Santa Monica Pier launches Locals' Night

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

The Santa Monica Pier is ostensibly for Santa Monicans, but if you ask the average resident when the last time they visited was, they might be a little ashamed of their answer. The new Pier Locals' Night event series seeks to change that and will be drawing on the talented entertainment provided by local businesses to draw out residents for an afternoon and evening of Santa Monica centric programming.

The event series is kicking off this Thursday, March 10 and will thereafter run on the third Thursday of every month, before taking a brief hiatus for the summer and returning in September. The festivities will begin at 3 p.m. and continue until 10 p.m. with music, theatrical performances, children's activities, food and drinks specials and more all geared towards a local crowd.

"There's always been a clear mission to keep the Pier Santa Monican's pier. But how do you do that? We are a top tourist destination and that's great... but when you're so popular with tourists, there seems to be an obstacle towards getting the locals here," said Pier Corporation Executive Director Jim Harris. "That's what Locals' Night is all about; it's by Santa Monicans for Santa Monicans."

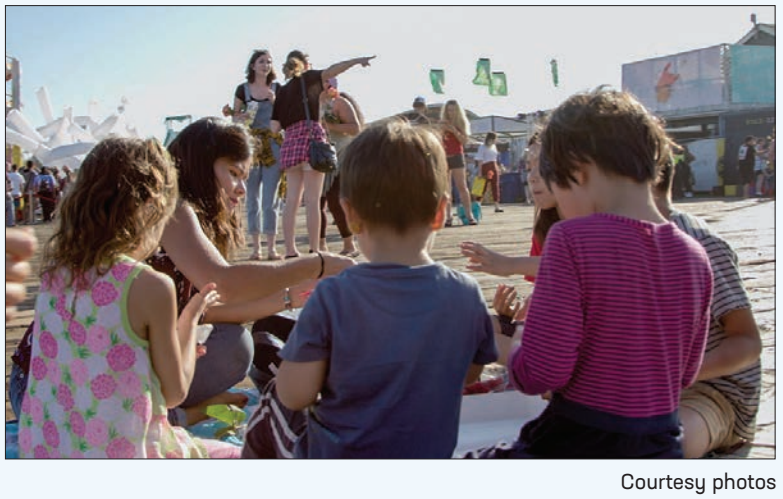

Many favorite community organizations will be on deck on Thursday night offering a wide range of activities for locals to explore.

Activities begin at the base of the Pier at 3 p.m. with the Cayton's

Since he was five years old Elijah Boktor wanted to be a doctor and considered access to healthcare a given, but it wasn't until he traveled to his parents' home country of Egypt that he realized just how much of a privilege a doctor's visit is.

While Boktor is fully Egyptian, he grew up in the Santa Monica area and visited Egypt for the first time in 2018. He was amazed by the history, delighted to meet his family, but shocked by the poor standards of living and limited access to medical care. When he returned in the summer of 2021, he wanted to do something to help increase the availability of healthcare, but knew there was a shortage of doctors in Egypt willing or able to assist low-income residents.

A solution to this problem did not evade him for long. Inspired by the growth of telemedicine during the pandemic, Boktor decided to connect underprivileged patients in Egypt with Arabic speaking doctors in America for virtual consultations. With the assistance of his mother, assignments to focus on responding to emergency calls.

Batista, who was hired by the City in October 2021, spoke to Santa Monica Daily Press Editor in Chief Matt Hall recently about the newest crime statistics released by the Department in February. Stats for last year show that Part 1 crimes — crimes considered the most serious including murder, assault and grand theft auto — were slightly down in 2021 compared to 2020. However, the community perception remained that crime was on the rise, partially due to an increase in other, less serious offenses.

"I want to make sure that we are present to be able to make a difference in those situations because all our residents deserve to live their lives peacefully and not in fear of crime or in fear of somebody yelling at them when they're just trying to either leave their apartment or get into their car or walk their kids to school," Batista said during his recent conversation with the Daily Press.

Batista said the Department had been staffed with the same number of officers for 15 or 20 years, but in that time the City's population and business districts have grown, and with them, the need for more patrol officers.

"I totally empathize with our community when they say, 'I haven't seen an officer through my neighborhood in months or weeks.' Because it's true," Batista said. "I mean, when I think about the number of folks [officers] that we have that are out [on injury] and the staffing numbers that we've had for 20 years, it doesn't meet the needs that we have today. It doesn't mean, though, that we are not going to continually focus and reimagine the way that we go out and deploy."

His current plan is to move a portion of traffic officers and detectives to "rotate through patrol" for certain shifts every week, bulking up the number of officers available to respond to 9-1-1 calls.

"Detectives may not be investigating a case — detectives may be out taking calls for service," Batista said. He said it was because, with staffing levels so tight, "there's almost no room for error" when it comes to scheduling shifts.

The Chief said that, "without a doubt," there would come a time when he would need to request City Council hire more officers to better staff the department. Batista estimated there were around 10 or 11 current officer vacancies in the Department.

Speaking of the 2021 statistics, Batista said that, while he was glad to see that serious crimes such as rape, residential robbery and overall larceny were down, he was more concerned with numbers trending up: crimes related to firearms used in aggravated assault, catalytic converter thefts and arson.

"When you ask me what catches my attention, it's anything that goes up," Batista said. "And I want to ask why, and I'm asking what the numbers are."

Simone Dinnerstein makes LA Debut at The Broad Stage - Mar 27

The Broad Stage presents Simone Dinnerstein, considered one of the foremost interpreters of Bach of her generation, making her Broad Stage debut on Sunday, March 27 at 4pm on the Main Stage. Dinnerstein follows the enormous success of her 2007 self- produced debut album of The Goldberg Variations with a live performance of Bach's masterpiece. She is a current (2021) Grammy Best Classical Instrumental Solo Nominee for Richard Daniepour's An American Mosaic, an album that has surpassed two million streams on Apple Music.

Since that recording, she has had a busy performing career. She has played with orchestras ranging from the New York Philharmonic and the Montreal Symphony Orchestra to the London Symphony Orchestra and the Orchestra Sinfonica Nazionale Rai. She has performed in venues from Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center to the Berlin Philharmonie, the Vienna Konzerthaus, the Seoul Arts Center and the Sydney Opera House. She has made thirteen albums, all of which topped the Billboard classical charts, with repertoire ranging from Couperin to Glass.

Rob Bailis, Artistic and Executive Director of The Broad Stage, says, "The brilliant pianist Simone Dinnerstein just skyrocketed to fame with her self-produced interpretation of The Goldberg Variations, taking the world by storm as a very young artist, and establishing herself right out of the gate as a major Bach interpreter. I'm thrilled that some years later she has come back to The Goldberg Variations and will be playing them for us in recital. I am really looking forward to hearing how that interpretation has evolved - it left such an incredible mark when we heard it the first time, and I think it will be so rich to hear it in its current context."

This season, Simone takes on a number of new artistic challenges. She gives the world premiere of The Eye Is the First Circle at Montclair State University, the first multi-media production she has conceived, created, and directed, which uses as source materials her father Simon Dinnerstein's painting The Fulbright Triptych and Charles Ives's Piano Sonata No. 2 (Concord). In addition, she premieres Richard Danielpour's An American Mosaic, a tribute to those affected by the pandemic, in a performance on multiple pianos placed throughout Brooklyn's Green-Wood Cemetery.

Tickets starting at $40 are available at thebroadstage.org, by calling 310.434.3200, and visiting the box office at 1310 11thSt. Santa Monica CA 90401, beginning three hours prior to performance.

SAMOHI: The Black Student Union hosted a spirit week in honor of Black History Month

SMMUSD students celebrate Black History Month

Black History Month is a time to recognize and honor the many historical achievements and contributions of Black Americans. The Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District Board of Education adopted a resolution to further encourage the celebration of Black History Month throughout the District.

SMMUSD schools have been actively partaking in event and activities since the beginning of February to commemorate Black History Month. From spirit weeks to booklists, District schools are finding creative ways to incorporate the importance of diversity, inclusion, equity and identity.

Starting off at Jacqueline Papale's transition kindergarten class at Webster Elementary in Malibu, the young students have been celebrating a variety of Black artists, including Maya Freelon, Alma Woodsey Thomas, Jean-Michel Basquiat and Alvin Ailey. Papale also opened the month up by discussing Black authors and characters in literature, which she has displayed through her classroom. The TK class also created "People Rainbows" representative of the different skin tones people have. Papale makes it an effort to teach the children about identity, diversity and equality year-round.

Franklin Elementary in Santa Monica decided to put together an extensive booklist about famous African Americans including George Washington Carver, Martin Luther King, Jr., Rosa Parks, Jackie Robinson and Harriet Tubman. The booklist also includes A Kids Book About Racism by Jelani Memory and A Kids Book About Belonging by Kevin Carroll.

With everything from soul food lunches to the screening of Black Panther to live music and soul line dancing, John Adams Middle School in Santa Monica had a week filled with festivities. They ended the week with students reciting famous Black and African American speeches, poems and excerpts from pieces of literature.

The US History and Economics students at Olympic High in Santa Monica explored issues of class from a social justice perspective. They studied "systemic practices and their influence on generational wealth." Students analyzed, both redlining and eminent domain practices, and precisely how these affected communities of color in Los Angeles and Santa Monica. Additionally, the students did a walking tour of local historic places including Phillips Chapel, Belmar Triangle and the "ink well" monument. The students observed contemporary urban landscapes like freeways, airports and stadiums and the lasting impact on communities of color. Students then wrote an analytical article spotlighting a cause for generational wealth inequities.

The Black Student Union at Santa Monica High School hosted a spirit week, a movie night and plan on having an Apollo Night Talent Show in early March. Additionally, teachers have held class specific activities. English teacher, Andrea Shore, wanted to celebrate Black joys. Therefore, she created Black History Month trivia teaching students about objects still used today that were invented by Black Americans, such as the gear shifter. While English teacher, Ryan Blanck, started off his classes by sharing a poem or spoken word performance by Black poets. In his AVID (Advancement Via Individual Determination) class the students are researching and writing short essays about the Negro Baseball Leagues and the recent decision to elevate them to "Major League" status.

"Teaching children about the importance of diversity, inclusion, equity and identity is necessary for the success of all students," said Dr. Ben Drati, SMMUSD Superintendent. "I am happy that the Board of Education adopted the Black History Month resolution, but I am even happier that the children in our district are learning about diversity and inclusion in creative and unique ways.

I look forward to the day that there would not be a need to identify specific months to encourage the full teaching of American History in order to correct what is not being taught in traditional everyday curriculum. I am glad that the country has actually evolved in recognizing the deficit in curriculum and look forward to how education evolves moving forward."

WISE & Healthy Aging offers help and support to seniors wanting to give up excessive clutter and hoarding

With COVID restrictions having limited the in person gatherings and activities that benefited many seniors prior to the pandemic, WISE & Healthy Aging is pleased to announce that it is resuming its popular, in-person workshop and support group, "From Collecting to Decluttering," to help older adults gain control of their "stuff."

"Now that COVID restrictions are loosening up, the time is right for us to safely resume our in person workshop 'From Collecting to Decluttering,' said Anat Louis, PsyD, director of Case Management at WISE & Healthy Aging. "The workshop creates a supportive engaging community for our older adult participants so that they know they are not alone and feel respected, heard and understood as they work on dealing with their clutter."

Led by WISE & Healthy Aging's peer counselors, the "From Collecting to Decluttering" (C2D) workshop kicks off next month with an orientation held on Wednesday, April 6, that is required for seniors interested in participating. Those who decide to sign up for the workshop then meet weekly for the next 15 weeks, starting the following Wednesday on April 13, and each Wednesday thereafter through July 20, from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m.

Compulsive saving, acquiring and hoarding are complex issues that affect people of all genders and cultures. And, while the problem can begin as early as adolescence, it typically worsens in severity over a person's life span, with higher rates of hoarding disorder seen in people over the age of 60.

Nancy, a retired special education teacher, was faced with eviction from years of saving and acquiring more items when she heard about the C2D program a few years ago and decided to give it a try, a decision she says that began her own decluttering process.

"The program works on you from the inside out. It made me want to get organized," said Nancy who had tried and failed to get rid of items filling her home a number of times before. "Now, I no longer buy things I have no use for, I've gotten some tools and developed some mental habits that have helped me to stop buying stuff and bringing it into my apartment."

While no long-term studies to date have shown that people with serious acquiring and collecting problems either accumulated more items during COVID or "decluttered" their households during all the time they spent at home, it is well-known that isolation, uncertainty and anxiety exacerbate hoarding disorder. This condition is clinically diagnosed and includes an extreme reluctance to part with items and to accumulate them at such a level that living spaces become unusable – often to the point of becoming a fire and/or a tripping hazard.

"If an older adult struggled with managing their clutter before COVID, there's a good possibility that the problem may have become worse when they were more isolated from their loved ones during the pandemic," said Louis. "Now they can be with a group of peers who share similar challenges and be there for each other."

The C2D workshop at WISE & Healthy Aging was introduced nearly a decade ago. It incorporates a positive, cognitive behavioral approach with participants receiving a copy of the seminal book, "Buried in Treasure," that addresses compulsive acquiring, saving and hoarding. Participants complete weekly homework from its accompanying handbook and after completing the workshop, can choose to become part of a support group that meets twice monthly.

"Over the years that we've been doing the workshop, nearly 90% of the people who start the program, finish the program," said Ellen Satkin, LCSW, a retired patients' rights director at the Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health and co-facilitator of the C2D workshop as a volunteer peer counselor at WISE & Healthy Aging. "The key to that kind of retention for a program this long is that it provides clear expectations and accountability. It's the peer-to-peer support that happens in the group setting that makes this program so successful."

Nancy, who makes it clear she is still in process, credits the WISE & Healthy Aging program with helping her to make lifelong friends.

"Our ongoing support group continues to meet by phone and four of us also get together via Zoom," Nancy said. "Hoarding and getting rid of things is a core issue, so when you find friends who are sympatico in the same process, it's a wonderful thing."

Ex-Sheriff's Deputy charged with manslaughter in 2019 on-duty fatal shooting of Ryan Twyman

Los Angeles County District Attorney George Gascón announced that a former Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy was charged today for the on-duty fatal shooting of an unarmed man in his vehicle three years ago.

"Protecting public safety is the highest responsibility for the entire law enforcement community. That extends first and foremost to those sworn to protect it," District Attorney Gascón said. "Policing is a difficult and trying job, but it does not excuse anyone from accountability under the law–especially when a human life is lost."

Andrew Lyons (dob 5/10/84) was charged in case BA503497 with one felony count of voluntary manslaughter and two felony counts of assault with a semiautomatic firearm.

On June 6, 2019, Lyons and another sheriff's deputy responded to an apartment complex in Willowbrook. Both deputies exited their vehicle and approached a parked vehicle where 24-year-old Ryan Twyman was.

Twyman put the car in reverse and both deputies opened fire. The car came to a stop nearby.

Lyons is accused of retrieving his semiautomatic assault rifle and shooting into the vehicle after it stopped moving. Twyman was killed and his passenger was not injured.

The case remains under investigation by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

three kind hearted doctors and a group of his Samohi peers, the Middle East Virtual Clinic was born.

Through the clinic, doctors connect with patients for a video consultation and then create a follow-up care plan including visits with local specialists, medication, tests procedures and recommended long-term treatments — all of which is covered by the clinic. Boktor and the Samohi Middle East Virtual Clinic Club serve as the fundraising branch of the clinic and help ensure patients can follow through with their treatment plan.

"People in Egypt, and in other second to third world countries, really don't have the same lives that we live. A simple thing like a doctor's visit is something so special and rare for them," said Boktor. "And so I think it (founding the clinic) made me really view the world from a different perspective and understand that I'm very privileged and lucky. I need to use whatever resources I have to help other people."

The clinic primarily treats patients living in an area on the outskirts of Cairo known as Manshiyat Nasser or more commonly as Garbage City.

"This place takes in all the trash from bigger cities, because there's no proper sanitation system, so this city and the people inside of it basically act like a landfill," said Boktor.

During their visit to Manshiyat Nasser, Boktor's family volunteered at an orphanage and noticed there were many sick children. With the help of the Middle East Virtual Clinic several of these kids have now been connected to life changing medical care.

The clinic's first ever patient was a three-year-old girl who was being treated for a rash on her face. During the virtual consultation the doctor noticed that the patient continued nodding off and guessed that there may be an underlying neurological condition such as narcolepsy. A trip to a local specialist confirmed that the patient did indeed have narcolepsy and she was subsequently treated for the condition.

Another powerful story concerns a four-year-old boy named Malek who has cerebral palsy. Prior to meeting with the Middle East Virtual Clinic, Malek could not walk and had to be carried everywhere by his mother. The clinic paid for a wheelchair, a brace and three ongoing weekly physical therapy visits. So far Malek has made huge improvements as is able to lift himself up independently and almost stand on his own.

While the organization is still young, Boktor and members of the associated Samohi club are committed to raising more money and growing the number of patients they can help.

"I definitely want to continue with it in college and keep working on it no matter what. The ultimate goal is to open up a clinic in Egypt one day," said Boktor. "I definitely want to go pre-med and so I want to help in any way and give people that outlet and provide people with health care."

Children Museum hosting arts and crafts inside the Merry-Go-Round Building. Residents can then wander down to Rusty's where the Santa Monica Public Theater will be staging two readings of the "Save the Pier!" play at Rustys, the first at 7 p.m. and the second at 8 p.m. After enjoying the fine theatrics, there is more art to be seen by continuing to walk westward all the way to the end of the Pier where local street photographer Calvin Leonard will be hosting an exhibit on the viewing platform.

After getting a complete arts and culture fix in, residents can then kick back, relax and enjoy any of the music performances happening across the Pier. The Santa Monica Music Center's White Chocolate Martini jazz band will be posted up at Pacific Park from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. and DJ "Elder DJ Saltwater" will be playing at Rusty's from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and again from 8:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. There will also be a series of DJ sets from KCRW and the Pico Youth and Family Center taking place all evening at the West end of the Pier.

While the entertainment will be running until 10 p.m. Harris suggests residents make it to the Pier by 5:45 p.m. so they can take in the sunset.

"The sunsets here are spectacular anyway, but when you add an entertainment element like live music or a DJ it just becomes over the top special and we're very excited about that part," said Harris.

During all of this fanfare the Pier's businesses will continue to operate their normal hours and offer a range of deals for food, drinks and even trapeze classes.

Following this Thursday's kick-off event, Locals' Night will take place again on April 21 and May 19. After the summer hiatus it returns on Sept. 15 for an extra special celebration and will continue to run every third Thursday of the month through the end of the year.

"In September we'll be celebrating the 100th Birthday of those 44 wonderful hand carved wooden horses that are down below my office here and I think you know which ones I'm talking about… the carousel turns 100 in September! So, we will do something big then," said Harris.

According to Harris, it has long been a mission of the Pier Corporation to connect with more locals and the specific idea for Locals' Night came from Board Member Nicholas Rolston.

Harris said the concept is loosely inspired by the early days of the Twilight Concert Series, when before the event became a crowd building behemoth, it was a locally focused summer series that drew the community together.

"It had a very modest beginning that really grew into something special that the community enjoyed for decades and that's what we're shooting for here with Locals' Night," said Harris. "Not that we're trying to put on the big event that Twilight became, but really to start with that grassroots feel and grow it into something special for community members to look forward to each month."

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (MARCH 7)

You'll do what you set out to do -- remarkable considering your ambitious goals. Since you'll be flying high, it's important to check yourself; surround yourself with those strong enough to provide honest, quality feedback. You'll benefit from a sale at the end of the spring. A new chapter begins with an alliance. Sagittarius and Capricorn adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 45, 2, 15, 30 and 16.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Your brain lights up with all you learn today. If you happen to make mistakes along the way, consider yourself lucky. It's a sign that you're taking chances, living boldly and trying new things.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). More regulations and requirements mean fewer possible answers to the problem. When you're stuck for the solution, take away some of the limits. What will ultimately work may be something outside your current set of rules.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). In your imagination, you should be able to do anything, even fly. Will you let yourself? Don't clip your own wings. Allow yourself the pleasure of visualizing what you desire.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll think the best of people, and they'll exceed your expectations. And when you're wrong, this is a kinder way to be wrong. Later, you'll be proud of how you treated people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When it comes to your favorite thing, your enjoyment is multidimensional. The more you know about the inner workings, the more you appreciate it. As your comprehension grows, so does your pleasure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). People stir your curiosity. Because you seem open, they'll tell you their stories unbidden. Has life brought you both to this place for a reason? You'll certainly feel enriched by the intersection.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Your life is rife with lucky misunderstandings, fortuitous mistakes and enjoyable inconveniences. No event is "good" or "bad." All events are merely "happening."

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The treasure map in your hand doesn't technically make you richer, even if you happen to be standing right where "X" marks the spot. You'll get richer after you get your hands dirty with the dig.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There are many options you haven't tried that you really don't have to try to know they are not for you. When you think about your options, you push all of your senses into them, including your common sense.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Can you get a trial run before you commit? It will be easier to change your mind in the early stages of an idea, and extremely complicated to do so once you've signed on the line.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Keep track of interesting things that occur throughout the day so you can remember to bring them up later in social discourse. You'll find that the more amusements you take note of, the more will come into view.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Wisdom does not always seem practical in the moment. Today's insights won't make sense until after you've gotten some distance on the situation. Do something else for a while. Things will be different upon your return.
