THE AVOID THE FLU ISSUE

Cardinal Mahony leaves behind tainted legacy

GILLIAN FLACCUS
RACHEL ZOLL
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES When Cardinal Roger Mahony was ordained nearly a half-century ago, the Roman Catholic church was in the throes of a modernization and renewal — and the lanky young priest who grew up near his family's poultry processing plant was seen as a leading liberal light for the times.

As a seminarian and young cleric, the Spanish-speaking Hollywood native celebrated Mass with Mexican fieldworkers, worked with Cesar Chavez to fight for better farmworker conditions and was appointed auxiliary bishop of Fresno, the heart of California's bread basket, at the tender age of 38.

Mahony retired Sunday and hopes to cement that legacy by dedicating himself full-time to the fight for immigration reform. For many, though, the cardinal's career will instead be defined — and irreparably tainted — by a devastating clergy abuse scandal that unfolded on his watch, first as bishop of Stockton and then as head of nation's largest archdiocese.

The scandal, which resulted in a $660 million settlement with more than 500 plaintiffs, proved to be the biggest erosion of Mahony's authority in a church that had already shifted around him with a revived emphasis on orthodoxy and tradition. In his final years in Los Angeles, Mahony has been dogged by hundreds of lawsuits, criminal investigations into clergy abuse in the archdiocese and a bitter legal fight over sealed church files on some of the church's worst abusive priests.

Even in his final days as archbishop, newly uncovered allegations against an aging priest refocused attention on Mahony's role and forced the resignation of the archdiocese's vicar for clergy. Still, Mahony managed to hang on, unlike Cardinal Bernard Law, who resigned as Boston archbishop over his failure to stop predatory priests.

"In a very paradoxical way, you contrast him with Cardinal Law, and I wonder if there aren't people in the Vatican who admired Mahony since he hung tough," said James Hitchcock, a St. Louis University historian who studies American Catholicism.

Severe flu hits later in season

Other illnesses masquerade as flu, local doctors are reporting

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

SM-UCLA As the last game of league play approached, Santa Monica High School's boys' basketball team found itself missing one of its starting players, point guard Jeremiah Shevlin.

The senior was out for nine days, laid low by a vicious illness that kept him out of the last two games of his high school career.

"It was definitely not your common cold," said Samohi's head coach James Hecht.

It's likely that the basketball player had this year's strain of influenza, which doctors say is hitting harder and later than in previous years.

Usually, the height of flu season comes at the end of December and early January, when people start mingling again at school or work and spread the disease, said Dr. Peter Galier, former chief of staff at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center.

"It usually creeps in right after the holidays, when people re-expose each other," he said. "We didn't see much of anything this year until the last couple of weeks."

Then, the floodgates opened.

By the end of January, the Los Angeles County Department of Public Health reported 804 positive tests for the flu since October 2010.

In the same time period, 10 people have died from the illness, according to the county's publication, InfluenzaWatch.

Anecdotally, the symptoms seem more severe, Galier said.

"More people have had longer duration, and more of the muscle aches and pains," he said.

This year's flu is marked by more severe nose issues, as well as the typical chills, fever, muscle aches and breathing difficulties.

Some people who come in reporting the flu actually have one of two other kinds of infections that have popped up this season, including a gastrointestinal illness and a respiratory illness.

The number of upper respiratory ailments, also known as RSV, seems to have increased over last year, said Dr. Wally Ghurabi, medical director of the Nethercutt

'Black Swan' wins top honor at indie Spirit Awards

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

DOWNTOWN The ballet thriller "Black Swan" won four prizes Saturday at the Spirit Awards honoring independent film, including best picture, best actress for Natalie Portman and director for Darren Aronofsky.

James Franco was picked as best actor for the survival story "127 hours," while the Ozarks crime story "Winter's Bone" earned both supporting-acting prizes, for John Hawkes and Dale Dickey.

All three films were up for best picture at Sunday's Academy Awards.

With plenty of overlap among nominees at the Oscars, the Spirit Awards are a warm-up for Hollywood's biggest party.

The British monarchy saga "The King's Speech," the best-picture front-runner at the Oscars, won the prize for best foreign film.

"Black Swan" also took the cinematography award for Matthew Libatique.

Portman and Aronofsky joked about the difficulty in getting "Black Swan" off the ground, with cash tight and few people believing the film could ever make its money back.

"My ballet teachers were, like, every day, 'So when do we get paid?'" said Portman, who won for her role as a ballerina losing her grip on reality.

Aronofsky thanked his financial backers for believing in the film. "Now, they're (expletive) rich," Aronofsky said of the money men behind "Black Swan," a $100 million hit.

Aronofsky said he has been blessed with fearless actors in all of his films and had gushing praise for Portman.

"To have this incredible performer give you everything she's got and then train for a year. I'll always be in debt to Miss Natalie Portman," Aronofsky said.

Franco, in film school at New York University when the "127 hours" script came his way, said he was inclined to pass except for the insistence of his manager, agent and publicist, who told him it was a film he had to do.

"I just finished my thesis film, so independent film is something that's a very, very big part of my life and very important to me, so this means a lot," said Franco, who stars as real-life adventurer Aron Ralston, who cut off his arm after he became trapped by a boulder in a canyon.

"Winter's Bone" co-star Hawkes thanked the film's crew, advising the crowd to "look them up and hire them for your films." He also thanked director Debra Granik, whom he called the "best of the best," and the break-out star of "Winter's Bone," Jennifer Lawrence, who lost best actress to Portman.

"I can't wait to see what the future holds for you, Jen," said Hawkes, who plays

Roads reopened after SoCal storm moves out

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES The major route between Southern and Central California is reopened after being shut down overnight because of heavy snow and ice from a winter storm that sent temperatures plunging.

The California Highway Patrol began escorting groups of motorists through the Grapevine section of Interstate 5 just before 7:30 a.m. Sunday. The steep, winding roadway at the 4,160-foot-high Tejon Pass was completely opened about an hour later.

In the Los Angeles basin, temperatures dipped into 30s and caused weather officials to issue a frost advisory for the San Fernando and San Gabriel valleys. A record low of 35 degrees was reported in Long Beach.

A dusting of snow fell in Studio City, Altadena, Pasadena Burbank, Santa Clarita and many other areas unaccustomed to seeing flakes.

Forecasters say skies will be clear for Sunday night's Academy Awards, but the red carpet will likely be chilly.

Secrecy is not a good policy

Editor:

I am deeply troubled by what was revealed about the local school district administration in "SMMUSD supe warns against sabotage" (Tuesday, Feb. 23, page 1). Your article reveals that Superintendent Cuneo created a confidential enemies list shared in secret with the Board of Education, but the fact is that the list consists of parents who have spent years working to bring about needed reforms to our special education program.

The Board of Education must issue a statement that they do not condone this sort of secret disparagement of long-standing defenders of our most fragile citizens – children with disabilities. If they do not address this to the community there will always be those who wonder if this sort of "confidential memo" about well-meaning volunteers is acceptable and standard practice in the district. Why couldn't Cuneo have made this announcement in public at a board meeting? The message inherent in this secret memo is that anyone who disagrees is an enemy of the district. This is very scary.

Making the book on trust

CITY COUNCIL RECENTLY REVIEWED plans for a new 8,300-square-foot branch library in Virginia Avenue Park adjacent to the existing Thelma Terry building. Projected cost: $12.8 million in redevelopment funds.

I commented last Monday that paying $1,542 per square foot for the project was more than 10 times the national average. I'm still asking, "Why so expensive?"

I wondered if anyone on City Council was also concerned about the library's hefty tab. During 28 minutes of discussion, not one council person asked about cost. They were all too busy congratulating themselves on how responsive they've been to requests for a new branch library.

During staff's presentation, it was disclosed that a subterranean garage included in the original $12.8 million budget was eliminated in favor of using existing Virginia Avenue Park surface parking. With no underground parking, the cost of the library should drop considerably. But, nobody has asked. What's the revised project's budget? Maybe those on the dais don't care, but I do.

It may all be moot if Gov. Jerry Brown gets his way and dissolves redevelopment agencies and absorbs their monies into the deficit ridden state budget. Around $280 million in projects, including the bloated Pico library, could go unfunded until some other means of paying for them is found. Can you say, never?

NO OSCAR FOR OSCAR

City Council reviewed and accepted an oral report by City Manager Rod Gould on implementing the recommendations proffered in the Office of Independent Review's report on the Oscar de la Torre felony child endangerment investigation by the Santa Monica Police Department.

Police contend that school board member de la Torre waited too long to intervene in a fight between two 17-year-old boys behind the Pico Youth & Family Center where he is executive director, thus possibly violating the law by putting children at risk.

Police investigated and presented their findings to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office, which declined to prosecute. de la Torre quickly responded by claiming he'd been unfairly targeted and smeared by police. Gould hired the OIR to review the police investigation and they found no wrongdoing on behalf of the SMPD. The OIR, however, was critical of the way the investigation was conducted and made suggestions about how investigations could be improved.

Gould reported that the OIR saw "no evidence to suggest ill motives behind those techniques" but employing them opened the door "for the potential appearance of bias …" and risked public confidence in the police department. He added, "The commitment to transparency and public trust in law enforcement and government in general is precious and easily lost. And, once lost, is difficult to regain."

Unfortunately, present and former city politicians as well as the usual SMPD haters have hyperbolized that the department's reputation has been damaged and time is needed to regain community trust — all after expressing "condolences" to de la Torre. Unbelievable!

I can't think of a more unfortunate, damaging and divisive position to take then tarring the entire department with a "don't trust" label.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING SLIPS THROUGH THE BUREAUCRATIC CRACK

It was strange hearing Gould talk about "trust in government."

How about the Dorchester House on Fourth Street? It's a 1988 condominium project required by terms of its development agreement with City Hall to set aside 15 units for low- and moderate-income rental housing (My Write, March 8, 2010, Page 4, "City ignores development agreements"). In return, it received generous construction bonuses.

In January 2010, local attorney Stanley Epstein discovered that all 15 Dorchester units were sold at market rates and illegally occupied by well-heeled owners, family members or illegally rented out at market rates. None of the units seem to be or ever have been in compliance with the development agreement.

After an initial investigation, City Hall sued the related owners of three of the units. Staff reports to council and the public have repeatedly maintained that the remaining 12 units were either "in compliance" or "their owners were complying."

Questioning that, I filed a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request with the City Attorney's Office and was notified last week that all the information requested proving compliance in the 12 units was confidential because it contained personal financial statements and would not be provided.

Neither Epstein nor I believe that serious efforts to enforce the agreement have been undertaken on any of the 12 units. Deputy City Attorney Gary Rhoades last Wednesday said that less than half were still not in compliance.

City Hall annually spends millions of dollars on new affordable housing. It's their number one priority. Yet, it appears that for over 20 years, city staff has completely failed — and continues to fail — to enforce contracts to maintain existing affordable housing.

It's obvious City Hall is desperately avoiding eviction proceedings against Dorchester owners. Therefore, claims of compliance are purely a smoke screen and don't seem to be completely truthful.

I'll follow up on this in future columns. In the meantime, "trust in government" is taking another hit, Mr. Gould.

Native American groups sue to stop solar projects

JASON DEAREN
NOAKI SCHWARTZ
Associated Press

BLYTHE Native Americans are clashing with the federal government over plans to fast-track approval and construction of massive solar energy projects that the Indians fear will harm sacred and culturally significant sites in Western deserts.

Recent lawsuits by two native groups pose a threat to half dozen proposed solar developments that the Obama administration has identified as a high priority in its quest for more clean energy production. One suit already has halted work on a major solar farm in Southern California.

Land use and legal experts say the lawsuits mark a new phase in a historically troubled relationship between the federal Bureau of Land Management and American Indians, who in the past have gone to court to block oil, gas, mining and other energy projects on public lands managed by the agency.

"There is this sense that there is this rush to renewable energy that's politically motivated and when tribes are consulted their concerns aren't being taken seriously," said Michelle Raheja, interim director of the California Center for Native Nations. "There's no guarantee that once the project starts that they won't harm something."

President Barack Obama's goal of generating 80 percent of the nation's electricity from clean energy sources by 2035 has led to numerous projects proposed on millions of acres of federally owned lands, most in Western states. The administration has put some of the most promising, shovel-ready projects on the fast track for BLM permitting, although the process still could take years of environmental studies and public scrutiny.

Federal officials say they have consulted with multiple tribes and have either made sure the massive solar projects will not harm any historic works or have determined that certain sites are not worthy of protecting.

"The BLM takes very seriously its responsibilities to ensure that these projects are sited and developed in the right way and in the right places, and that we honor our responsibilities to Indian nations and the law," said Kendra Barkoff, a Department of the Interior spokeswoman, who could not comment specifically on the suits because they are active litigation.

Dave Singleton with the California Native American Heritage Commission, which advises local, state and federal agencies on issues involving indigenous communities, said he's heard from at least 10 tribes in the Colorado River area concerned about various renewable projects. The problem is in part cultural: while a site may not be registered as historic, some tribal leaders say they know it's sacred because of oral history accounts.

"The tribes are saying you've consulted us, we've identified sites and you're saying it doesn't matter," Singleton said. "There's a rising anger that they're being treated with disrespect."

While the concept of using renewable sources of energy such as sunshine aligns with nature-based principles that have historically guided Native communities, members say the projects are simply in the wrong place. Some of 56,000 acres proposed for fast track solar projects in California are near abandoned villages, native drawings and other cultural landmarks.

Southern California, for example, has one of the most significant collections of geoglyphs in the world. In order to communicate with their ancestors, certain tribes created drawings, some as big as football fields, by scraping the dark gravel back to reveal pale dirt below. The wide lines of the drawings were often used for ceremonial dancing.

"There's plenty of desert out there to build solar panels," said Boma Johnson, a former archaeologist who worked for the BLM in Yuma for 25 years studying the drawings. "We have something in the Southwestern desert not matched almost anywhere in the world except southern Peru and northern Chile. We really have a national treasure here in this lost area."

Alfredo Figueroa, whose group La Cuna de Aztlan Sacred Sites Protection Circle filed three lawsuits last month against five fast-tracked projects including a 1,000 megawatt project in Blythe, said the government is not giving their concerns as much weight as is given to federal archeologists.

Where Figueroa sees an ancient throne in a pile of rocks and a thousand-year-old flute player carved into the desert floor, for example, federal experts see something less profound. BLM archeologists believe the flute player and so-called Throne of Quetsequatle are less than 50 years old, with modern concrete used in the throne's construction.

Despite the suit to stop Solar Millennium's proposed 7,000 acre project in Blythe, the plan is moving forward, said Andrea Elliott, a company spokeswoman. She said the footprint of the solar farm had been shifted many times to address tribal and environmental concerns, and note she noted that no federally recognized tribes have joined La Cuna's suit.

"Native American representatives from area tribes have been, and will continue to be, present on site to monitor activities involving cultural resources during project construction," Solar Millennium said in a statement.

The Q Line

Restoring public trust

City Manager Rod Gould recently told the City Council that the Santa Monica Police Department mishandled the investigation of school board member Oscar de la Torre. Police leadership promise changes to its practices in the wake of an independent investigation of the de la Torre probe.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you think these actions will improve the public trust in the department, or are they window dressing?

Dear EarthTalk:

Isn't it a waste that we buy water in plastic bottles when it is basically free out of our taps? Even health food stores, which should know better, sell it like crazy. When did Earth's most abundant and free natural resource become a commercial 'beverage'?

A. Jacobs,

BOTTLED WATER HAS BEEN A BIG-SELLING commercial beverage around the world since the late 1980s. According to the Worldwatch Institute, global bottled water consumption has more than quadrupled since 1990. Today Americans consume over 30 billion liters of water out of some 50 billion (mostly plastic) bottles every year. The Beverage Marketing Association reports that in 2008 bottled water comprised over 28 percent of the U.S. liquid refreshment beverage market. The only bottled drinks Americans consume more of are carbonated sodas like Coke and Pepsi.

And frankly, yes, it is a ridiculous waste that we obtain so much of our drinking water this way when it is free flowing and just as good if not better for you right out of the tap. According to the Earth Policy Institute (EPI), some 2.7 million tons of petroleum-derived plastic are used to bottle water around the world every year. "Making bottles to meet Americans' demand for bottled water requires more than 1.5 million barrels of oil annually, enough to fuel some 100,000 U.S. cars for a year," says EPI researcher Emily Arnold. And just because we can recycle these bottles does not mean that we do: The Container Recycling Institute reports that 86 percent of plastic water bottles in the U.S. end up as garbage or litter.

The financial costs to consumers are high, too: According to the Environmental Working Group (EWG), bottled water costs up to 1,900 times more than tap water. And the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) reports that 90 percent or more of the money consumers shell out for it pays for everything but the water itself: bottling, packaging, shipping, marketing, other expenses — and, of course, profits.

EWG is particularly appalled at the lack of transparency by leading bottled water sellers as to the sources of their water and whether it is purified or has been tested for contaminants. According to a recent survey by the group, 18 percent of the 173 bottled waters on the U.S. market today fail to list the location of their source; a third disclose nothing about the treatment or purity of the water inside their plastic bottles.

"Among the ten best-selling brands, nine — Pepsi's Aquafina, Coca-Cola's Dasani, Crystal Geyser and six of seven Nestlé brands — don't answer at least one of those questions," reports EWG. Only Nestlé's Pure Life Purified Water "discloses its specific geographic water source and treatment method…and offers an 800-number, website or mailing address where consumers can request a water quality test report."

EWG recommends that consumer resist the urge to buy bottled water and go instead for filtered tap water. "You'll save money, drink water that's purer than tap water and help solve the global glut of plastic bottles," the group advises, adding that it supports stronger federal standards to enforce consumers' right to know about what's in their bottled water besides water. Until that day comes, concerned consumes should check out EWG's Bottled Water Scorecard, a free website that provides information on various bottled water brands, where they originate and whether and how they are treated to remove contaminants.

ter-finals of the CIF-SS Division 1AA playoffs last week, the road to a repeat title doesn't get easier for Samohi.

Like Long Beach Poly, Mater Dei enters Tuesday's game at the Anaheim Arena nationally ranked and favored. That does little to dissuade Head Coach Marty Verdugo from abandoning his ever-present optimism.

"We are as good as any team in the nation," Verdugo said of his battle-tested Vikings. "We just have to come out with confidence."

This will be a rematch for these teams with Mater Dei getting the better of Samohi earlier this season. Despite having lost, Verdugo said that the second time around should be different.

"We tried to play too fast last time," he said. "We just have to control the tempo and stop their runs."

The game is scheduled for 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday in Anaheim.

MAHONY

"No one circled the wagons like Mahony."

Mahony declined repeated interview requests through his spokesman, Tod Tamberg. In response to e-mailed questions, Tamberg declined to comment on specific clergy abuse cases but said the cardinal does not remember the priest whose continued ministry led the vicar of clergy to resign earlier this month.

When Mahony entered the priesthood, the biggest news in the church was not clergy sex abuse, but the landmark Second Vatican Council, a series of meetings convened in the 1960s to modernize the church. He advanced rapidly in the hierarchy, becoming bishop of Stockton in 1980 and archbishop of Los Angeles in 1985, and was elevated to cardinal by Pope John Paul II in 1991.

The decades of Mahony's service defined an arc of dramatic change that saw the church shift from the more liberal attitudes of the 1960s to a centralized hierarchy under Pope John Paul II and a renewed embrace of tradition under Pope Benedict XVI. The selection of Archbishop Jose Gomez to take over after Mahony's 75th birthday underscores those changes: Gomez is a member of Opus Dei, the influential group favored by Pope John Paul II that fiercely defends church orthodoxy and authority.

"Cardinal Mahony was certainly among a group of bishops, if you had to break in one direction or another following the Second Vatican Council, who were more open to changing things," said Mark Brumley, chief executive of Ignatius Press and a former director of social ministries for the Diocese of San Diego. "I think as the church, we're finding the right balance between continuity and change. Cardinal Mahony was more in the change direction."

After being ordained in 1962, Mahony championed the cause of farmworkers as a young priest in Fresno, marching with Cesar Chavez, serving on the Mexican-American Council for Better Housing and leading the California Agricultural Labor Relations Board, where he oversaw the implementation of sweeping labor reforms for farmworkers.

He opposed an initiative that would have barred undocumented immigrants from most public services and supported legislation to allow them driver's licenses. Last year, the cardinal stood on a truck bed and chanted "Si se puede!" at a Los Angeles rally to protest Arizona's controversial immigration law.

The Catholic Education Foundation he founded in 1986 has given away more than $108 million in scholarships to disadvantaged children, said Tamberg.

"Over the years immigrant peoples have become very dear to me, and Jesus continues to call me to walk with them on their journey," Mahony wrote to his archdiocese last month.

By focusing on immigration, Mahony has tapped a deep vein that's critical to the future of the American Catholicism, said Rev. Thomas J. Reese, a senior fellow at the Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University. Latinos account for much of the growth in the U.S. church in recent years and now comprise about a third of the nation's 65 million Catholics. Gomez, who like his predecessors is expected to be named a cardinal, will be the highest-ranking Latino bishop in the United States.

"I think his legacy will be as a prophetic voice on the immigration issue, on the importance of the Hispanics to the Catholic Church in the U.S. and on social justice," Reese said of Mahony. "This is where Jesus would be, on the side of the oppressed, on the side of the poor and on the side of those in need."

But Mahony's tenure in the hierarchy of the U.S. church also has a darker side: the clergy sex abuse scandal that first found its way to his door in Stockton in the early 1980s and then followed him to Los Angeles.

FLU

Emergency Center at Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center and Orthopaedic Hospital.

LADPH reported more RSV than flu, with 974 patients testing positive for the infection.

"We're seeing plenty of it," he said. "It makes it hard to breath, and patients are not as active because of this virus."

Ghurabi estimated that the viruses took hold in November, and may last another month.

Both doctors stressed the importance of getting the flu vaccine.

Many got the message after last season's H1N1 scare, and got the shot early.

Doctors gave out 264 flu shots at an Oct. 26 event at the Santa Monica Library, and over 500 more to patients at the hospital, wrote Marketing Director Ted Braun in an e-mail.

The availability of the flu shot at most pharmacies probably reduced the number of people who took advantage of the clinic, Braun wrote.

Braun gave a conservative estimate that the UCLA Health System has administered more than 20,000 shots in its primary care offices across the Westside.

The flu shot is still available. Check with your doctor or local pharmacy to get the vaccination.

Lawrence's menacing but ferociously protective uncle.

In "Winter's Bone," Dickey co-stars as a member of a close-knit crime clan in the Ozarks. She thanked the people of Missouri, where the film was shot, for opening "their hearts and land," and said she hoped the role might land her fresh work.

"I'm getting some more auditions than I had before," said Dickey, best-known for her comic role as the daytime hooker on TV's "My Name Is Earl." "The residual trickle-down is hopefully, I'll get more work. If I get more work, I'm a happy chick."

The graffiti-art examination "Exit Through the Gift Shop" won the documentary prize, for which it also was in the running at the Oscars. Elusive British street artist Banksy, the film's director who keeps his identity secret, was not in sight.

Thierry Guetta, a Frenchman who appears in the film and is part of the street-art movement, accepted the award and was asked the inevitable question backstage: Where's Banksy?

"I don't know. Maybe somewhere here," Guetta said.

The lesbian-family tale "The Kids Are All Right" took the screenplay award for Stuart Blumberg and Lisa Cholodenko.

The backwoods funeral tale "Get Low," starring Robert Duvall, Bill Murray and Sissy Spacek, won for best film from a first-time director, Aaron Schneider.

Other Spirit Award winners included:

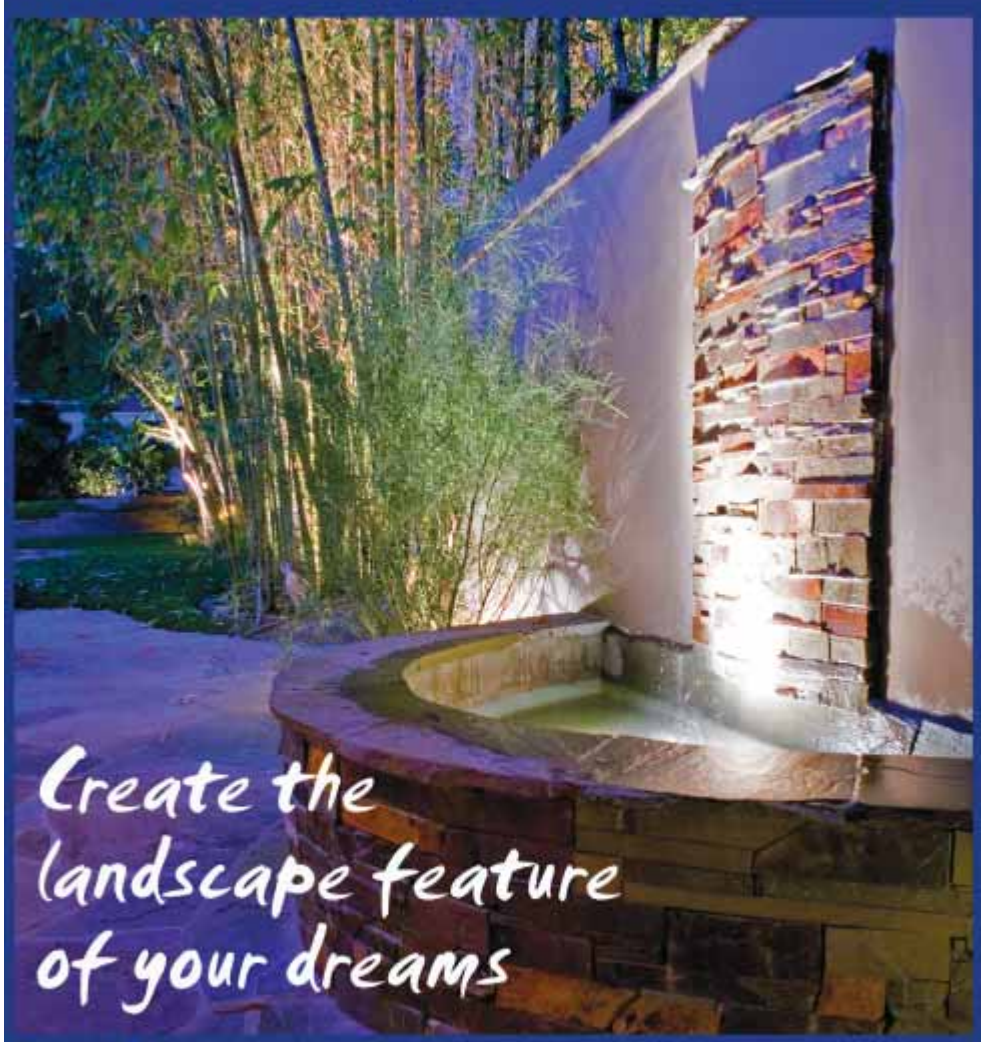

• First screenplay: Lena Dunham, "Tiny Furniture."

• John Cassavetes Award for best film made for under $500,000: "Daddy Longlegs."

• Robert Altman Award for director, casting director and ensemble cast: "Please Give."

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Take some personal time, Pisces

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Others look up to you. You might be hard-pressed to achieve your desired goals. Examine bottom lines and perhaps rethink your approach. Planning works far better than action right now. Tonight: A meeting or get-together with friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Take a negative and turn it into a positive as you attempt to get past the obvious issue. You open up to a new universe, making new possibilities happen. Listen well and understand where you might be restricting yourself. Tonight: Be willing to take a stand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Work with a partner, but be willing to take a stand. Your discomfort marks a situation, but you can get past the issue. Pull back and become more aware of your options. Try detaching, and you'll find answers. Know what is working. Tonight: Walk through an open door.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Others seem to demand a lot, and in all likelihood, you will attempt to meet those requests. Be a good listener and remain open to new ideas. Schedule an important one-on-one discussion for late today or tomorrow. Tonight: Find your favorite person.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Clear as much off your plate as you can, as opportunities of a different type come forward. It would be a shame to have to say no. Much is gained with a gentle, perceptive attitude. If you cannot swallow what is going on, make it known. Tonight: Value an invitation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Toss yourself into an activity, not halfway, but completely. When involved in this manner, all your different skills flow in one direction and don't scatter. Do stop for a compliment on the way! Another person's unanticipated action stops you in your tracks for a short while. Tonight: The only answer is "yes."

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Once more, you could decide that a venture might not be a good idea. You put it on hold. Toss out the unnecessary in your life. Then decide what is of highest priority. Curb a tendency to procrastinate -- the best way? Get started. Tonight: Relax within the moment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Pressure with a situation will take your interest as well as some self-discipline to handle. Don't toss yourself into this mix until you have decided if this activity or choice is worth your effort. You can kindly say no. Your creativity sizzles; use it well. Tonight: Hanging out is fun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could be more direct and forthright than you have been in a while. Look at a tendency to be self-indulgent and touchy. You can also decide to be self-disciplined. An unexpected development could force you to regroup. Tonight: Out and about.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You smile and draw in many more people. Your ability to understand problems helps, though your actions could be very unexpected to many. Allow yourself the freedom of the unexpected. Kind words help a nervous person relax. Tonight: Your treat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Know when to do less. You actually might spend more time quietly on what you want. You might need some downtime to evaluate what is happening. Schedule a get-together as late as possible. Use care incorporating a new person into your life. Tonight: As you like it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Act quickly with a project. Also, clear out any misunderstandings right now. You might be surprised at how easy it could be to patch up a problem. Think twice before going off on a tangent, or at least warn others beforehand. Tonight: Take some personal time.

Happy birthday

This year, you find the ability to move through issues quickly and effectively. Often you hear information that makes you shake your head. Confirm facts more often than not. Sometimes people find you to be unpredictable. True friends will understand this side of you. If you are single, you develop a greater sense of self. Someone you might not have considered before enters your life. If you are attached, the two of you build a more rewarding life because of a decision you make together. CAPRICORN is really your friend.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™

CrossMath + × − ÷

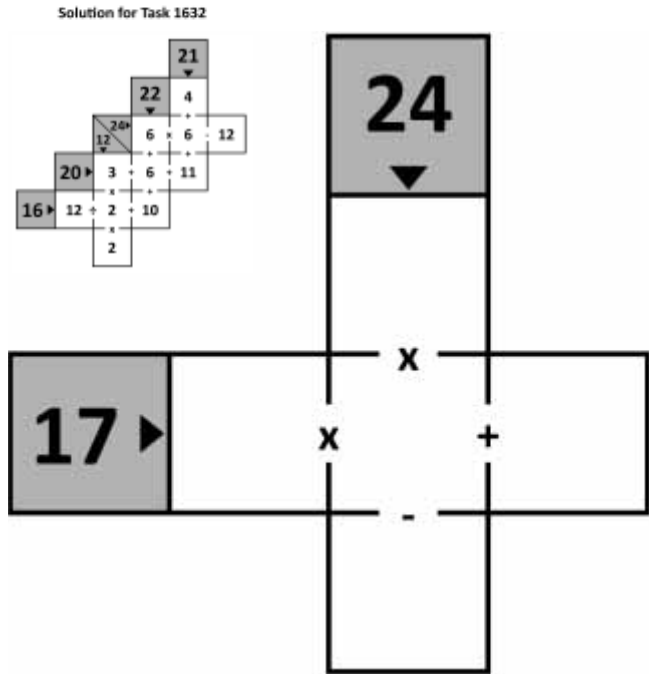

- Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
- Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
- You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
- The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Getting Old, Young: (1) Jack Smeltzer broke a record in the tractor pull championships in Columbus, Ohio, in January -- doing a "full (track-length) pull" of 692 pounds. Jack is 7 years old. The National Kiddie Tractor Pullers Association (holding 80 events a year for ages 3 through 8) uses bicycles instead of motors. Ms. Brooke Wilker, 5, was the youngest champ, lugging 300 pounds 28 feet. (2) Walmart announced in January that it would soon offer a full line of makeup especially for 8-year-olds (and up), by GeoGirl, including mascara, sheer lip gloss, pink blush and purple eye shadow, all supposedly designed for young skin. (An executive of Aspire cosmetics said her research revealed a potential market of 6-year-olds.)

■ Everyone washes hair, but those who want a license to apply shampoo in Texas need 150 hours of training, with 100 hours in "theory and practice of shampooing," including a study of "neck anatomy." A February Wall Street Journal report on excessiveness of state regulation highlighted California's year-long training to be a barber, Alabama's 750-hour schooling standard for a manicurist's license, and Michigan's 500 practice hours for performing massages. (By contrast, many less-tightly regulated states seem not to suffer. Connecticut, without licensing, fielded only six complaints last year against manicurists -- four of which involved disputes over gift cards.) Next up for licensing, perhaps: cat groomers in Ohio.
