JULIE WEISS

‘Marathon goddess’ puts spotlight on pancreatic cancer

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

MAIN STREET On a typical day, Julie Weiss will wake up, walk out of the door of her Santa Monica apartment and go for a five mile run near the beach.

She claims it’s better for waking a person up than coffee, which she’s given up for Lent, but the runs hold another, more important purpose than jumpstarting the morning: training.

Every week for the next year, Weiss plans to run a full marathon as part of her “52 for You” campaign, an effort to raise $1 million to support research and programs for the Manhattan Beach-based nonprofit the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network.

That’s 26.2 miles, an amount that many people would consider an accomplishment to complete once in their lives, every weekend.

“I’m determined,” Weiss said. “This is something that can be done.”

Weiss already has 24 marathons under her belt since she began doing the races in 2008, and a qualifying time for the Boston Marathon which she will run this year. The marathon goddess, as she is known in running circles, also has motivation that goes far beyond a desire for reputation, or even a love of the sport.

Weiss qualified for Boston in December 2010, a month after her father, Maurice Weiss, died from pancreatic cancer.

The loss was devastating, and caused her to look more deeply into the mysterious illness that had taken the vivacious man who went through the world each day with a pocket trumpet and the humor to use it.

She didn’t like what she found.

According to the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network, pancreatic cancer is the 10th most commonly diagnosed cancer in the United States, but is the fourth leading cause of cancer death.

It’s the only cancer that has a five-year

Blind theater group inspires actors and their audience

BY COLIN NEWTON
Special to the Daily Press

DOWNTOWN The tension in the garage was familiar to anyone who’s ever been at a play rehearsal.

The garage, located in a house north of Montana Avenue, had been dressed up to look like an outdoor café. Actors ran over lines and worked out blocking, sometimes repeating lines and tweaking movements, nailing their parts in a heartbeat.

But, unlike most other actors, everyone in this company was visually impaired. Most were totally blind.

These actors were part of Theatre by the Blind, a performing arts program for visually impaired adults. The program is part of CRE Outreach, a West Los Angeles-based nonprofit organization that uses theater to reach visually impaired individuals and at-risk youth.

The program was created by Christina Kokobo, who took people from the Braille Institute and put them on stage where they engaged an audience and told the stories of their lives.

After Kokobo died in 2007, the program fell into the hands of artistic director Greg Shae and executive director Bryan Caldwell.

Shae and Caldwell, who had a mutual background in theater, turned the program into a touring group that produced and put on self-written shows.

Although most years the characters and stories are generated by the actors, this time the source is from outside the group.

The work is “Private Eyes,” written by Stephen Dietz, a thriller that presents a play within a play about an actor whose wife appears to be having an affair with a director.

“I thought it would be a really interesting challenge,” Shae said.

Although Shae has worked with a variety of people, from the mentally ill to life sentence prisoners, this work is personal for

Brad Pitt, Clooney, Sheen headline marriage rights play

SANDY COHEN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES Martin Sheen commanded the stage with his impassioned portrayal of an attorney arguing for gay-marriage rights; Jane Lynch inspired instant response as a vehement same-sex marriage opponent; Brad Pitt dazzled as a judge.

It was all part of the star-studded West Coast premiere of "8," a play about the 2010 federal court fight against Proposition 8, the gay-marriage ban that California voters approved in 2008.

The performance Saturday at the Wilshire Ebell Theatre in Los Angeles also featured George Clooney, Kevin Bacon, Jamie Lee Curtis, Christine Lahti, George Takei, John C. Reilly, Chris Colfer, Matthew Morrison and Jesse Tyler Ferguson.

The play by Oscar winner Dustin Lance Black made its Broadway debut last year in similar starry fashion. Saturday's benefit performance was broadcast live on YouTube, where director Rob Reiner said it drew 200,000 viewers. He hopes it attracts more than a million before its weeklong online run ends. The play will also be staged around the country with local actors at colleges and community theaters.

"We want as many people as possible to see what happened inside that courtroom," said Reiner, a founding member of the American Foundation for Equal Rights, which is funding the federal fight for marriage equality.

Relying largely on transcripts from court proceedings, "8" introduces viewers to the couples who challenged the California initiative, the attorneys who argued their case and a bumbling witness who spoke out against them.

One couple has two children together; the other wants to start a family; and a witness testifying in favor of the same-sex marriage ban said under oath that marriage equality was best for couples, kids and the country.

The real-life couples in the case — Sandy Stier (Curtis) and Kris Perry (Lahti), and Jeff Zarillo (Matt Bomer) and Paul Katami (Morrison) — and the attorneys — David Boies (Clooney) and Theodore B. Olson (Sheen) — were in the audience Saturday, along with director Brett Ratner, designer Diane Von Furstenberg and Clooney's girlfriend, Stacy Keibler.

'Lorax' cleans up at box office with $70.7M debut

CHRISTY LEMIRE
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES "Dr. Seuss' The Lorax" raked in all kinds of green, earning $70.7 million in its first weekend to score the biggest box-office debut of the year by far.

The 3-D animated family film from Universal Pictures, featuring the voices of Danny DeVito, Zac Efron and Taylor Swift, is based on Seuss' cautionary fable about the importance of preserving the environment. Of its opening haul, $5.4 million, or 8 percent, came from IMAX screens, which is on the high side for a family film.

Coming in second place with a strong debut of its own was the R-rated "Project X," about a trio of high school misfits who throw a raging party in hopes of becoming popular. The Warner Bros. comedy made about $20.8 million, according to Sunday studio estimates.

"The Lorax" comes from the makers of "Despicable Me," — Illumination Entertainment, led by producer Christopher Meledandri — and director Chris Renaud. It actually had a bigger opening than that film, which debuted with $56.4 million in July 2010. It also scored the biggest opening for a Dr. Seuss adaptation, topping the $55.1 million that "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" made in 2000.

Before this, "The Vow" had the best debut of 2012 with $41.2 million.

"I was stunned from Friday," when "The Lorax" made $17.4 million, said Nikki Rocco, Universal's president of domestic distribution. It then made a huge leap on Saturday, earning $31.3 million. "Who would have expected a result like this?"

Rocco attributed the movie's success to "a combination of a) a great film, b) an incredible marketing campaign and b-plus) the need for another family film in the marketplace. I think that has a lot to do with it. ...

"People love Dr. Seuss," she added, "and audiences now know about Illumination and Chris Meledandri, what he delivers."

The strong showing for "The Lorax" continues a trend of movies overperforming so far this year, said Paul Dergarabedian, box-office analyst for Hollywood.com. Revenues are up 19 percent from this point in 2011.

"It's so different from what we were seeing last year and especially the end of last

No more scenes

Editor:

Let's hope the City Council votes to eliminate the nativity scenes in Palisades Park. Tradition is not a good reason to continue a display that was questionable use of public property to begin with. Irrespective of "the atheists," there are others of us who don't wish to see the tradition continue. Besides, there are enough churches in Santa Monica to do any number of Christian displays on their property as they wish. We even give them a tax break to help them do so.

Thank you, City Council, for doing the right thing by doing away with an outmoded tradition.

The Church of the Flying Spaghetti Monster will be upset

IN ONE OF ITS SMARTER MOVES, THE City Council last Tuesday night postponed a decision on what to do about holiday displays in Palisades Park pending further review.

For nearly 60 years, Christian groups, mostly from Santa Monica churches, have erected dioramas depicting the nativity along Ocean Avenue during the Christmas season.

Last year, a number of new organizations including some from outside the city and some of them non-traditional, parody or non-religious groups requested space to create displays, outstripping the 21 spots available. Because public space must be made available on an equal basis without regard to tradition, religious orientation or content, display sponsors were determined by random drawing.

As luck or "the will of the Lord" would have it, the majority of spaces went to non-religious groups or individuals leaving just three spaces for locally sponsored nativity scenes.

Now, the options are whether to limit the number applications an applicant can file and continue to implement a totally random lottery only if necessary, provide space for all comers or do away with displays all together.

We know where all this is going. It's all or nothing. Having 40, 50 or more displays in Palisades Park is too much and unnecessary. Applicants left out will complain about a random drawing.

For those who feel compelled to set up a holiday exhibit, do it on your own property or someone else's private property and have a Merry Christmas.

NO HOUSING FOR SINGLES

In other action Tuesday night, City Council reviewed the city's annual housing policy and its funding.

Despite the fact that most of City Hall-supported Community Corporation of Santa Monica's (CCSM) housing projects have been multi-bedroom units in family buildings, recent housing studies indicate that the greatest need is for the single or dual occupancy units in single or one bedroom apartments. The studies indicate the typical low income levels of tenants needing such public housing ranges from $17,950 (one person) up to $34,200 for two people.

Don't I feel vindicated? I've been saying for years that a housing policy that heavily favors families with children was out of whack. The real need is for affordable single and one bedroom units for families without children. While CCSM recruits potential tenants from all over Los Angeles County to take up residence here, Santa Monica's singles, elderly, disabled — and homeless — go begging.

Late last year, City Hall's housing authority accepted 33,000 applications for housing. Some 3, 370 applicants were either living or working in Santa Monica. And 95 percent of the "Santa Monica" applicants are in the "extremely low" or "very low" income brackets. 25 percent are seniors, 33 percent disabled and 10 percent were/had experienced homelessness. Note: categories not mutually exclusive.

The report also discloses that 78 percent of waiting list applicants are one or two person households with "extremely low" or "very low" income levels.

There are hundreds of single and one bedroom rental units available, under construction or pending approval — mostly from one private developer — NMS Properties, Inc. Although considered affordable, the smallest privately financed units are leasing for $1,300 or more — far beyond the reach of someone on a fixed income (like Social Security) earning around $20, 000 annually.

City Hall's housing authority needs to redirect its affordable housing policies to better accommodate Santa Monica singles in the lowest of the income brackets because it's the right thing to do.

COURTING PARKING TICKET APPEALS

Speaking of screw-ups, City Attorney Marsha Moutrie received City Council approval last Tuesday night for what she called a "settlement agreement" in Epstein v. Santa Monica, et. al. Problem is that while some basic terms had been agreed upon, there was no fully negotiated "settlement agreement."

Plaintiff Stanley Epstein sent a Wednesday morning e-mail advising the local news media not to be fooled: "There is NO settlement at this point," he stated. "Although the parties have been negotiating for four months, several important points remain to be worked out before completion. If and when the parties resolve all outstanding issues, the settlement document must be approved by a Superior Court judge."

This civil case involves the mishandling of parking citation appeals by City Hall. Stanley and Harriet Epstein filed suit claiming that City Hall and its contractor ACS State & Local Solutions, Inc., and others failed to follow California Vehicle Code (CVC) mandates that parking ticket appeal denial notices "must provide a reason for that denial."

So what happened? Did Moutrie misspeak, have a brain burp or just attempt to deflect a public relations debacle?

The Epsteins say that Moutrie deliberately misrepresented that there was a "settlement agreement." She also made it seem that they were getting $77,500 (less legal fees) when in fact they were to get only $12,500 paid by ACS. They believe it was a calculated attempt to deceive the public and make them look greedy and claim her tactics constituted a serious breach of legal ethics.

The Epsteins told me, "The city wants to get out front of the story by prematurely announcing a 'completed settlement' so that when and if a real settlement is reached, the press would ignore that settlement announcement and any joint press releases containing comments critical of how parking citation appeals were mishandled because the story had already been covered, previously."

It just gets messier and messier, doesn't it?

BP settlement includes new health claims process

CAIN BURDEAU
Associated Press

BOOTHEVILLE, La. A settlement that BP is hammering out with victims of the massive Gulf oil spill finally provides a system for monitoring health concerns and compensating people whose illnesses are found to have a link to the disaster.

Government and university doctors studying locals' health haven't found significant evidence of spill-related illnesses, but problems years from now remain a question mark. Gulf Coast residents say they're happy their complaints are getting a serious look, even if they'll face hurdles in proving that rashes, shortness of breath and other maladies were caused by the oil or chemical dispersants sprayed to break it up.

Under the settlement announced Friday, BP said it expects to pay out $7.8 billion to settle a wide range of claims that also include property damage, lost wages and loss to businesses. While a previously created fund had already been paying such economic loss claims, it hadn't paid claims over illnesses related to exposure.

Nicole Maurer, a resident of this fishing community, said she feels optimistic about getting medical bills paid under the court-supervised process. She blames the spill for a number of her family's health problems.

"Bright and early, I'm getting my kids on the school bus and calling my lawyer tomorrow, and see what's going on," she said.

First, Maurer and others like her will have to show that they got sick from the spill. To receive compensation, claimants will be examined by a court-approved health care practitioner. Then, a claims administrator working under the supervision of a federal judge will determine who should be paid.

"The workers have a different kind of exposure because they were there all the time, but anybody living in an area where they were at risk of exposure will be eligible to participate in the program," said Ervin Gonzalez, one the plaintiff lawyers leading the litigation.

The settlement also establishes a program to monitor claimants' health for a period of 21 years. People whose physical symptoms haven't yet developed will also be able to pursue claims. BP has also promised to pay $105 million to improve health care around the Gulf region.

"You don't know what the long-term (health) effects will be," said another of the plaintiffs' lawyers, Steve Herman. "You don't know how the science is going to play out."

Herman said medical claims won't be paid until U.S. District Judge Carl Barbier gives final approval to the overall settlement, which could take months.

Observers said the legal wrangling over who will be eligible for medical compensation likely will be contentious and could take years to play out.

Blaine LeCesne, a tort law professor at Loyola University New Orleans, said getting medical claims covered under the proposed settlement was a victory for the plaintiffs.

At a trial, he said it would have been difficult to prove medical damage. "Medical claims are inherently speculative. We really don't know what the full scope of the medical problems are to exposure to the dispersants and the oil itself."

How much BP will be forced to pay will depend on how broad the criteria for verifying health problems are, he said.

Mitch Crusto, a Loyola business and environmental law professor, said it was a smart move for BP. "It helps give the impression that BP is a responsible company."

He added that Barbier will be more likely to approve the settlement offer because of the medical provision. "Barbier would be less inclined to accept settlement if there was not some process to handle medical claims."

The process is a step in the right direction for residents who felt their health concerns had been ignored. The previous compensation fund, called the Gulf Coast Claims Facility, received roughly 200 claims asserting spill-related illnesses, but none were paid. The older fund did cover injured rig workers on the Deepwater Horizon, the drilling rig that exploded on April 20, 2010.

Since shortly after the spill, government and university researchers have been investigating public health complaints, but so far haven't found significant evidence of illnesses caused by the spill. Still, some caution that their work has only begun.

For example, studies by the National Institutes of Health and the National Institute of Health Sciences are in their early stages, according to a researcher involved.

"We are trying to pinpoint exposure and unravel those complex questions," said Maureen Litchveld, a lead researcher at the Tulane University School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine.

The Q Line

Turn the other cheek

The City Council is struggling with what to do about the holiday displays in Palisades Park after atheists last year were able to secure 18 spots, leaving a coalition of churches only two spots to erect their nativity scenes.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks: Should the City Council continue with the lottery, abolish holiday displays or make the law more narrow in an attempt to exclude the atheists and risk getting sued?

Contact qline@smdp.com before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. You can also call (310) 458-7737 ext. 107.

Green on the slopes

Dear EarthTalk

I'm in the market for a new pair of skis. Are there skis being made today that are made with materials and processes that are kinder to the environment?

REUSED: California-based Arbor Collective uses sustainably sourced bamboo, natural wood veneer and poplar, respectively, in its three snowboard lines. Protective top layers are made from a 30 percent castor bean-based bioplastic and the edges are made of 60 percent recycled steel.

YES, IN FACT SKI (AND SNOWBOARD) manufacturers may be among the greenest sporting goods industries out there today, given the importance to practitioners of keeping our carbon emissions down-global warming is bad for skiing and boarding-and our alpine backcountry preserved.

Perhaps the biggest green change in the industry is the adoption of bamboo as a core material for both skis and snowboards. Bamboo is fast growing and doesn't require much if any fertilizers or pesticides, so it can be produced sustainably. It is also rigid and hard to break. While most skis and snowboards on the market today still use more traditional hardwoods like beech, birch or aspen in their cores, bamboo is definitely coming on strong. Some of the leading ski makers leading the bamboo charge include K2, Salomon, Kingswood, High Society, Boomtown, Obsidian, Locomotiv, Liberty, and Blue House.

Bamboo isn't the only green innovation in skis today. Switzerland-based Movement Skis uses wood certified by the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC). And Germany's Grown Skis will recycle your old skis to make furniture and use remaining wood scraps in making new pairs of sustainably-sourced wood skis.

Another German manufacturer, Völkl, eschews fiberglass entirely in its Amaruq Eco skis. The wood core is wrapped instead with wood sidewalls and topsheet. And instead of using epoxy to bind things together, Völkl uses all-organic wood resin and then protects the skis' wood surfaces with an application of linseed oil. The metal edges employ 60 percent recycled steel.

Sustainability is also the new normal in snowboards. California-based Arbor Collective uses sustainably sourced bamboo, natural wood veneer and poplar, respectively, in its three lines. Protective top layers are made from a 30 percent castor bean-based bioplastic and the edges are made of 60 percent recycled steel.

Salomon, one of the industry's leaders, has pioneered using bamboo in its snowboard cores as part of its Green Initiatives for Tomorrow program. The company's embrace of bamboo has helped it cut down significantly on toxic fiberglass resins while reducing the plastic content of its boards by some 25 percent.

Burton's Eco Nico snowboard uses FSC-certified wood for its core, a lacquer-free top sheet, 90 percent recycled steel edges, 100 percent recycled sidewalls and a 50 percent recycled base. K2 Sports Fastplant snowboard uses bamboo for its core, and is deemed virtually unbreakable by the company. Another manufacturer, Washington-based Gnu, uses sustainably harvested Aspen trees for their snowboard cores.

Many other ski and snowboard makers have jumped on the green bandwagon as well. Indeed, there's never been a better time to do the right thing by your snowsports equipment purchasing.

him. Shae was born blind in one eye, he said.

"I think I have an understanding of what it's like to be blind and I have a sensitivity to it that allows me to work the way that I do with these actors," he said.

Scripts are provided in braille or are recorded onto CDs so that the actors can memorize them. Blocking is worked out using rubber mats on the floor and pieces of furniture and other props as landmarks across the stage.

And apparently, the work pays off. Audience reaction has been very good, Shae said.

"People are so moved," he said.

One important element happens after the show, he said.

"One of our actors is highlighted and speaks for the rest of the group," Shae said.

The actor tells their own story, which further connects them with the audience, he said.

It's also proof of how far some of the actors have come.

"I honestly think the program has changed their lives," he said.

Leela Kazerouni is one of the actors whose life was changed, Shae said.

"She could not speak when she started."

Kazerouni, who lives in Glendale, was born with limited vision, but has been completely blind since she was a child.

She has been with the program for the past 15 years, since its beginning, she said, when Kokobo drafted her into the program.

"She pushed me and broke me out of the shell I was in," Kazerouni said.

Even after Kokobo died, Kazerouni stayed with the company.

"I'll continue it as long as I can," she said.

Kazerouni's parents were actors, so Kazerouni claims that acting is more than therapeutic, it's in her blood.

"It helps me to be a different person for a moment, to be on stage," she said.

For Hollywood resident Tori Taite, the company presents a chance to hone his acting skills for his dream job: voice-over work.

"This is the best way to learn the craft," he said.

Taite was born blind, but thanks to surgery he received when he was about 3 years old, he has limited vision.

Although he has some light perception, he'll never be able to drive a car, he said.

In the group's last play, "Decider," Tatie played an evil henchman. While he said that role was fun, he is glad to be playing a more complex part in the new play: Matthew, an actor whose wife is cheating on him.

"This one is a little more challenging," he added.

Taite has only been with the company for three years, but will stay as long as he continues to grow as an actor, he said.

South Los Angeles native Arnett Coates has been with the company much longer than that; in fact, he says that he's forgotten just how long.

"When you're having fun, you lose track of what you're doing," he said.

Coates was born with vision, but gradually lost it during his youth, his sight going from bad to worse before giving out altogether, he said.

Coates, who acted in high school, says that the program has given him courage and confidence in himself, all while providing him with an opportunity to do something he loves: expressing himself and interacting with other people.

"It's good to do something you enjoy doing; this, I enjoy," he said.

"Private Eyes" runs Saturday, March 10, through Sunday, April 8, at the Promenade Playhouse. For more information, visit www.creoutreach.org.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Pier Parking Lot Storm Drain Improvement Project

Drainage improvements will take place to the 1550 parking lot just north of the Santa Monica Pier. A gravity storm drainage system will be installed to replace the existing pump system. The bike path underneath the pier will be closed; however a bike path detour to Appian Way will be available.

Ocean Park Boulevard Complete Green Street Project

The project began in December 2011, and ends December 2012. Construction will take place Monday to Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Ocean Park Boulevard, between Neilson Way and Lincoln Boulevard. The project will improve the character and functionality of Ocean Park Boulevard for all users and reduce storm water runoff. The project will provide wider sidewalks and parkways for storm water biofilter swales and infiltration, new landscape medians, new marked crosswalks with enhanced overhead flashing beacons, new painted bike lanes and traffic striping, pedestrian level lighting, new trees and landscaping, street furniture, bike racks and traffic signal modification. Traffic control will be in place during construction and will maintain one lane of traffic in each direction. There will be lane closures from Second to Fifth streets. Please use alternate routes whenever possible.

Annual Tree Trimming

City Hall's annual tree trimming schedule is underway at the following locations: Tree plantings will take place at Clover Park on the 25th Street side of the park, tree trimming will begin on Marguerita Avenue, and the trimming of ficus trees will begin on Fifth Street from Wilshire Boulevard to Colorado Avenue. For more information please visit www.santamonicatrees.com.

The Village

The Village Santa Monica is an exciting mixed-income, mixed-use community that will be developed in heart of Santa Monica's Civic Center revitalization area. Intersection of Main Street and Olympic Drive: There will be construction haul trucks exiting the construction site in front of City Hall along Olympic Drive. Haul trucks are leaving the construction site and heading along Ocean Avenue and Olympic Drive, exiting continuously at Main Street intersection. Traffic control staff managing traffic and safety at Main and Olympic Drive. For more info, visit www.SMConstructs.org.

Water Main Replacement at Third Court

The water main at Third Court between Broadway and Santa Monica Boulevard is undergoing removal and replacement. Please be advised that two-way traffic will be allowed on each side of the construction work zone for local access only. There will be a partial alley closure between Broadway and Arizona. Detour Info: During alley closures two-way traffic will be allowed on either side of the construction work zone for local traffic only. No deliveries will be allowed during construction hours.

Water Main Replacement No. 1

Replacement of approximately 11,700 lineal feet of existing ductile iron water mains with new ductile iron water pipes due to age, condition and capacity demands. Work will take place on Euclid Court, between Alta and Montana avenues and on 10th Court, between Marguerita and Montana avenues, and on Marguerita Avenue between Seventh and 11th courts. There will be traffic impacts in the work area.

Annual Paving & Sidewalk Repair Project

Annual street and sidewalk maintenance work consists of cold-milling and asphalt overlay, slurry sealing, sidewalk removal and reconstruction, curb and gutter removal and reconstruction, pervious gutter construction, and tree root pruning. In addition to the annual work, striping modifications will be completed to implement recommendations of the Draft Bicycle Action Plan. Street paving will occur mainly in the Ocean Park area, south of Pico Boulevard and west of Lincoln Boulevard. Some work, however, is also planned outside this area. Also placing new gutter plate will take place on Hollister Street from Main to Third streets, and Marine Street from Neilsen to Main streets. Miscellaneous work (striping, raising of manhole covers, etc.) will be taking place in the neighborhood south of Pico and west of Lincoln. Partial roadway closures is expected. Temporary Traffic Control signs and barricades will be deployed to guide vehicular and pedestrian traffic in and around the work areas.

Advanced Traffic Management Systems Project

City Hall's Advanced Traffic Management System (ATMS) Phases 4A and 4B Project will connect 40 signal-controlled intersections along Arizona Avenue and Mid-City areas to the city's centralized control system with fiber optic cables. This will require installation of new conduit and modification of the existing interconnected conduit system to accommodate fiber optic cable. Also upgrades of traffic signal infrastructure ranging from a full replacement of all traffic signal equipment to less extensive upgrades such as the installation of new controller cabinet and video detection cameras. The project begins January, 2012 and is expected to end November, 2012. Construction will commence along Colorado from Lincoln Boulevard to Stewart Street between the hours of 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Impacts to traffic should be minimal but partial and full lane closures may be necessary some times. Questions may be directed to the project hotline at (866) 755-7679. For more info, go to: www.SMConstructs.org.

Private Development (SMMUSD)

Beginning Feb. 27, 2012, the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District is making improvements to some of their campuses. This week, there will be lane closures on the east side of Fourth Street just north of Pico Boulevard (Between Pico & Olympic) in conjunction with work being done on Santa Monica High School, there will lane closures on 17th Street in conjunction with work at John Adams Middle School, and there will be truck hauls from Edison Elementary School and Samohi. All work will take place Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. – 5 p.m.. More information is available at fip.smmusd.org.

For more information on projects, please visit the Know Before You Go Web site at www.knowB4ugo.smgov.net.

"We did put fear and prejudice on trial, and fear and prejudice lost," Olson said after Reiner brought him on stage.

Last month, the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld an earlier judge's decision that found California's proposed amendment banning same-sex marriage unconstitutional.

Reiner said he and Black decided to make a play and eventually a movie based on the Prop. 8 trial after proponents successfully petitioned to block cameras from the courtroom.

Saturday's reading was held on a courtroom-like set, with eight chairs on each side and Pitt's judge's box in the center. Sheen and Clooney made for an impressive legal team, while Reilly cracked up the crowd as a verbose marriage expert.

"I knew that Martin Sheen was going to get a huge ovation after that speech because we applauded for him in rehearsal," said Ferguson, adding that he wanted to be in "8" as soon as he heard about it. "John C. Reilly did a brilliant job with his role but I loved seeing Jane Lynch play such a villainous, homophobic creature. It really felt like she was sticking it to the man."

Reilly said he was moved by the material, and even more so by its message.

"I think America will be a better place and we can hold our chins up a little higher in this country when everyone is treated (equally)," he said. "These aren't gay rights or special rights, they're basic rights that people who love each other should have."

Reilly was thrilled to participate in the play, and even took on a last-minute role change when Pitt signed on. Reilly was to play the judge, but instead jumped into a role that Reiner originally was going to play.

Said the director: "I took one for the team."

year. Now it's like a box-office bonanza," Dergarabedian said. "What a great turnaround from where we were last year with the down-trending week after week and the lowest attendance in 15 years. If we keep up this pace, we're going to be looking at a massive summer."

Some huge sequels are coming out this summer, Dergarabedian pointed out, including "The Avengers," "The Dark Knight Rises" and "The Amazing Spider-Man."

Dergarabedian had expected "The Lorax" would open somewhere in the $45-to-$50 million range and that "Project X," in a bit of counter-programming, would end up in the high teens: "Warner Bros. perfectly put their R-rated, raunchy comedy right there in the same weekend as 'The Lorax' and both films did very well."

Last week's No. 1 movie, "Act of Valor," dropped to third place with $13.7 million. The action picture from Relativity Media, which stars real, active-duty U.S. Navy SEALs, has made over $45.2 million total.

This year's best-picture winner at the Academy Awards, the silent, black-and-white "The Artist," got a 34 percent bump from its victory last weekend. The Weinstein Co. film made $3.9 million to come in 10th place and now has grossed over $37 million total.

Estimated ticket sales for Friday through Sunday at U.S. and Canadian theaters, according to Hollywood.com.

survival rate in the single digits, which means fewer than 10 percent of patients diagnosed with pancreatic cancer are expected to live another five years. Many, like Weiss' father, die within months of diagnosis.

Despite its deadly stats, national research organizations put relatively few resources into investigating pancreatic cancer, said Julie Fleshman, president and CEO of the Pancreatic Cancer Action Network.

"There were no dollars available for it, so scientists weren't going to study that disease," Fleshman said. "As we've been able to increase both private dollars we fund and public dollars through the National Cancer Institute, more people are interested because there are dollars available to study it."

In a chicken and egg type dilemma, the lack of funding for pancreatic cancer when compared to other diseases comes back to its low survival rate.

Unlike breast cancer, which has enjoyed huge success through its pink ribbon campaigns and vast survivor networks, pancreatic cancer doesn't have a face because so few people have beaten it.

No early diagnosis tests yet exist for pancreatic cancer, leading people to find out they have it only after it's progressed to deadly stages in the body.

The recent death of Apple founder Steve Jobs from a slow-growing version of the disease threw it back into the spotlight last year, and also revealed how little is actually known about it.

"Someone like him, with all the resources in the world, couldn't fight it off," Fleshman said.

And that is why efforts like Weiss' "52 for You" campaign mean so much to the cause. Weiss has already raised a tenth of her million-dollar goal through contributions from her employer, a Brentwood real estate company, family and friends.

She hopes that her daring project will be the platform to attract other big sponsors from the sports world and private sector to bring both attention and cold hard cash to the cause.

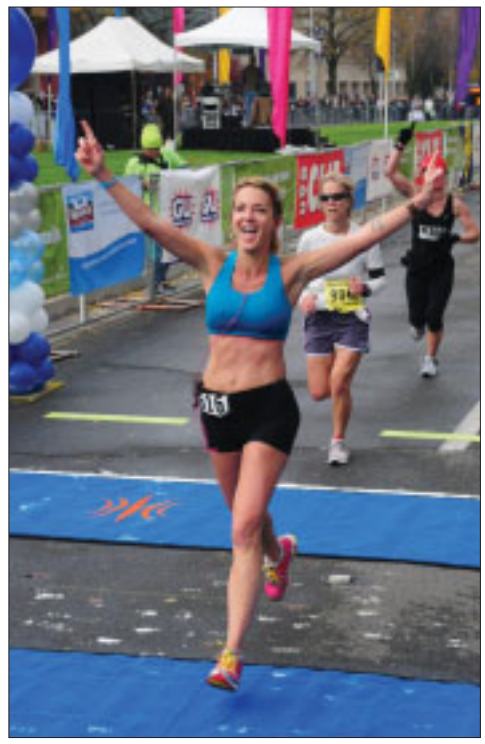

"It's totally uncharted territory," Weiss said over a cup of tea at the Novel Café on Main Street. "I have no idea what I'm doing."

Of course, amidst the proposal letters and the personal pleas to large organizations, a full-time job and commitments to local running groups, there's still the task of preparing for, traveling to and then running 52 marathons.

Weiss is starting in a hole. She sprained her ankle (not a running-related injury, mind you) and hasn't been able to run well for months. Running one marathon takes a toll on the body and most people would suggest taking a minimum of two weeks to recover. Weiss will have less than one each time.

But she's got an ace up her sleeve.

"I'm a certified coach level two with track and field, and I co-wrote the book 'The Complete Idiot's Guide to Marathon Training' … I guess I know a thing or two about marathon training," said David Levine, Weiss' trainer, nutrition expert and fiancée.

WEISS

Weiss won't have the luxury to recover like most people would after a grueling 26.2 mile race. To keep her body intact and ready for the next week, she'll follow a strict nutrition and training regimen during the race, immediately after she's done running and then for the days leading up to her next attempt.

In this case, that means carrying enough mineral pills to keep her electrolyte levels high throughout the four hours she's pounding pavement, stretching immediately after she finishes and getting on ice.

During the week, she'll eat far more protein than normal, run in water to strengthen muscles and never exceed 40 minutes of training on shore.

Weiss has the fortitude to soldier on, despite the trying requirements, Levine said.

"She's doing it for the right cause," he said. "She's not the first or doing the most, but she has the right reason."

Motivation aside, Weiss is looking forward to the challenge. She loves to run, and with two dozen marathons already on her resume, she thinks she knows what to expect.

In fact, as though 52 marathons weren't enough, she's starting the marathon of marathons with one a bit off the beaten path. She and Levine will catch a red-eye to Rome, Italy in mid-March for a race associated with the documentary "Spirit of the Marathon 2," which will feature Weiss.

"Fifty-two for you, but 53 for me!" she said, smiling.

If you would like to donate to Weiss' cause or follow her progress through the races, visit her website at marathongoddess.com.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

League to keep looking into bounties beyond the Saints

BARRY WILNER
AP Pro Football Writer

NEW YORK The NFL's investigation that found the New Orleans Saints paid bounties to players for knocking opponents out of games is far from over.

League spokesman Greg Aiello said in an e-mail to The Associated Press on Sunday the NFL will be "addressing the issues raised as part of our responsibility to protect player safety and the integrity of the game."

Those issues could include previous seasons, too.

Several players around the league have said the Saints and defensive coordinator Gregg Williams weren't the only ones with such a system. Former Redskins safety Matt Bowen said Williams had a similar bounty scheme when he was in Washington.

Aiello said the league would not comment on other reports. He added that the NFL will look at "any relevant info regarding rules being broken," saying that is "standard procedure."

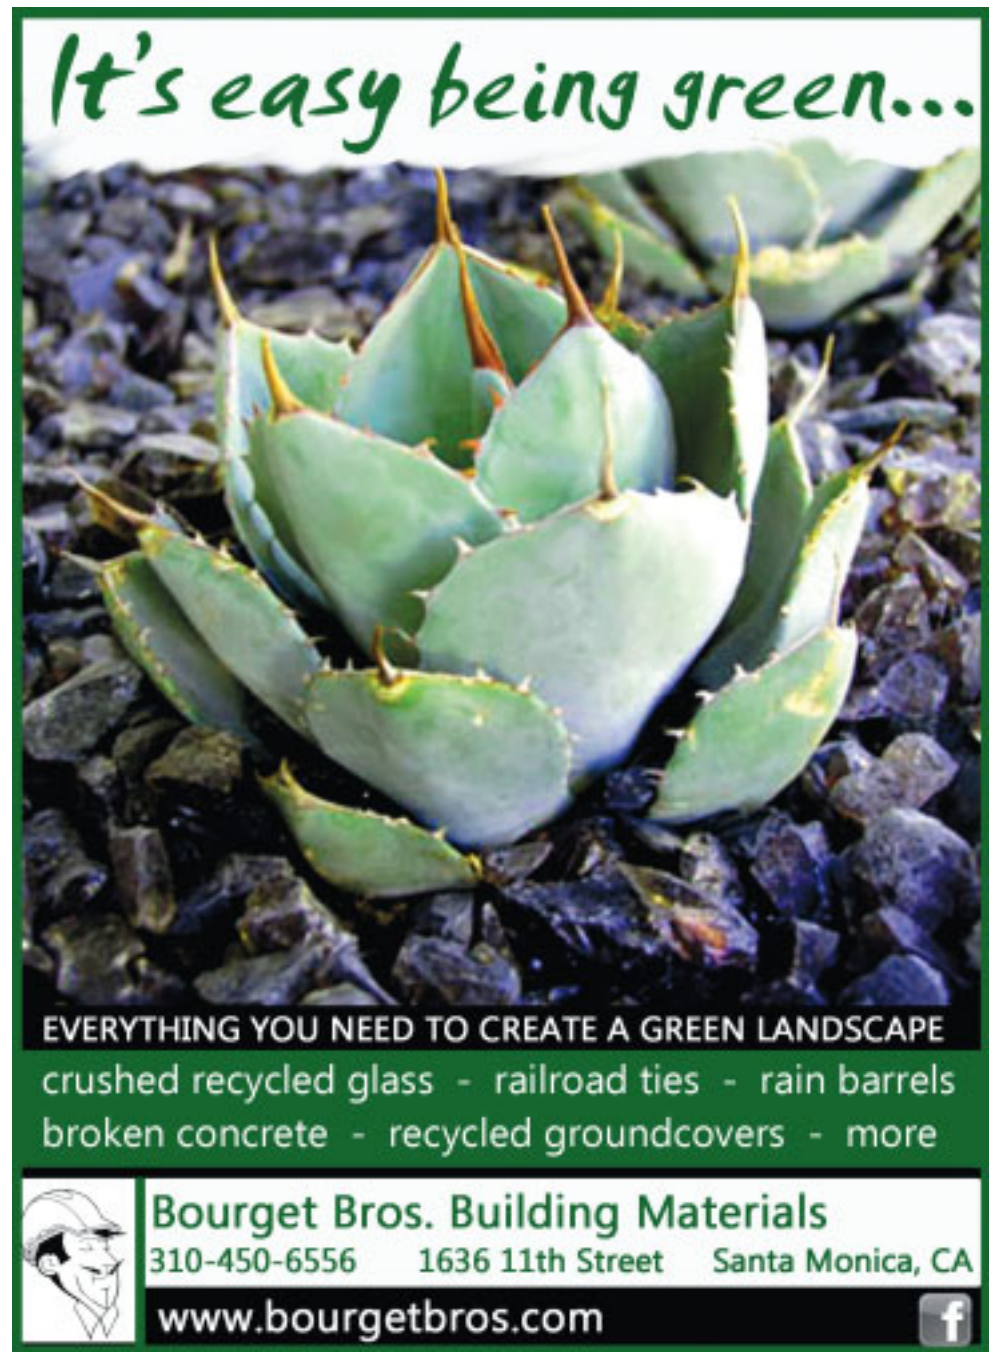

Lions defensive tackle Ndamukong Suh insisted Sunday his team had no bounty program.

"I don't take part in those things and nor do my teammates and nor my coaches. We don't allow that," said Suh, who was suspended for two games this season for stomping on an opponent and has been fined frequently by the NFL for rough play."

"For me, personally, and I know my teammates, we don't want to put anybody out," he added. "Especially me, I would never want anybody to target me to take me out, so why would I do it against somebody else."

The Saints maintained a bounty pool of up to $50,000 the last three seasons, the NFL said.

Go for a walk, Aquarius

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You have the necessary resources to deal with a promising and dynamic idea. Share what you are hearing, and get as much feedback as possible. Someone you care about could be extremely security minded. Tonight: Radiate your high energy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You might prefer to maintain a strong, near-silent presence rather than act or take a leadership role. Know how important it might be to express your knowledge, caring and concerns in a manner that can be heard. Tonight: Buy a treat on the way home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You know what you think, but you cannot expect others to be mind-readers. Verbalize your feelings. You are more likely to be hurt if you do not express your vulnerabilities. Tonight: Be among friends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Zero in on what feels important, and don't allow someone to distract you. Be aware of this person in your environment. Demonstrate kindness and sensitivity to his or her needs, and it might help end the demands. Tonight: Do some shopping.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You can deal with nearly anything, even if it is Monday! Express your capacity to work under pressure and digest a lot of new information, then act appropriately. You see beyond the obvious. Tonight: Dream up plans, and you might be surprised at the response.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★ You have dealt with a lot of frustration from a partner and loved ones in the past year. Starting a major rebellion at the present moment will work against you; instead, express your fatigue at this behavior and your willingness to walk away. Tonight: Head home quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Follow your knee-jerk response with a friend who often surprises you with his or her behavior. Others might be more willing to adjust to this person and his or her innate swings than you are, but they will start expressing feelings like yours soon enough. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Be willing to state your case. Others will envy your thoughts and courage. You also know that there are other alternatives and solutions. Tonight: Take the lead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ Understand where a child or loved one is coming from. Walk in his or her shoes, and see what it feels like to be this person. Tonight: Detach from your day, then decide.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Deal directly with others. Your individual focus and attention could make all the difference in the final outcome. You could be surprised by a real estate matter or domestic issue. Know that you can deal with it. Worry less. Tonight: Spend quality time with a special person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Honor a difference and respond accordingly. Someone in your immediate circle might have made a decision without considering what the ramifications might be. Answer questions that seek understanding. Tonight: Off doing errands. Try to get a walk in.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You know what you want, and you choose your direction accordingly. Be careful with your finances, as what you thought was a given could be the source of a shake-up. Talk with a neighbor about an ongoing issue. Tonight: Catch up on emails and calls.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ When Leona Helmsley's now-deceased dog Trouble inherited about $12 million from her estate in 2007, it called attention to the occasional decision by lonely rich people to pass on millions of dollars to their pets. In December, the former stray cat Tommasino inherited the equivalent of about $15 million in Italy when his owner, real estate holder Maria Assunta, died at age 94. The only pets richer than Tommasino were the German shepherd Gunter (equivalent of about $140 million in 2000) and the Australian chimpanzee Kalu (equivalent of about $60 million, though the estate he inherited was revealed in 2010 to be worthless).

■ (1) Fritz Gall, a self-described failed inventor, opened the Museum of Nonsense in Herrnbaumgarten, Austria, recently to pay homage, apparently, to even greater failures than his own. Among the exhibits are the "portable anonymizer" (a stick holding a black bar that one holds over his eyes to obscure identity), a transportable hat rack, a bristleless toothbrush (for people with no teeth), and a "portable hole" (similar to those that appear in the ground whenever the Road Runner needs something for Wile E. Coyote to fall into). (2) Take a Wild Guess: An unidentified man was taken into custody in Chesapeake, Va., in October after he rushed into the Regional Medical Center with a machete and a can of gasoline and demanded to know the "test results."
