Eight story hotel sandwiched between apartments heads for Planning Commission

SMDP Image

HOTEL: The proposed hotel would be squeezed between to apartment buildings.

MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

A proposal to squeeze a new 84-foot hotel into a single lot between two existing housing projects will head to Planning Commission next month.

The project at 516 Colorado would pack 74 guest rooms, a ground floor restaurant, outdoor seating area, lobby, guest drop-off area, rooftop bar and two subterranean levels with a fitness area and business center into an eight-story building on the 41.75 ft wide former site of Angels Attic dollhouse museum.

Howard Laks Architects, the firm designing the building has proposed an angled-balcony design. According to Howard Laks, rooms on the north and south sides of the building will have alternating, diagonal balconies designed to maximize views of Downtown

11 businesses get approval for oversized parklets

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

A group of early parklet adopters were given the green light to keep or expand oversized outdoor dining zones at the Feb. 14 Council meeting, but only with the permission of neighboring businesses and proof of insurance.

The City Council voted six-to-one to increase the number of parking or loading spaces for businesses in Santa Monica from two to four spaces for up to 11 businesses that had large parklets

The Emily Shane Foundation Announces Annual Gala Spring Fundraiser "Wings Over Malibu"

The Emily Shane Foundation, a 501(c)(3) non-profit charity based in Malibu and serving children across Los Angeles and Ventura Counties, will be hosting its annual gala spring fundraiser "Wings Over Malibu" the evening of Thursday, April 27, 2023 directly over the beach in the Ocean Room at Duke's Restaurant in Malibu. The gala's proceeds will benefit the foundation's SEA (Successful Educational Achievement) Program, which empowers underserved, disadvantaged middle schoolers at risk of academic failure by providing them with intensive and individualized academic tutoring and mentorship.

The SEA Program's mission of educational equity solely serves those who cannot otherwise afford this necessary support outside the classroom. It is a comprehensive program that truly makes a difference in the lives of its student participants. The SEA Program gives these children hope, confidence, and guides them to a brighter future. The foundation has served close to 1000 students to date.

Highlights of Wings Over Malibu 2023 include a live auction, an online silent auction, exclusive wines by The Narcissist Wine Company, and delicious appetizers. Members of the Malibu Middle and High School Orchestras will serenade guests as they arrive. Additional highlights to be confirmed and announced. Tickets will be available for purchase at: emilyshane.org as of Friday, February 17, 2023.

For more information about "Wings Over Malibu" event sponsorship opportunities, inquires related to donations to the event's silent and live auctions, or for any other information, please contact The Emily Shane Foundation at: info@emilyshane.org or visit www.emilyshane.org.

Eugene Levy Headlines First WAM Series Program of 2023

For the Pacific Palisades Library Association on Thursday, March 9 The Writers, Artists and Musicians Series Continues with Eugene Levy: In Conversation at the Palisades Library

Programming from the Pacific Palisades Library Association continues with an evening featuring Emmy- and Grammy-winning actor, producer and writer Eugene Levy. The star and co-creator of the comedy series "Schitt's Creek" and the host and executive producer of "The Reluctant Traveler" on Apple TV+, Levy is the latest artist to be featured in the new Writers, Artists and Musicians Series, which presents authors and creative professionals with ties to the Palisades. The program will be held at the Palisades Library on Thursday, March 9, at 7 p.m. In-person seating is no longer available but this program will also be streamed on a complimentary basis. To receive the streaming link, please visit FriendsOfPaliLibrary.org and select the Live-Stream Registration option on the event registration page. "We are truly excited to continue our WAM Series with one of the most iconic artists in Hollywood," said Laura Schneider, president of the Pacific Palisades Library Association. "We have enjoyed the comedy and creativity of Eugene Levy from his earliest days with 'SCTV' and are especially proud of him for his civic mindedness in his current role as the honorary mayor of Pacific Palisades," said Schneider. "We're fortunate to have a wonderful public library in Pacific Palisades and I am pleased to support Friends of the Library as they work to provide a vibrant hub of community activity," said Levy. Levy's appearance at the Palisades Library comes following the record-breaking success of "Schitt's Creek," which Levy co-created with his son, Daniel Levy. One of the most groundbreaking comedy television series of the last decade, the show holds the distinction of winning the most Emmys in a single year—having received nine Emmy Awards for its sixth and final season in 2020. Levy is also widely known for his role as the dad in the "American Pie" franchise and for his collaborations with Christopher Guest on films such as "Best In Show," "Waiting For Guffman," "For Your Consideration" and "A Mighty Wind."

Levy serves as host and executive producer of "The Reluctant Traveler," a non-scripted Apple TV+ series that follows Levy as he visits some of the world's most remarkable hotels and explores the places and cultures that surround them. The show will premiere globally on February 24. A native of Canada, Levy was awarded the Order of Canada in 2011, the Canadian equivalent to British knighthood. He is the co-author of the New York Times bestseller "Best Wishes, Warmest Regards: The Story of Schitt's Creek," which was published in 2021.

Members of Friends of the Palisades Library will receive advance notification and priority access to future programs in the WAM Series. Memberships are available on the event registration page.

Kind Traveler and Santa Monica Travel & Tourism Launch Regenerative Tourism Program Empowering Travelers to Make a Positive, Local Impact

As the first statewide regenerative travel program kicks off with Visit California & Kind Traveler, Santa Monica Travel & Tourism (SMTT), a proud destination partner in the program, launches a new wave of opportunities for travelers to make a positive impact when visiting Santa Monica. To mobilize this new opportunity, 10 of the most iconic and sustainable hotels in Santa Monica share exclusive offers on KindTraveler.com incentivizing travelers to give back to Santa MoniCARES, a nonprofit organization supporting many Santa Monica-based nonprofit agencies addressing homelessness, environmental protection, arts & education, workforce development, at-risk youth, elderly assistance, DEI initiatives, and more.

With more than 97% of travelers revealing it's important for their vacation dollars to positively impact the communities they visit, it has never been easier to dream big and plan a vacation that not only creates meaningful memories, necessary relaxation and mental health benefits, but also a lasting community impact. Through the simple act of booking a hotel with Kind Traveler, travelers can now travel kindly and meaningfully support the local community with Santa MoniCARES, with 100% of donations supporting a variety of nonprofits in the community.

"Santa MoniCARES is designed to be a champion for our city providing tourism industry support to those who work tirelessly in our community, for our community," said Misti Kerns, President and CEO of Santa Monica Travel & Tourism. "With Kind Traveler as a partner, we will continue amplifying our message by providing top-tier hospitality experiences while ensuring conscious visitors who are looking for meaningful trips to Santa Monica, know their visit is going to help strengthen our community efforts for years to come."

> "Santa MoniCARES is designed to be a champion for our city providing tourism industry support to those who work tirelessly in our community, for our community
> - Misti Kerns, President and CEO of Santa Monica Travel & Tourism

The way it works is simple: Through Kind Traveler's Give + Get hotel booking and media platform, travelers unlock exclusive offers from participating Kind Hotels with a $10 or more donation to Santa MoniCARES, or to another charity of choice on the platform. Positive impact metrics are shared with every booking empowering future visitors with specific details in how their travel dollars are supporting the local community. As an example, a $10 donation to Santa MoniCARES will provide equipment and funding for clean beaches, rivers and watersheds. Travelers additionally have an opportunity to plant trees at the time of booking with Arbor Day Foundation; one-dollar plants one tree.

To further sustainability awareness, travelers also have an opportunity to learn about the sustainability, wellness and community impact features of each property. For example, The Shore Hotel is Santa Monica's first LEED Gold Certified hotel; The Fairmont Miramar Hotel & Bungalows boasts an eco-friendly spa; and The Ambrose Hotel was the first prestigious LEED EB (existing building) hotel in the U.S. and boasts a State of California's Green Lodging Program Certificate, to name a few. Local neighborhood guides are shared with each hotel profile inspiring conscious, mindful, local travel opportunities and other ways to do good for the day or give back locally.

Travel kindly in Santa Monica with participating hotels on Kind Traveler:

Fairmont Miramar Hotel & Bungalows, Hotel Casa Del Mar, Hilton Santa Monica Hotel & Suites, Le Merigot Santa Monica Hotel, Pierside Hotel, Santa Monica Proper Hotel, Shutters on the Beach, The Ambrose Hotel Santa Monica, The Shore Hotel Santa Monica and Viceroy Santa Monica

CRIME WATCH

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON FEB. 2 AT 12:42 AM

Officers responded to Ocean Ave and Colorado Ave for a report of a purse theft. Upon arrival officers were flagged down by several bystanders who identified the suspect. The suspect was detained without incident. The victim stated that she placed her purse on a bench near Muscle Beach and walked towards the ocean. Her friends alerted her that someone had taken her purse. They located the individual in the neighboring area and confronted him about the purse. The suspect, later identified as Sadique Compton returned the cell phone from inside the purse, but did not return the remaining contents. Officers located credit cards belonging to the victim in Compton's backpack along with drug paraphernalia. Compton was arrest and transported to the Santa Monica Jail.

California needs Feinstein's successor to share her bipartisan values

Sen. Dianne Feinstein announced this week that she will not run for reelection, sounding the official starting gun for the 2024 campaign to succeed her in the Senate. As the race gets going, it probably makes sense to ask a fundamental question: What should Californians be looking for in their next U.S. Senator?

Feinstein's storied career offers some clues.

Look, I'm biased. I had a front-row seat to her tenure in office, and I saw her at her peak. She was a force of nature. She viewed her job as solving problems for the people of California and the nation.

Her Senate colleagues lived in fear that she would buttonhole them on the Senate floor to get them to sign on to one of her priority bills. When she was trying to round up votes, she was relentless. How else do you think she was able to get the 1994 Federal Assault Weapons Ban passed over the virulent objections of the NRA? How else do you think she was able to publish the Senate Intelligence Committee's torture report over the concerns of the CIA?

Now some may say – and boy, do they – that her time has passed. That at 89 years old, she doesn't understand the super-polarized politics fueled by cable news and social media bubbles. That may be true.

But Feinstein has a much deeper understanding of California than those pundits and advocates ever will. That's why she was the state's most popular politician – with approval ratings above 50% – until just a few years ago.

From my vantage point, it comes down to three things.

Feinstein is many things, but first and foremost she is a passionate advocate for the principles she holds dear. She's led the fight for reproductive freedoms before, during and after the Roe era. More than anyone else, she has stood up against gun violence and for common-sense gun regulations. She passed legislation to increase fuel economy standards for automobiles and light trucks. She sponsored the reauthorization of the Violence Against Women Act and led the effort to successfully repeal the Defense of Marriage Act (which prevented the federal government from recognizing same-sex marriages) after being one of only 14 Senators to vote against it in the first place.

And woe to her colleagues who stood in her way – like Republican Sen. Larry Craig of Idaho who tried to lecture the "gentlelady from California" about the nature of guns and gun violence.

Second, when it comes to fighting for the people of California, you must build alliances – and yes that includes with Republicans. The Senate is a small place. You can't pass anything of consequence without 60 votes. So on the Lake Tahoe Restoration Reauthorization Act, she worked with Republican Sen. Dean Heller of Nevada to get it passed. On criminalizing cross-border tunnels from Mexico into the United States, she worked with Sen. Jon Kyl of Arizona. And on stopping the accessibility of precursor drugs needed to cook meth, she worked with Sen. Jim Talent of Missouri.

California's next senator will have to work with Republicans on countless issues important to the state.

Finally, she never lost sight of why the people of California sent her to Washington. It certainly wasn't to score points on Twitter. California faces enormous challenges, and is the size of 20 other states and the District of Columbia combined but only has two senators. The state needs an advocate who will work to stop global warming and fight for dollars to address the state's water crisis and catastrophic fires; to make sure that there's someone working day and night to make sure our nation is safe and our economy is strong.

Feinstein did all of that and more. As the curtain on her career draws to a close, we should remember why she was elected to the Senate six times. I'm hopeful that California will elect someone who brings the passion, the principles, the energy and the indefatigable work ethic that Feinstein brought (and still brings) to the office.

And I recognize, as I hope the new crop of candidates running to succeed her do, that she was a true pioneer and a trailblazer who leaves enormous shoes to fill.

Why California needs a progressive senator to succeed Dianne Feinstein

It's been more than 30 years since California voters had the opportunity to vote in a competitive race for the U.S. Senate. There's no question in my mind: Californians will elect a true champion for working people to fill the open seat.

A lot has changed since Sen. Dianne Feinstein first took office. This isn't a 1990s, Blue Dog Democrat state anymore.

California is now majority Latino. More than 10 million residents are immigrants. Instead of living out the Brady Bunch fantasy of owning a home with a green lawn and white picket fence, almost half of households are renters. The cost of living has exploded and only 17% of Californians think that young people are doing better than previous generations.

Voters have also become laser-focused on electing leaders and advancing policies that work for working families. Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders swept California during the 2020 presidential primaries; Gov. Gavin Newsom was elected on the back of a (since reneged) promise to bring single-payer healthcare to the state. Progressive activists and organizers are radically reshaping city councils and municipal elections across California, with a mission to bring unhoused people indoors, end the criminal industrial complex, transform our economy away from fossil fuels, and eschew the pay-to-play politics of the past.

Sure, House Speaker Kevin McCarthy lives here, but even the Central Valley is trending bluer.

President John Adams, one of the architects of our American political system, famously said "The Representative Assembly, should be an exact Portrait, in Miniature, of the People at large."

If Adams is right, it is easy to sketch out the profile of our next senator based on the priorities of the Californians they will represent.

The next California senator should support a minimum wage of at least $20 dollars an hour. New polling from Ben Tulchin shows that a strong majority of 7 in 10 California voters support raising the minimum wage to a living wage.

They should fight to tax extreme wealth. At a time when many Californians are working two or three jobs to feed their families, the three wealthiest people in this country own more wealth than the bottom half of the American population combined. To reduce the outrageous level of inequality, California's next senator needs to ensure that the ultra-rich pay their fair share.

They also should not have authored or supported legislation that has grown our system of mass incarceration or increased the criminalization of poverty. They should have a plan to address police brutality.

They should stand up to the powerful special interests that have dominated the halls of Washington D.C. for far too long, and protect the needs of our struggling working families.

They shouldn't take money from big corporate donors.

Eradicating poverty and tackling our homeless crisis should be top priorities.

So, too, should be their unequivocal commitment to a Green New Deal that helps America reach 100% renewable energy, mitigates the effects of drought and pollution in the Golden State, and ensures justice for frontline communities.

Ultimately, California voters should elect someone who believes in economic justice – and reflects the momentum and policy priorities of progressives on the ground.

Most importantly, they should capture the optimism of California. Residents here believe – despite the odds – that we can do better. We just need a senator that is finally willing to side with the people he or she represents. We need a senator who is prepared to put it all on the line to deliver cleaner air, affordable housing and better schools to our families – not another career politician.

Progressive Californians are primed for this race. They are energized and organized. California deserves a senator who reflects those values, and 2024 is the year we'll elect one.

Joe Sanberg is a progressive business leader, anti-poverty advocate and founder of CalEITC4ME. He is the lead proponent of a 2024 ballot measure to raise California's minimum wage. This article was originally published by CalMatters.

Santa Monica, Santa Monica Pier, Marina Del Rey and Catalina Island on a clear day.

An initial review of the project by the Architectural Review Board praised elements of the design but raised concerns over the privacy of the guest rooms, lack of parking and the layout and landscaping of the ground floor level.

The ground floor is comprised of the lobby, vehicle guest drop-off area, linear circulation access drive and outdoor eating area along Colorado Avenue. While some amenities including the fitness and business centers will be below ground, no parking is proposed on-site.

The project would slot into an already busy section of Santa Monica bordered by a pair of supportive housing developments, the BBB facility, the Expo line and two other hotels.

Step Up on Colorado is at 520 Colorado. The Kaufmann Apartments, as they are known, opened in 2015 and provide housing to up to 32 formerly homeless individuals. Step Up is a national program that supports people experiencing serious mental health issues, and persons who are experiencing chronic homelessness, to help them recover, stabilize, and integrate into the community.

On the other side is Colorado Court at 502 Colorado. The building is part of Community Corporation of Santa Monica and includes 44 units of extremely low-income housing. The project was designed as a model of sustainable development to replace some of the housing lost with construction of the adjacent Big Blue Bus facility.

That block of Colorado is fenced due to the train running along Colorado and two other hotels sit at the intersection of Colorado and 5th Street.

The Planning Commission will debate the project on Wednesday, March 1 at 6 p.m. in City Hall, 1685 Main Street.

Associates over the two other executive search firms that submitted applications due to their emphasis on gathering community input and experience and familiarity with the superintendent search process and the district itself.

Leadership Associates worked with SMMUSD to select the district's two previous superintendents and Board members expressed confidence that they are again the right choice.

"Having been on the Board for 12 years, our work with Leadership Associates and our experience has been great," Board member Laurie Lieberman said during the meeting. "I feel like this proposal and in fact meeting with them that they've only enhanced the tools that they have and that they have and that they use for finding superintendents."

> Having been on the Board for 12 years, our work with Leadership Associates and our experience has been great
> - Laurie Lieberman Boardmember

The search will be led by consultant Peggy Lynch along with partners Rich Thome Chavez and David J. Verdugo, all of whom previously worked as superintendents themselves and have been involved in a combined total of over 100 superintendent searches across California.

Lynch said she was directly involved in previous SMMUSD superintendent searches and that she feels her firm has a solid grasp of the district's history and its current needs, to which Board Member Richard Tahvildaran-Jesswein agreed.

"I just truly believe that Peggy and team know who we are and have delivered with the two previous [superintendents]," he said.

The next step in the process, outlined by Lynch during the meeting, is to gather input from community stakeholders through surveys and public meetings about what they are looking for in the new superintendent. This includes parents, teachers, staff and students in addition to board members.

From there, Leadership Associates will put together a position description that will be posted on their website, SMMUSD's website as well as advertised in trade publications and sent out to potential candidates across the country.

Lynch said she and her team will then check candidate references and backgrounds and conduct individual interviews with each one before meeting with the board to discuss the applicants and help select five to six to bring in for interviews.

She expressed assuredness that this process will yield a diverse and quality group of applicants.

"Despite challenges, it's an attractive district – you're successful in lots of things that you do and you've got incredible support around your community from parents and those kinds of things – so it's an attractive job" she told the board.

The board could meet with Leadership Associates again as early as next week to discuss potential candidates and identify community groups to reach out to for input.

during the City's previous pilot program. Personal guarantees will no longer be required for parklet operators that instead elect to provide evidence of insurance that covers claims filed under the Americans with Disabilities Act but any proposed parklet that will encroach on the frontage of a neighboring business is still required to get consent from the impacted neighbors.

The Santa Monica Municipal Code currently defines a parklet as the use of public parking or loading space (other than accessible parking spaces) located in the public right-of-way that are adjacent to each other and at least one of which is adjacent to the eligible business for business activities.

The outdoor spaces had been offered free of charge on a pilot basis since summer 2020. Parklets have been credited with keeping many businesses afloat while indoor operations were limited for months on end, and played an especially important role in attracting foot traffic to key commercial corridors including Main Street and Montana Ave.

> "I appreciate what we're trying to do here"
> - Caroline Torosis Councilwoman

Following the two-year pilot program for parklets on public streets that was implemented to support local businesses through the COVID-19 pandemic, the City adopted the permanent Parklet Program in June, 2022, for spaces on public streets. The permanent rules downsized parklets to a maximum of two spaces but a revision was requested to accommodate businesses who invested in the then legal four-spot parklets during the pilot program.

The exemption was granted Tuesday night with a provision that allows the larger spaces to be transferred to new owners if the business is sold. However, if the business closes and there's a lapse in ownership, the right to a four-space parklet would end and be unavailable to a new operator.

Councilmember Jesse Zwick questioned why the rules would only apply to the lucky eleven.

"I'm sympathetic to doing everything possible to help small businesses recover and preserve the parklets – I like them. I think they contribute to the vitality of our streets. I want as many as possible in our city. But … I noticed that this option to go up to four would only be available to restaurants that had prior participated in the pilot," he said. "I'm just hoping that we can achieve this goal with a maximum degree of fairness."

Zwick, who joined the council after much of the parklet discussion had already occurred, was told that administration of large spaces was difficult and the decision to grandfather in the original group was an attempt to be fair to businesses who had already invested without codifying a system that would ultimately create too many problems for staff.

The agreed-upon changes also mean that the City Council no longer sets the security deposit for parklets, instead that will now be set by the Director of Public Works, currently Rick Valte. According to Isabel Trevino, Housing Specialist at City of Santa Monica, this allows the Director flexibility to update the security deposit and removes the need for city staff to update the deposits every year, "thus making it consistent with how most of our other ordinances read." Those fees are designed to recover costs, they will be tied to a labor index that accounts for the amount of time required to take down or maintain a parklet by city staff if it were to be abandoned by the business.

While the revised ordinance applies to 11 businesses who are grandfathered in, there's only one that currently makes use of an oversized parklet and Councilwoman Caroline Torosis said altering policy for a single business was not a precedent she wanted to support.

"I appreciate what we're trying to do here," Torosis said. "I want to be pro-business, I also want to be pro-equity and pro-parklet and I think that just as a matter of principle, I'm not into spot-zoning to help one specific business when we've had a process in place, unfortunately, since before I got here, and I know that there's reasons why we've gotten to this point, but just on principle, I voted no."

Santa Monica College Continues Communication, Media & Design Series

Santa Monica College (SMC) continues its Communication, Media & Design Series in spring 2023 with a screening of the documentary We Were All Here, with a Q&A with director Dan Kwong, at SMC's new Malibu Campus (23555 Civic Center Way, Malibu).

All events in the series are free and the public is invited to attend. Seating is strictly on a first-arrival basis.

• Wednesday, April 5 — "We Were All Here: Documentary Screening and Q&A with Director Dan Kwong" at 10 a.m. in SMC Malibu Campus Room 202. Artist and director Dan Kwong will screen and discuss We Were All Here, a collaborative video project with artist Paulina Sahagun. The documentary examines the history of Santa Monica's Pico Neighborhood, the longtime home of the area's Latinx, Black, and Asian families. A Q&A and panel discussion with director Kwong and descendants of those featured in the documentary follows the screening. The event is sponsored by the SMC Associates (smc.edu/associates), SMC Communication and Media Studies Department, and SMC Design Technology Department. Part of the SMC Black History Series and SMC Social Justice Series.

Programs are subject to change without notice, and new events may be added to the series. Up-to-date details are posted at smc.edu/calendar and available by calling the SMC Office of Public Programs at 310-434-4100.

Newer COVID-19 Strain XBB.1.5 Emerges as Dominant in Los Angeles County

A newer COVID-19 Omicron strain, XBB.1.5, has emerged as dominant in Los Angeles County according to the most recent analysis of local COVID samples from Public Health. XBB.1.5 accounts for 32.8% of sequenced specimens in LA County as of Jan. 21, outcompeting BQ.1.1, the previously dominant strain.

While new emergent strains have the potential to drive surges in transmission, the county is reporting a steady number of cases and hospitalizations compared to the week prior. Other parts of the country with significant transmission of XBB.1.5 also have not seen significant increases in COVID-19 hospitalizations or deaths.

Because the new dominant strain has more potential to cause infection, Public Health officials are asking residents, especially those who are most vulnerable to severe outcomes, to consider using common-sense protections, such as getting the bivalent booster, testing before large gatherings and seeking immediate treatment, if sick.

People over 50 and those with common health conditions, including diabetes, hypertension, asthma, kidney or liver disease, or being overweight, are at greater risk of having severe illness or death from a COVID-19 infection. They and the people around them should take extra precautions to stay safe and healthy.

Free vaccines, boosters, testing and treatment remain widely available throughout Los Angeles County. Visit a community-based test to treat site or access telehealth services by calling 1-833-540-0473. Health services for homebound residents also are available.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Feb. 21)

You keep asking what's next and you'll land in a very fun place. A new definition of success is emerging for you. You'll create something remarkable. Relationships get tighter. One special relationship will have you seeing new parts of the world. With the change of season comes a redistribution of power at work. Gemini and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 9, 30, 14, 17 and 28.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Good habits make light work of the business of being your best self. But don't let their automatic nature blind you to subtleties and the unexpected beauty tucked inside the routine of your day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You've always sensed there was more to life than can be experienced with human senses. To think we see the world as it is may be naive, but it's also simple. When things get overwhelming, return to the touchstone of practicality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Think of what you'd like to give. In a social situation where people are asking something of you, it will be easy to overpromise. Excellent boundaries kick in when you've decided ahead of time what your limit is.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). When you have a good idea and someone shoots it down, it's a gift. You need the outside world to stress your idea to make it not only good but also strong. Besides, your ego can handle it today. You're all about the work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). One could argue that you are better off for the trials you've overcome thus far, but life isn't strictly about sacrifice. It's now time to take full advantage of all treats, perks and benefits offered to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's true you have been wronged, and it's a story that's hard to give up, but you strongly want to move on. To prevent you from creating the same types of problems, the past must be put to rest. A symbolic act will clear your slate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Books, projects and other commitments have a way of holding space in your energy field. You'll free up fresh vitality by finishing what you started. Two ways will work: actually finish it or just decide you're done with it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You would usually try to give what feels appropriate and comfortable, but today's circumstances may spur you to go beyond that point because you see there's a great need to do so. You won't regret it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). The best training programs are designed to disguise the difference between reality and the drill. Today, life's lesson may be a simulation for things to come, but you'll get the most out of it by committing like it's real.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Expect false starts, repeats and redos. When it happens, just know your efforts will not be in vain. Any practice you get in now will make you better prepared for a future triumph.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Anyone who tries to control you is likely to experience an instantaneous rebellion. If you feel that you just don't have the words to say what's on your heart, try again tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll surprise your friends by acting on your fun impulses. Are you, by any chance, getting the sense that the world is changing in big ways, as a result of small, determined steps taken by individuals just like you?
