THE WE GOT SPIRIT ISSUE

App tracks performance in the sheets

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

SILICON BEACH Not that we're keeping score but Santa Monica ranks fifth among California cities in terms of average length of sex.

This is according to data culled by the founders of the Santa Monica-based app Spreadsheets, which monitors and then catalogues users' carnal movements and sounds through the accelerometer and microphone on their iPhones.

Just to quickly couch the bedroom achievements of the Bay City: There's only so much an accelerometer and a microphone can tell us about the act of love. Without getting too graphic, but also being careful to respect all sexual preferences and the myriad of definitions of sex, Spreadsheets is largely measuring thrust-oriented sex. Santa Monica's fifth place showing is out of the 210 (of 458) California municipalities in which people used the app.

And how long do you have to last to be average in Santa Monica? Two minutes and 57 seconds.

Founders Danny Wax (a 2004 Santa Monica High School graduate) and Tyler Elick recently released the endurance data for all 50 states. Californians lasted two minutes and 38 seconds.

"People like to have something to compare themselves to and I don't think it was too threatening," Wax said. "And maybe that turns out that they feel proud of themselves. That's all we want. I think it took away all these perceptions that people have of lasting 30 minutes and 45 minutes. It brought it back to reality."

This, more than anything, is their goal, they said. The app, which launched in August and has already been downloaded in 125 countries, is not a perfect science but it can be a conversation starter.

"It's definitely been misinterpreted many times," Elick said. "I think the biggest misconception is that we're pushing louder, faster, longer, bigger, stronger, heavier, what-

Construction lag drives up home prices

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Construction on new Southern California homes is lagging, and that's driving up prices for would-be middle-class homebuyers amid a reduced inventory.

Developers are still wary about putting up new construction despite a boom in prices over past year. As a result, the region's supply of new homes dropped to about 2,200 at the end of last year compared with 19,000 in 2006, just before the market collapsed, according to the Real Estate Research Council of Southern California at Cal Poly Pomona.

Analysts say about 15,000 new homes will be sold this year in the six-county region, or 58 percent less than the 20-year

Judge says pair of state laws are unconstitutional

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SACRAMENTO, Calif. A federal judge has ruled two California laws enacted through the initiative process are unconstitutional because they retrospectively increase the punishments for crimes committed before the laws came into effect.

U.S. District Judge Lawrence K. Karlton of Sacramento issued a 58-page order on Friday, ruling that the so-called "Victims' Bill of Rights" and another law that allows the governor to reverse approved paroles cannot be enforced.

Voters passed Proposition 9 in 2008, mandating longer periods of time between parole hearings.

The Sacramento Bee reports (bit.ly/NKj5UW) Karlton found that law

‘Non-Stop’ lands at No. 1 spot at weekend box office

DERRIK J. LANG,
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES Liam Neeson has grounded “The Lego Movie.”

The action star’s airliner thriller “Non-Stop” arrived in first place at the weekend box office, effectively ending the Warner Bros. animated film’s three-week blockade at the top spot. The Universal film stars Neeson as a federal air marshal on a doomed flight. “Non-Stop” ascended in its first weekend with $30 million domestically and $20 million internationally, according to studio estimates Sunday.

“I think the fact that audiences were ready for a suspense thriller has a lot to do with the film’s success, and obviously Liam is an absolute box office draw,” said Nikki Rocco, head of distribution for Universal. “One of the main reasons people were coming to see the film was Liam.”

Fox’s “Son of God” debuted closely behind “Non-Stop” in second place with $26.5 million domestically. The film recounts the story of Jesus’ life using footage

‘12 Years a Slave’ rolls at Spirit Awards

JAKE COYLE
AP Film Writer

SANTA MONICA BEACH “12 Years a Slave” rolled at the Spirit Awards, winning five awards including best feature at the annual independent film celebration.

On the eve of the Academy Awards, the slavery tale won awards for director Steve McQueen, actress Lupita Nyong’o, screenwriter John Ridley and cinematographer Sean Bobbitt. In a more laid-back, beachside ceremony in Santa Monica, just west of Los Angeles, “12 Years a Slave” was applauded as the clear favorite of the indie circuit.

Many of the favorites won Saturday at the Spirits, including best actor for Matthew McConaughey in “Dallas Buyers Club” and Cate Blanchett in “Blue Jasmine.” McConaughey’s co-star, Jared Leto, won best male supporting performance.

Leto gave what might be the acceptance speech to end all acceptance speeches, rattling off an absurd list of thank yous to not just those with “Dallas Buyers Club,” but Hermann Hesse, Wayne Gretzky, homemade burritos, “the seven billion people on the planet” and many more. The actor-rocker added, with emphasis, “all the women I’ve been with and all the women who think they’ve been with me.”

For many, the Spirit Awards conclude months of award-season events, and they provide a chance to exhale before the Oscars. McConaughey, Blanchett, Leto and Nyong’o have racked up a slew of awards, often triumphing over the same colleagues.

“What am I going to say that I haven’t already said?” Blanchett remarked in her acceptance speech. On her way into the luncheon, the actress also repeated her view of the renewed scandal surrounding “Blue Jasmine” director Woody Allen and Dylan Farrow’s claims he sexually assaulted her as a child: “It’s a family issue, and I hope they can resolve it as a family.”

This award, one of many for Nyong’o, stood out for the now 31-year-old actress: “Not a bad way to celebrate my birthday,” she said.

Nyong’o dedicated the award to her mother, Dorothy, who was in the audience, for years of driving her to auditions. “Your love has driven me this far,” she said.

Presented by Film Independent (a group of filmmakers, industry professionals and movie buffs) and hosted Saturday by Patton Oswalt, the Spirits are first and foremost a show to fete indie film and cast a spotlight on the little films that have to scrape money together to get made.

McQueen, with “12 Years a Slave” producer Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie looking on, reflected on how the naturalistic films of John Cassavetes “changed my life.” He dedicated his directing award to Cassavetes and Solomon Northup, the man whose memoir “12 Years a Slave” is based on.

In accepting the award for best first feature, “Fruitvale Station” director Ryan Coogler provided the afternoon’s most emotional moment. His film is about Oscar Grant, a 22-year-old black man shot while handcuffed by police. Coogler implored the audience to remember the “thousands of other Oscar Grants” and wondered why so many victims of such gun violence “always look like me.” The crowd gave him a standing ovation.

Several beloved fixtures of independent film were also remembered. The deaths of James Gandolfini, Philip Seymour Hoffman and critic Roger Ebert over the last year were singled out. Gandolfini’s wife, Deborah Lin, and one of their two children attended the ceremony. (The actor was nominated for best supporting male performance.)

The Spirits’ Robert Altman Award, an honor for best ensemble and director, was

Bergamot Transit 'travesty'

Editor:

After the approval of the Hines Bergamot Transit Village (BTV) by the City Council a few weeks ago, many residents are still scratching their heads.

Hines did their job – maximize profits for their investors. Four members of the council, however, failed to do theirs – create a development agreement (DA) that insures the project's completion, compatibility with the city's fabric and its ability to mitigate the traffic it will generate.

If built as designed, the new Hines project will have a net area of 765,905 square feet, reach over 85 feet in height and cover nearly three football fields.

At the meeting where the final approval was given, council members seemed resigned to the project as the only viable alternative. Why?

In fact, there are many other options, all of them better than a project that will generate an additional 7,000 new car trips daily in our already congested city and strain our precious water resources at a time of drought.

The alternatives range from lower scale projects with less density to the adaptive reuse of the existing Paper Mate structure. An adaptive re-use project could be completed "in one go" and would bear the closest resemblance to the dynamic "Village" atmosphere envisioned by the (Land Use and Circulation Element). To describe the current BTV project as a "Village" is a joke.

If Hines were to complete only the large office structure (33 percent of the entire project), perhaps Bergamot Transit "travesty" would be a better name for the building that will not include any housing and will generate the most traffic. The fact that this building will also be the most profitable could reduce Hine's incentive to complete the remainder of the project. After they have their office building, the promised housing and community benefits might never materialize.

In a worst-case scenario, the community would be left looking at a large office building adjacent to a vacant lot and/or abandoned Paper Mate building for up to 10 years ... if no one steps up to complete the project. Are there any penalties or clauses that might prevent this from happening? No. In fact, Hines has already written into their agreement with the city that they are under no obligation to build anything further and will suffer no penalties it they decide not to do so.

As it stands, Hines is getting everything upfront while the residents will be left with massive traffic and no assurances that they will ever get additional housing or community benefits. This is not a good deal for the residents of Santa Monica ... and they are understandably upset by the city's enthusiasm for a project that will increase the tax base but could forever change the city in the process.

What are the options for those who still oppose this ill-conceived project? There is only one – pass a referendum by signing a petition that would annul the current agreement or put it to a citywide vote. There are 30 more developers with similar projects in the wings waiting to see if the residents will be successful with this Herculean task. If we fail, the floodgates could open. If we succeed, we will have regained our voice to shape the city's future.

We urge all residents to find one of the many petitions being circulated and sign it! For more info: Residocracy.org

A chain of fools ...

LAST TUESDAY, CITY COUNCIL VOTED to fully fund repairs for "Chain Reaction" -- the controversial sculpture in the Santa Monica Civic Center that looks like an atomic mushroom cloud made out of chains.

My hat is off — way off — to Robert Holbrook, the only councilperson with enough sense to vote against the give-away of close to a half million dollars in taxpayer money to restore the politically themed piece and install a landscaped barrier around its base to prevent children from climbing on it.

City Council had given preservationists a year to raise the estimated $400,000 needed for engineering and structural work to rebuild the 20-year old sculpture designed by noted Los Angeles Times political cartoonist, the late Paul Conrad. Supporters struggled to raise a little over $100,000 — far short of the amount needed for engineering and repair.

This newspaper reported last Thursday, that "between the newly approved $75,000 in testing, the $80,000 previously spent on repairs and testing, and the estimated costs, City Hall stands to spend between $255,000 and $455,000 on total maintenance after the public's donations." ("City Council agrees to save 'Chain Reaction,'" Feb. 26, 2014, Pg. 1).

Councilwoman Gleam Davis told preservationists, "We threw down a challenge and you met the challenge. The community outpouring for it shows that it's well-loved." Come again? A handful of supporters including Conrad's son David could only raise one hundred grand or a quarter of what was needed?

In my book, they fell way short of "meeting the challenge." And while I realize it's anecdotal, most people I know and have talked to hate the sculpture and think it should be relegated to a landfill or, to be more politically correct, recycled.

When City Hall was offered the 26-foot-tall, anti-nuclear sculpture in 1991, it generated much controversy. A public poll came in 730-392 against the work. Nevertheless, then as now, politicians ignored the public and gave their blessings to the piece.

Despite numerous statements from City Hall honchos that municipal money was not available and preservation funding would have to come from private sources, City Manager Rod Gould reversed course in December and signaled that City Hall would ante-up for repair costs not covered by private sources.

I guess that means the city of Santa Monica is in great fiscal shape despite rumors of pending multi-million-dollar deficits due to increased payroll, retirement and benefit costs.

Of course, there'll be no need for any new tax measures (such as a possible increase in the property transfer tax) or fee increases on services because if City Hall has enough cash to pour down a "Chain Reaction" rat hole, it doesn't need to raise taxes or fees.

Or, look at it this way, a quarter to a half-million bucks is a lot of money that could have been used to encourage local artists and develop meaningful art projects. Pity it's being wasted on this.

I also think the Landmarks Commission seriously erred when they declared this 20-year-old work a "landmark" in July of 2012. Two decades is not an adequate test of time. But, I think the Landmarks Commission errors in many of its designations.

It's also interesting to note that when it comes to public art, Santa Monica usually trips, stumbles and falls on its face. Who could forget the "Solar Web" that art supporters envisioned for the beach near the Venice borderline?

In addition to being an "interactive jungle gym," the piece by the late Nancy Holt was also designed to mark the summer and winter solstices — an original concept, no doubt.

The $270,000 sculpture would be made from black steel pipe. It was 16 feet tall, 52 feet wide and 72 feet long and unlike "Chain Reaction," people could climb on this sculpture.

The concept for "Solar Web" was approved by City Council in May of 1989.

Despite heavy support from the arts community, "Solar Web" was reviled and ridiculed by many in the community. The Recreation and Parks Commission unanimously rejected placement of "Solar Web" on the proposed beach site. Commissioners said that open space on the beach should be reserved for recreational use — not a sculpture garden.

The debate raged on and on over the years, City Council finally reconsidered. On Sept. 28, 1999, they vetoed "Solar Web." and ended a 15-year controversy.

SIGN, SIGN, SIGN

There's one week left to sign the Residocracy.org referendum petition. It would recall City Council's recent approval of the development agreement for the massive Bergamot Transit Village — a 766,000-square-foot mixed-use, traffic generating development proposed for 26th Street and Olympic Boulevard.

Between 6,100 and 6,500 valid registered Santa Monica voter signatures are needed by March 12.

If the petition is successful, City Council will be required by law to repeal the Bergamot development agreement or to place it on the ballot for the November election and let Santa Monica voters decide whether the development will be built as presented. It will also send a strong message about who is really in charge.

Petitioners I've talked to are optimistic they'll collect more than enough valid signatures, but the heavy weekend rains didn't make the process any easier. Time is growing short and every signature counts.

If you haven't signed or you want to grab a petition and collect signatures from your neighbors, drop by the Coldwell-Banker offices at 1608 Montana Ave. during normal business hours. Or, call Kate Bransfeld at (310) 395-1133 for information and go online at Residocracy.org

As NC debates, other states empty coal ash dumps

MICHAEL BIESECKER
MITCH WEISS
Associated Press

MONCKS CORNER, S.C. Inside pits containing 1.7 million tons of coal ash at the Jefferies Generating Station, the hydraulic arm of a big orange excavator scooped up the toxic gray sludge and dropped it into the back of a dump truck.

Once loaded, the truck drove down a muck-covered road from the Santee Cooper power plant located about 30 miles north of Charleston to a nearby factory where the water-logged ash is dried out and used to make concrete.

Just across the state line in North Carolina, where a massive Feb. 2 spill from a Duke Energy dump coated 70 miles of the Dan River in toxic sludge, top officials have suggested this very type of ash-removal operation in South Carolina and other states could be dangerous.

Experts say that is not the case.

At sites across the country, coal ash dumped decades ago is dug up and recycled to make concrete, asphalt and other building products. In Wisconsin, for example, the utility We Energies is recycling ash for use in an interstate construction project.

"There is more and more interest in using the ponded ash as it becomes obvious those older unlined ponds are probably going to be facing some kind of regulation in the not-so-distant future," said Thomas Adams, executive director of the American Coal Ash Association, an industry group is funded by utility companies that include Duke.

Following a massive coal ash spill in Kingston, Tenn., five years ago, the U.S. Environmental Agency has been developing regulations for how coal ash can be disposed of. The agency is set to issue those rules in December.

For decades, utilities have looked for commercial uses for coal ash, a byproduct of coal-fired electricity generation that includes poisons such as arsenic, lead and mercury. About half of the more than 100 million tons of coal ash created each year in the United States is recycled for uses federal officials have deemed safe as long as the toxic materials are encapsulated in the finished products.

Duke, the nation's largest electricity company, has an existing program seeking beneficial uses for its waste. Depending on its quality, coal ash can be sold for as much as $40 a ton, enough to cover the cost of hauling it away.

But there has always been more ash created by the nation's utilities than demand to use it. As a result, decades of waste has ended up in pits and mounds, typically next to coal-fired power plants. And those plants, which need large amounts of water to make steam, are located next to rivers and lakes.

N.C. Environmental Secretary John Skvarla suggested last week it would be unwise for his agency to force the removal of Duke's leaky coal ash pits without long and careful study.

"There are environmental scientists who say that is the worst thing that could happen to the environment," Skvarla said. "The answer is nobody knows at this point in time."

Gov. Pat McCrory, who worked for Duke Energy for 28 years prior to becoming governor, echoed similar worries. State officials were later unable to provide an example or academic study showing the removal of coal ash has harmed the environment.

Dennis Lemly, a biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service who has studied the long-term impacts of coal ash pollution, said that is because there are none.

"What's the worst that could happen?" Lemly said. "Spilling a dump truck full of ash is nothing like spilling a couple hundred million cubic yards of ash into a river."

Rennie M. Singletary, a vice president for Santee Cooper, said the removal of the toxic ash from unlined pits shows the commitment of South Carolina's largest electricity provider to protecting the state's waterways.

"If you have a good plan and manage the excavation in a good engineered way, there's little risk in moving the coal ash," Singletary said. "Our intention is to return it to a natural area of wetlands, like it was before it was turned into an impoundment."

A coalition of environmental groups represented by the Southern Environmental Law Center sued Santee Cooper and SCE&G in 2012 over groundwater contamination from their coal ash dumps. Both of the utilities quickly settled, agreeing to remove the ash over the next decade.

The Q Line

Things will be great when you're Downtown

Petula Clark sure knew what she was talking about in the classic, "Downtown." There is no finer place, at least according to a survey released by Downtown Santa Monica Inc. last week, which showed that the area is thriving, with more residents living there than every before, new restaurants and retail and plenty of tech jobs.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:

What are your fondest memories of Downtown Santa Monica? How has it changed and what do you think of it now?

Contact qline@smdp.com before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. You can also call 310-573-8354.

WAVE OF THE FUTURE? Proponents of synthetic biology tout its potential for bringing about great advances in medicine, energy and cheaper foods. But health advocates worry that the risks to health and the environment may be too great. Pictured: a researcher using 'synbio' to engineer new microbes as an alternative to yeast for turning complex sugars into biofuels.

Real or synthetic?

Dear EarthTalk:

Should those of us who care about our health and the planet be concerned about the new trend in genetic engineering called synthetic biology?

Chrissie Wilkins
Bern, NC

"SYNTHETIC BIOLOGY" (OR "SYNBIO") refers to the design and fabrication of novel biological parts, devices and systems that do not otherwise occur in nature. Many see it as an extreme version of genetic engineering (GE). But unlike GE, whereby genetic information with certain desirable traits is inserted from one organism into another, synbio uses computers and chemicals to create entirely new organisms.

Proponents of synbio, which include familiar players such as Cargill, BP, Chevron and Du Pont, tout its potential benefits. According to the Synthetic Biology Engineering Research Center (SYNBERC), a consortium of leading U.S. researchers in the field, some promising applications of synthetic biology include alternatives to rubber for tires, tumor-seeking microbes for treating cancer, and photosynthetic energy systems. Other potential applications include using synbio to detect and remove environmental contaminants, monitor and respond to disease and develop new drugs and vaccines.

While these and other applications may not be widely available for years, synthetic biology is already in use for creating food additives that will start to show up in products on grocery shelves later this year. Switzerland-based Evolva is using synthetic biology techniques to produce alternatives to resveratrol, stevia, saffron and vanilla. The company's "synthetic vanillin" is slated to go into many foods as a cheaper and limitless version of real vanilla flavor. But many health advocates are outraged that such a product will be available to consumers without more research into potential dangers and without any warnings or labeling to let consumers know they are eating organisms designed and brought to life in a lab.

"This is the first major use of a synbio ingredient in food, and dozens of other flavors and food additives are in the pipeline, so synbio vanilla could set a dangerous precedent for synthetic genetically engineered ingredients to sneak into our food supply and be labeled as 'natural,'" reports Friends of the Earth (FoE), a leading environmental group. "Synthetic biology vanillin poses several human health, environmental and economic concerns for consumers, food companies and other stakeholders."

For example, FoE worries that synbio vanilla (and eventually other synthetic biology additives) could exacerbate rainforest destruction while harming sustainable farmers and poor communities around the world. "Synbio vanilla…could displace the demand for the natural vanilla market," reports FoE. "Without the natural vanilla market adding economic value to the rainforest in these regions, these last standing rainforests will not be pro¬tected from competing agricultural markets such as soy, palm oil and sugar." Critics of synbio also worry that releasing synthetic life into the environment, whether done intentionally or accidentally, could have adverse effects on our ecosystems.

Despite these risks, could the rewards of embracing synthetic biology be great? Could it help us deal with some of the tough issues of climate change, pollution and world hunger? Given that the genie is already out of the bottle, perhaps only time will tell.

Negligence and Auto Accidents

To have a valid car accident claim, you must first determine the negligent party or parties that caused the car crash. You may suspect that another driver, pedestrian, motorcyclist etc. acted carelessly, but cannot identify what traffic laws they violated. A skilled car accident attorney, however, can examine police reports and state traffic laws and speak to witnesses to determine who was at fault for your motor vehicle accident.

Tip: Act Quickly

If you seek legal advice, it's important that you do so as soon as possible after an accident. You're more likely to get the compensation due to you if your attorney is able to act quickly. Our state attorney's are available 24/7 to discuss your claim.

Washington state nuclear waste tanks are flawed?

NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
Associated Press

SPOKANE, Wash. While one of the newer double-walled nuclear waste storage tanks at a Washington state complex has leaked, six others have "significant construction flaws" that could lead to additional leaks, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press.

The 28 double-walled tanks at Hanford nuclear waste complex hold some of the worst radioactive waste at the nation's most contaminated nuclear weapons site.

One of those giant tanks was found to be leaking in 2012. But subsequent surveys of the other double-walled tanks performed for the U.S. Department of Energy by one of its Hanford contractors found at least six shared defects with the leaking tank that could lead to future leaks, the documents said. Thirteen additional tanks also might be compromised, according to the documents.

Questions about the storage tanks jeopardize efforts to clean up radioactive waste at the southeastern Washington site. Hanford cleanup already costs taxpayers about $2 billion a year.

"It is time for the Department (of Energy) to stop hiding the ball and pretending that the situation at Hanford is being effectively managed," Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., wrote Friday in a letter to Energy Secretary Ernest Moniz.

Energy Department officials in Richland said the agency continues to make thorough inspections of the tanks, and has increased the frequency of those inspections.

"They used to be reviewed every five to seven years," said Tom Fletcher, the Energy Department's assistant manager for tank farms. "Now we are moving to a three-year time frame."

The department is in the process of inspecting the final eight double-walled tanks at Hanford that have not been analyzed since the leak was detected in late 2012, Fletcher said Friday.

No new leaks have been found, he said.

"If there are changes or improvements we need to make in the program, based on what we learn, to make sure we capture the risks that exist on the tank farms, we will make them," Fletcher said.

He added the Energy Department continues to examine the possibility of building new storage tanks at Hanford.

Concerns about the disposal of nuclear waste and the threat of leaks are not limited to Washington state. Two weeks ago, 13 workers at an underground nuclear dump in New Mexico were exposed to radiation. The above-ground radiation release led to the shutdown of operations at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant as authorities investigate the cause of the leak and the health effects on employees.

Tom Carpenter of the citizen watchdog group Hanford Challenge said he wasn't surprised that more of the double-walled tanks are in danger of leaking.

"These tanks have an engineered design life, and we are reaching the end," Carpenter said. "It's bad planning that they don't have new tanks up and running."

While new tanks are expensive, cleaning up a leak is more expensive, he added. "The price for cleaning up the environment once this stuff gets out there is incalculable."

Hanford contains some 53 million gallons of high-level radioactive wastes from the production of plutonium for nuclear weapons. They are stored in 177 underground storage tanks, many of which date back to World War II and are single-walled models that have leaked. The 28 double-walled tanks were built from the 1960s to the 1980s.

Current plans call for transferring wastes from leaking single-walled tanks to the newer and bigger double-walled tanks, where the waste will be stored while a $13 billion plant for treating the waste is constructed. But the treatment plant is plagued with design problems and construction has stalled.

The situation did not appear dire until the news in October 2012 that the oldest of the double-walled tanks, called AY-102, had leaked, becoming the first of those 28 tanks to do so.

At the time, the Energy Department blamed construction problems with this particular tank for the leak and said it "seems unlikely" that the other double-walled tanks would leak.

However, Wyden said engineering reviews of six other double-walled tanks "found significant construction flaws in those six tanks essentially similar to those at the leaking tank." Those six tanks contain about 5 million gallons of radioactive wastes, wrote Wyden, who until recently was chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

For instance, one tank was found to have bulging "in the primary and secondary bottoms," according to the documents obtained through Wyden's office. The tank also had a high number of welds that were rejected by inspectors and done again during its construction.

Additionally, a review of 13 other double-walled tanks found they were in better shape than the leaker. "But construction issues identified for these tanks, such as weld rejection rates, are cause for concern" and raise "uncertainty of long-term tank integrity," Wyden wrote.

That means that 20 of the 28 double-walled tanks at Hanford raise some level of concern.

Wyden said the Energy Department should take a new look at proposals by the governors of Washington and Oregon to build new storage tanks at Hanford. Such tanks are likely to cost more than $100 million each.

The senator also criticized the Energy Department for releasing a "framework" for the cleanup of Hanford in September that did not mention the construction flaws in the double-walled tanks. He called that "indefensible."

"The citizens living along banks of the Columbia River deserve to know the full story of what is happening with the Hanford tanks," Wyden wrote.

Wyden asked the Energy Department to respond with an action plan in 45 days.

Hanford, located near Richland, stores about two-thirds of the nation's high-level radioactive waste.

Officials have said the leaking materials pose no immediate risk to public safety or the environment because it would take perhaps years for the chemicals to reach groundwater.

The federal government built Hanford at the height of World War II as part of the Manhattan Project to build the atomic bomb.

given to Jeff Nichols' coming-of-age tale "Mud." The John Cassavetes Award, which honors films made for less than $500,000, went to the unlikely friendship drama "This Is Martin Bonner," which director Chad Hartigan said was made for just $42,000. Gasps of admiration were heard throughout the beachside tent.

Other winners included "20 Feet From Stardom" for best documentary, "Blue Is the Warmest Color" for best international film, Bob Nelson of "Nebraska" for best first screenplay, and "Short Term 12" for best editing.

The spirit of thrifty striving pervaded. McConaughey (also a co-star in "Mud") called indie work, "a feeder road" compared to the Autobahn of big-budget moviemaking. But he said he relished the freedom, even though it means "less zeroes on the paycheck."

In his monologue, however, Oswalt put a less optimistic spin on it. He said that in the course of his opening remarks, "The Lego Movie" had made more money than all of the Spirit Award nominees combined.

Spreadsheets costs a buck and can only be downloaded on Mac products. Thus far, most downloads have come from 28- to 33-year-olds, Wax said. About 60 percent of the downloads are by men.

This is both Wax and Elick's first foray into the tech startup world. Wax played professional golf before working on the app and Elick worked in real estate.

"I don't know how big a fan we are of the Silicon Beach name but the movement is kind of what we go after," Wax said. "It hasn't been as big as everyone's made it out to be."

"It's young and segmented and there's great tight knit pockets but I don't think there's all that much outside of certain coworking communities," Elick continued. "It's young. That's the challenge and it's also the excitement."

They came up with the idea when they were brainstorming about the pros and cons of our intimacy with technology.

"We were thinking about the fact that people are increasingly attached and comfortable with their phones," Elick said. "As well as the fact that generally, in a relationship, the phone becomes a nuisance."

Wax is a user of Spreadsheets and he sells it as an aphrodisiac of sorts.

"For me, it just gives me a reason," he said. "I think that's the number one reason. If we do it twice a week, now it's three times a week. That's the best usage case right there."

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card℠ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Pressure seems to build to an unprecedented level. The unexpected could occur when dealing with a key associate. A partner might get very controlling as well. Keep your cool, and know that everything could change quickly. Tonight: In the limelight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You tend to be present in the moment while still gaining an overview of the situation. Someone might push you hard to get his or her way. The results will be that you distance yourself from this person. Honor a change of pace. Tonight: Let your imagination run wild.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Deal directly with someone whom you care a lot about. You might want to tap into your creativity when dealing with this person. Push comes to shove with a new friendship. Tonight: Opt for togetherness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You might need to defer to a key person in your life. An effort to work together could seem feasible initially, but you'll need one person to be in charge; let it be the other person. Tonight: Say "yes" to a suggestion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You have the strength to continue like the Energizer Bunny. Just the same, someone could throw a boomerang in your path. Jump over it, and don't let it trip you up. Be aware of what others are asking, but don't interfere with the completion of a project. Tonight: As you like it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to let go of plans and let your spontaneous personality take over. Passion consumes much of your time, whether it be a certain topic, person, pastime or sport. Consider incorporating more passion into your daily life. Tonight: Kick up your heels.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You'll want to understand what is happening with a close loved one. You can push and prod to get answers, but know that this manipulation could backfire. Though you might find it difficult to play it loose with this person, you'll need to. Tonight: Happiest at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Keep communication open, and try not to make any judgments. Listen to what others are saying, and imagine what it must be like to be in their shoes; your understanding will evolve as a result. Tonight: Be available.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Keep reaching out to someone at a distance. You might not like what you hear at first, and you'll wonder what would be best to do. Keep a conversation lively yet open. Refuse to replay a difficult situation over and over again in your head. Tonight: Make it your treat.

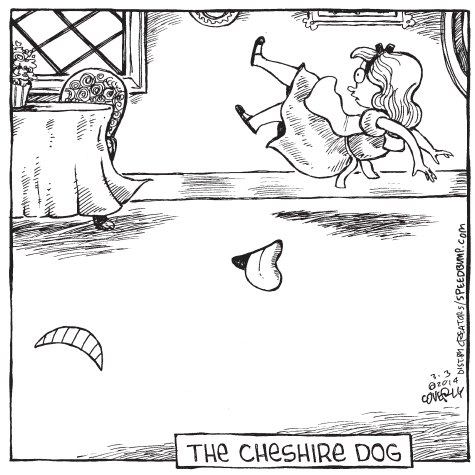

Monday, March 3, 2014

This year you might not always be comfortable with what happens. Your ego could take a beating. Curb a tendency to overindulge, especially when you're upset. Learn to take in the big picture. If you are single, use care when dating, as you might be prone to meeting emotionally unavailable people this year. Before committing, get to know someone well. The best period for meeting someone of significance will be through July 2014. If you are attached, the two of you might not always be on the same emotional frequency. When you are, you have a great time together. ARIES can get you riled up!

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Norway's prison system is regarded as among the most inmate-friendly in the world, but convicted mass murderer Anders Breivik is still not impressed. Breivik, serving 21 years for the 2011 bomb-and-gun attacks that killed 77 people, may already enjoy amenities unheard of for a comparable American murderer, but he sent wardens 12 demands in November, including an upgrade of his manual typewriter and his PlayStation 2 (to a PS3, with better access to game selection). He also demanded that his weekly government "allowance" (equivalent of $49) be doubled, and said if the "torture" of his living conditions is not relieved, he would be forced into a hunger strike. (Breivik threatened a similar strike in 2012, citing "inhumane" conditions such as cold coffee, lack of skin moisturizer and insufficient butter for his bread.)

■ Following alarming reports, the Ohio attorney general's office began working with the Ohio Veterinary Medical Association in December to be vigilant for pet owners who might be commandeering their dogs' and cats' pain killers -- for their own use. Worse, other reports suggested some owners were deliberately injuring their pets just to obtain the drugs.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1923 - TIME magazine is published for the first time.

1924 - The thirteen-century-old Islamic caliphate is abolished when Caliph Abdul Mejid II of the Ottoman Empire is deposed. The last remnant of the old regime gives way to the reformed Turkey of Kemal Atatürk.

1924 - The Free State of Fiume is annexed by Kingdom of Italy.

1931 - The United States adopts The Star-Spangled Banner as its national anthem.

1940 - Five people are killed in an arson attack on the offices of the communist newspaper Norrskensflamman in Luleå, Sweden.

LAWS

"creates a significant risk" of longer sentences for prisoners than those they faced when their crimes were committed. His conclusion, Karlton said, was based on evidence presented at a non-jury trial before him last year as well as evidence submitted by prisoners' attorneys showing terms that had been lengthened by the law.

His injunction effectively blocks state enforcement of the law. It also instructs the Board of Parole Hearings to revert to a statute in effect before Proposition 9 passed that governs the spacing of parole hearings and guaranteed thousands of prisoners an annual suitability hearing.

In 1988, voters passed Proposition 89, allowing governors to review and reverse paroles in murder cases that the board had already approved by the board.

Karlton's ruling Friday said that every governor has abused that power since the measure passed by blocking many of the paroles they reviewed.

"In practice," he wrote, "the governors have used it to tip the scales against parole. Thus, while the governors could use the law to review parole decisions to ensure that they are accurate and fair, they appear to have no such concern about decisions that deny parole."

The judge also ordered the governor to stop reversing already-approved paroles and to apply the same factors considered by the board.

One of Karlton's previous rulings also had blocked elements of Proposition 9 from going forward, but the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down his decision.

average, the Los Angeles Times reported.

The slow investment in new homes has meant trouble for prospective buyers such as Citlali and Israel Gonzales, who are living with family members in Corona to save money.

They wanted a new home when they started looking a year ago. But they now would be happy with a fixer-upper in their price range — and even that is proving elusive.

"It's starting to get discouraging," Israel Gonzales said.

Other factors are also eating into the meager supply of reasonably priced homes on the market.

Cash-rich investors are snapping up homes and renting them out as investments.

Developers are also wary of investing in attached condominium projects, which would typically sell for less for homebuyers looking for a starter home, the newspaper reported.

Only about 10 percent of today's new projects are attached condominiums, compared with half in previous expansions, said housing consultant Jeff Meyers, who heads Meyers Research in Beverly Hills.

It will be at least next year before many new projects are feasible, said Randall Lewis, executive vice president of Lewis Group, an Upland development firm.

Some builders are focusing instead on taking over stalled subdivisions that were abandoned by other builders during the real estate crash, said Steve Ruffner, regional president for KB Home of Los Angeles. "We're looking for ready-to-go, finished lots that we can build a home on," he said.

from the production of History Channel's 10-part miniseries "The Bible." Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst for box-office tracker Rentrak, noted it was a strong showing because box office predictions for "Son of God" were wildly varied.

"It's difficult to track religious- and faith-based films, as we learned with 'The Passion of the Christ,' " Dergarabedian said. "If the expectation is that Hollywood should make more movies like this, then the audiences who want these movies have to vote with their dollars. It's only then that Hollywood will wake up and see this as a viable genre that people will want to see."

"Son of God," which features Portuguese actor Diogo Morgado in the role of Jesus, is the first of several religious-themed films set for release this year, including next month's "Noah" starring Russell Crowe and "Exodus" with Christian Bale planned for December.

"The Lego Movie," which features the voices of Chris Pratt and Elizabeth Banks as characters from the block-building toy franchise, came in third place with $21 million in its third weekend, bringing its total domestic haul to $209.3 million. "Lego Movie" also earned $21 million from 52 international territories.
