of our flagship service to 200Mbps and launching Spectrum Internet Gig," the statement said. "We look forward to continue providing the best internet, TV, mobile and voice products and services to our California customers."

PARKING

Structures 1, 2, 4 and 5 were installed more than 50 years ago and no longer comply with current building code standards, which has narrowed the allowable spacing between railings and barrier cables.

Farrell said the project will narrow the space between the barrier cables and increase the height of some of them.

City Council will approve the upgrades three weeks after a sixth person took or attempted to take their own lives in one of the city's parking structures.

The most recent suicide occurred when a 53-year-old man named Karim Hassibe jumped from Parking Structure 2 earlier this month. Last September, police talked an individual down from Parking Structure 3, and a 49-year-old man named Brad Bolton took his own life last August by jumping from Parking Structure 2.

Other suicides over the past year and a half occurred in structures 7 and 4.

The project as originally proposed would have upgraded the guardrails in all four structures, but staff recommends removing Parking Structure 2 to keep the cost of the project under the available budget of $4.2 million.

The project would also include stormwater management improvements to the roof of Parking Structure 5 to prevent it from flooding.

While the construction cost would be $3.8 million, the city will also pay almost $600,000 for structural inspections of the parking structures.

"Parking structures are unique and have large spans with relatively thin slabs that support a variety of heavy vehicles," staff said. "This means that special consideration is required when making repairs."

City staff would provide construction management and public outreach for the project, which would include notifications posted in the parking structures and notices distributed to adjacent properties detailing the scope of the project, potential impacts, schedule and construction manager contact information.

LAUGHING MATTERS

Featuring Michele Rodriguez, the movie is a manifesto for today's youth exploring ways to revolutionize political systems that have failed their generation. The film also includes SMC students.

The last in the 2020 Green Screen Series, will be the The River and the Wall, a fascinating film directed by Ben Masters, that will be shown on May 18th. The powerful and beautifully filmed documentary follows five friends on a journey of the U.S.-Mexico border along the Rio Grande to explore how a border wall can affect wildlife, immigration, landowners and public lands. Following the screening will be a discussion with Professor Laffey and students from SMC's Natural History Club.

Once again, this remarkable series is open to the public and free of charge on Mondays at 3 pm at SMC's Center for Media and Design, Auditorium 180 at 1660 Stewart Street. (And take it from me, the films are so compelling, you won't even miss the popcorn.)

For more information, Google "Green Screen Series Santa Monica College." Jack is at jackdailypress@aol.com.

BASKETBALL

With a 14-point lead at the end of the first quarter Wednesday, the team looked like it would once again breeze to victory as it had the round before when it won 44-18, but Villa Park responded well in the second quarter and only four points separated the teams going into the half.

"The momentum was all theirs," assistant coach Mark Ulrich said as he described the crazed atmosphere and shaking gym. "Unfazed our kids came out and grabbed the lead and the momentum after the half with stellar defense and rebounding. We kept the lead down the stretch by making our free throws and playing tough Santa Monica Viking defense."

With its recent success on the road these playoffs, Ulrich described the team as true road warriors who are now moving on to the final four for the first time in 11 years.

Samohi seniors said prior to the playoffs they believed the team has the tools to make it to the championship.

"This is our last year, so it's really emotional because some of us are going off to different colleges. We're going to leave and live our lives and this is the last time that we'll share this moment so I'm personally trying to take it as far as possible," senior Iternite Reed said. "We already accomplished one goal — winning Ocean League — but I'm trying to do more than that. We have a great team. The freshmen are amazing. We have great team chemistry so I feel like we can play with anyone on the court."

Ulrich added Thursday the team will now turn its focus to Lancaster and its 7 p.m. game on Saturday night.

"We hope the community will come out and support this very strong group of young student-athletes," Ulrich said. "These girls are fun to watch."

The winner of Saturday's Lancaster-Samohi contest will play the victor of the Crean Lutheran High School and Mira Costa High School matchup in the 2020 CIF Southern Section 3AA Championship on Saturday, Feb. 29.
