HOT: Officials are telling marathon runners to be prepared for heat.

Weather concerns heat up ahead of LA Marathon

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE With temperatures expected to approach record highs on race day, LA Marathon organizers and first responders are taking numerous precautions amid mounting concerns about heat-related issues for runners.

Marathon organizers issued a weather advisory Monday afternoon warning that the expected temperatures "pose a high level of risk" to the roughly 26,000 participants, the second-largest field in the event's 30-year history.

Last year's marathon, the hottest in the race's history, saw temperatures in the low 80s and more than a dozen runners sent to area hospitals with heat-related

Landmarks Commission approves Chain Reaction testing

Matthew Hall matt@smdp.com

FULLY CHAINED: Some of the statue's chains could be removed to facilitate safety testing.

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

MAIN STREET "Chain Reaction" is finally getting a check-up.

The Landmarks Commission tightened up the recommendations from city officials before approving testing on the controversial structure located on Main Street near Pico Boulevard.

Landmarks Commissioners were concerned with the suggested language, which included "the safe removal of all chains" to allow access to the interior of the sculpture — a gift to City Hall in the early 1990s from the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist Paul Conrad.

Because "Chain Reaction" is a designated landmark, the Landmark Commission has to give permission for any changes to be made to the structure.

In 2012, city officials said that the aging sculpture posed a threat to public safety. Costs to repair the sculpture, they said at the time, could be $400,000. City Council asked the public to raise funds to save the sculpture and supporters, with the self-designated nickname of the Chain Gang, collected more than $100,000. One year ago, council voted to accept that cash and cover the difference.

Since then, the Chain Gang has grown tired of the chain link fence that will surround the sculpture until it's deemed safe.

City officials kicked off the Landmarks Commission meeting on Monday by noting that they were not in favor of removing all the chains but only those that are necessary.

"Only the minimal amount of chain links for adequate access shall be disturbed and not necessarily removed for purposes of allowing, for the additional structural testing," Landmarks Commissioners amended the final certificate to say. "Removal of the chain link

NTSB:

Harrison Ford's plane lost power

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

SMO Harrison Ford's World War II-era plane lost engine power before crashing into the Penmar Golf Course next to the Santa Monica Airport, the National Transportation Safety Board said in a preliminary report released Monday night.

Ford's crash made national headlines after it was reported that the actor was transported to the hospital in critical condition last Thursday.

Ford is now said to be in fair to moderate condition.

About a minute after taking off from runway 21 at the airport, at 2:22 p.m., Ford's Ryan Aeronautical ST3KR experienced engine failure and he requested permission to return to the airport, the NTSB report said. The SMO traffic control tower controller granted permission and Ford started a left turn back toward the runway.

His plane then struck the top of a tall tree before hitting the ground about 800 feet from the approach end of runway 3. NTSB refers to the incident as a forced landing on the golf course and listed Ford, which it only identifies as "the pilot," as seriously injured.

The plane, whose wings and fuselage were damaged, according to the report, was later taken to a secure location for further examination by the NTSB.

"Visual meteorological conditions prevailed and no flight plan was filed for the personal flight," the report said.

NTSB's final report could take months or even years to complete. The last SMO-related crash occurred nearly a year and a half ago, on Sept. 29, 2013, resulting in problems. A handful of other races have canceled on race day in recent years due to extreme heat, but officials say there are many factors to consider before making a call like that including humidity and air quality.

According to National Weather Service officials, temperatures will start off around 64 degrees at the start of the race near Dodger Stadium and climb into the low 80s near Los Angeles International Airport by early afternoon — just a few degrees off the record of 83 degrees logged at LAX on March 15, 1959.

"The timing of these very warm to near-record highs is unfortunate considering the LA Marathon scheduled for Sunday morning," the weather service wrote in a release.

Sunday's high temperature for downtown Los Angeles could hit 89, weather officials said, and other expected temperatures in the area — which forecaster Ryan Kittell attributed to light offshore flow and a strong ridge of high pressure — would likely break records across the region.

"How hot it gets depends on the marine layer," Kittell said. "By the time (runners) get to (the finish line in) Santa Monica, there should be some cooling near the coast. It's good that they're heading that way."

PREPARING FOR HEAT

Organizers are planning for the heat by increasing their supplies of water and electrolyte-rich drinks at the 24 aid stations. They will also have fans, cold sponges, towels and ice as well as air-conditioned buses along the 26.2-mile course and at the finish line, where services will be available for longer than originally planned.

"Everyone who participates should strongly consider running at a slower pace than they would normally plan to run a marathon," race officials said in a statement. "If you're not accustomed to running in high temperatures, slow down and enjoy the experience."

Plans are also in place to make sure hydration stations are adequately stocked throughout the race, according to Glenn Ault, an associate professor of surgery at USC's Keck School of Medicine who is in his fourth year as the LA Marathon's medical director.

Ault's medical team has enlisted the help of about 280 volunteer physicians, nurses and assistants to provide care at 12 medical tents, a significant jump from the 200 or so volunteers on hand last year.

L.A. Leggers, a regional running and walking club with several hundred members registered for the marathon, is also taking steps to prepare for the heat. Club officials will have more water, ice and cooling towels at stations along the course, according to board member and past president Jennifer Fah.

"Even if you're not an L.A. Legger, we won't turn anybody away," she said. "Especially in the heat, we want to make sure that we let people know we're there to support everyone on the course."

Runners can also modify their routine to account for heat.

"Some of the challenge is to get runners to understand their responsibility in all of this," Ault said. "Perhaps Sunday is not the day to do your personal best or shoot for your personal best," he said.

Fah said it's possible that LA Marathon officials could choose not to record finish times as a way to discourage runners from overexerting in the heat.

"It will be interesting to see how the LA Marathon handles the situation," said Kirsten Wahlquist, a Santa Monica resident who is registered to run. "I have a feeling it will be a busy day for SMFD, LAFD and the other medical personnel along the course."

Amid nuclear talks, a defense of Netanyahu

I OPENED UP THE SANTA MONICA DAILY Press recently and was horrified to read Jack Neworth's column. To say it was in bad taste is a huge understatement.

Whether or not one agrees or disagrees with Prime Minister Netanyahu's decision to speak before the U.S. Congress (and thoughtful people come out differently on this issue), no knowledgeable person should dismiss Iran's efforts to obtain a nuclear capability and the vow by Iran's Supreme Leader to destroy the State of Israel.

Instead of the frivolous questions raised by Mr. Neworth, he should be asking:

Why do the Iranians, who have plenty of oil, need nuclear power?

Why do they need ICBMs?

Why do they need a heavy water nuclear plant at Arak?

Why do they need any centrifuges at all?

None of these things would be necessary if Iran were not determined to become a nuclear power.

This issue is not about protocol — it is about whether President Obama is on the verge of finalizing a deal with Iran that will allow a country that has threatened to destroy Israel to have nuclear weapons.

Netanyahu — as the leader of the only Jewish nation on earth — has the responsibility to prevent a second Holocaust in the past century. Had there been an Israel during the 1940s, the United States and Great Britain would have done more to save large numbers of Jewish lives. For example, from July 1943 on, we were flying over Auschwitz en route to bombing a German chemical factory. Our pilots returned from some of these missions with unused bombs and requested permission to destroy Auschwitz. Although everyone in authority knew what the Nazis were doing at Auschwitz, the U.S. government denied our pilots the permission to bomb Auschwitz and possibly save hundreds of thousands of Jewish lives.

This issue is about "Never Again" having meaning, and that's a lot more important than protocol.

Before you jump to the erroneous conclusion that I'm a far-right Republican, let me set the record straight.

I am a very liberal Democrat who voted for and supported President Obama twice; in fact, I have never voted for a Republican. I served as a senior White House aide in a previous Democratic administration and actually appointed the first U.S. Secretary of Education. I have devoted most of my professional life to working to ensure that low-income and minority students have equal educational opportunities. I ran the national Head Start program, played a significant role in changing the nation's student financial aid system by placing the priority on funding the lowest-income students, and with The Children's Defense Fund ran national campaigns to prevent two different administrations from essentially destroying the Head Start program.

At the present time, I am running one of the nation's most successful nonprofit college access organizations. We get 52 percent of our low-income students into Ivies or Ivy-equivalents like Stanford, Wellesley and Amherst and 97 percent into top-tier colleges. Ninety-five percent of our students graduate from college. We will work with 475 low-income students in 18 inner-city high schools in 2015.

And I don't understand why a liberal who cares about other people in need should turn a blind eye to the possibility of a second Jewish Holocaust in the past 75 years.

About a year ago, Obama promised that Iran would not be allowed to keep any of its centrifuges; now, he's on the verge of sanctioning a deal that will allow the largest state sponsor of terrorism in the world to keep at least 6,000 of them. Obama's policy on Iran has changed since his three top aides — Tom Donilon, Dennis Ross and Gary Samore — all left and were replaced by people who are far less knowledgeable on these issues. Since then we have caved to the Iranians on most of the vital issues and our policy has taken a 180-degree turn.

When British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain appeased Hitler at Munich by giving away Czechoslovakia to the Nazis, he excluded the Prime Minister of the country he was sacrificing from attending the Munich negotiations. Fast forward 77 years, and we are excluding Israel from having a role in these negotiations. That's the primary reason, in my view, why Prime Minister Netanyahu felt compelled to speak out despite enormous pressure from us — Israel's most important ally — not to do so. As the leader of the only Jewish nation on earth, he feels he has to try to prevent Iran from obtaining an existential weapon that could destroy his very small country.

This might be a laughing matter to Mr. Neworth; it certainly is not to me.

HARLEY FRANKEL is a Santa Monica resident.

Greenland set to stamp its mark on Santa Monica

GREENLAND IS MELTING. DO YOU CARE? Do you even know where it is? I do, and yes I do care and so should you, if you live in Santa Monica.

You'll never guess how I know anything about Greenland. (Way before Google.)

It's because I was a stamp collector. From age 7 to late teens, when I got the call from my Uncle Sam and foolishly didn't just let it ring. You wouldn't make it past the first day of Basic Training if you pulled out the old stamp albums in the evening, sitting on your bunk, while your fellow grunts were raucously thumbing through Playboy, Popular Mechanics and Modern Warrior. Never mind explaining that it was the hobby of Presidents and Kings. So the stamps got put away, for good. But I'm telling you, it was a great source of knowledge, useful to this day.

And collecting is always fun, watching something you have a passion for expand towards completeness as you pursue it, organizing and enjoying your collectibles. I won a handful of blue ribbons at the New Mexico State Fair for my stamp and coin collections, yes I did. (I'll wait a moment while you finish sniggering.)

While they sat in boxes for years, rarely pulled out for perusal and pleasure, I took satisfaction knowing that as their worth steadily climbed, like the gold bullion I should have bought but didn't, someday I could painfully part with them and pay for my son's college. A year or two, anyway.

It was a false comfort. Timing is everything. And in the time it took for my sprout to reach university age, stamp collecting had plummeted out of favor. So when I reluctantly trudged over to Brosius Stamps and Coins on Main Street, I got the bad news I expected, that my precious collection would pay for a couple of months' rent on his Santa Cruz apartment, that's it.

Supply and demand. Too much supply because all the geezers who collected were dying off and their families were dumping it all on a market demand that had dwindled to near zero.

It could have been at least a bittersweet experience to wander in to the Brosius brothers' relic of a bygone era, tucked away on Main Street, to hand over my childhood labor of love, but there was no sweet. The shop, dating from 1948, was stacked with boxes, everywhere, that I guessed were full of entire collections they had purchased, waiting to be sorted. Therein, the history and stories that stamps and coins carry, and the unknown ones of the people who cherished and then parted with them.

I know where Greenland is because it was one of the pages in my stamp album, and that page showed me a lot as I picked up Greenland stamps here and there. I know what the countryside looks like (no, it's not all ice, snow, glaciers), their flora and fauna, their currency, what they call themselves, their language, their flag, where in the world they are geographically, who their political leaders and historical heroes were, what their treasured monuments and buildings look like, their lakes and mountains, their art, their livelihoods.

All from stamps, miniature works of art that were sometimes glorious to behold, ornate and brightly, richly dyed, even before you looked closer to see what the details were all about. This is true of most any nation's stamps, though some were more artistic, more attractive than others. American stamps, up until around the late '50s, were among the best. (From them I learned the Presidents, in order, what they looked like and when they served, and all sorts of other useful and useless Americana.)

I learned that the people who live in Moscow call it Moskva, Moroccans speak mostly French, after Arabic, and Sweden to a Swede is Sverige (pronounced Sur-idj', long "i"). You never know about this stuff. You might meet a gorgeous Swedish man or woman (what?? impossible) in a bar and start the conversation off with something like that, that few untraveled Americans would know, and you could be on your way. Just appear erudite and don't let on that you learned it from your nerdy numismatic days.

So from an early age, I knew my geography. And I was always fascinated by Greenland. What is that humongous island up there at the top?

Greenland was huge on maps because when you try to show a round object like the Earth on a flat, rectangular surface, you either have to cut slices out of it (distracting) or spread out the areas near the top and bottom. So Greenland, the world's largest island that isn't a continent, appears way huger than it really is.

WHAT'S THIS GOT TO DO WITH SANTA MONICA?

Greenland's glaciers, covering 81 percent of the island, are melting faster than anyone thought, a recent L.A. Times article brought to my attention. All of the north polar ice could melt and it wouldn't make much difference, because that ice is floating in the ocean and it's only displacement. But Greenland's glaciers, like those at the South Pole, are on land, and when they go, just Greenland's, you're looking at world sea levels rising 20-23 feet.

So where in Santa Monica do you live? We'll lose Harry Shearer's homes on Ocean Park (hey, he's a New Orleans guy, he's used to it, and he can take a cosmic joke - Greenland??), but I'm on the hill at Sixth Street and I'll gain ocean front property. Oh yeah.

In 2007 we were flying back from a visit to Ireland. I love to look out below when I'm flying and always fight for the window seat. As the pilot announced we were flying over Greenland I eagerly got close to the window, but slowly withdrew in sadness and a bit of shock. I could see, from way up there, rivers of water pouring off Greenland, all over the place. I knew it had some rivers, but this was different, this wasn't right, this was Greenland melting, and that was eight years ago.

Pacific Palisades

St. Matthew's Music Guild welcomes L.A. Philharmonic members

St. Matthew's Music Guild continues its 2014-15 season in Pacific Palisades on March 13 with a program featuring Britten's Double Concerto For Violin And Viola, with violinists Jin-Shan Dai and Dana Hansen. Dai and Hansen are both member of the Los Angeles Philharmonic's string section. The program also includes the Lyric For Strings by George Walker and Schubert's Symphony No. 2 in D major.

Dai has performed extensively throughout North America, Europe and Asia. He joined the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the beginning of the 2010-11 season. Previously, he was a member of the Toronto Symphony from 2004 to 2010, and made his debut as a soloist with that orchestra in 2008 playing Vivaldi's Four Seasons.

Hansen began violin studies at the age of 5 and viola at 15. After graduating from Harvard College with a cum laude degree in Modern European History, she attended the Juilliard School, where she received her master's degree in 2003. In Boston, she studied viola and chamber music with James Dunham and Robert Levin. At Juilliard, she studied with Misha Amory and Heidi Castleman. During summers, she attended the Aspen, Taos and Tanglewood music festivals.

Tickets for the concert are $35 and available at the door or online through the Music Guild's website at www.MusicGuildOnline.org. St. Matthew's Church is located at 1031 Bienveneda Ave., Pacific Palisades. Call (310) 573-7422 for more information.

PLANE

the death of all four of the plane's occupants, and a final report has not been released. The preliminary report, in that case, does not identify the cause of the crash.

The airport has long been controversial in the city by the sea, with neighbors complaining about noise and pollution caused by the aircraft taking off and landing at the 227-acre public property. Some fear for their safety, as homes are located about 300 feet from the runway.

Advocates of the airport say it would be indispensable in the case of a widespread emergency and claim it stimulates the local economy — though City Hall's financial consultant compared its economic impact to that of a mid-sized strip mall.

Ford has been very involved in the fight over the airport. He gave $25,000 to a pro-SMO ballot measure last year and added his name to a complaint filed by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) regarding the airport.

A key agreement between the FAA and City Hall expires on July 1, giving the latter more control of the land. City officials have discussed shortening the runway — potentially making it less attractive to pilots — upping the environmental requirements placed on pilots — thereby eliminating older, fuel-inefficient planes — and raising the rent for airport tenants to market rate.

City Council is expected to consider the changes in the coming months.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

shall be avoided accept to the extent necessary to perform the inspection of the structural integrity without removing the structure's cap."

The Chain Gang is opposed to removing the mushroom cloud-shaped sculpture's cap, saying it would be extremely invasive. City officials agreed to recommend testing that would not include cutting off the cap but noted that it may be necessary down the line. Any changes beyond those approved by the commission on Monday night will have to go back to the commission for approval at a later date.

The commission added requirements that the art conservator tasked with testing the structure must come back before the commission before making any repairs. The conservator also has to meet with the heir of the artist, Paul Conrad's son, Dave Conrad, to share the results of the testing.

The conservator has to document all changes to the existing condition of the sculpture.

Testing could begin after the appeal process ends, next week.

The conservator has to return to the commission with an updated report in three months. At that time, the commission could decide to request more frequent updates.

Several members of the public spoke at the commission meeting on Monday night, mostly in favor of the commission's pursuit of less invasive testing.

The testing was approved unanimously by the six commissioners present.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Felons, and those convicted of domestic assault, and those with a history of mental illness, cannot by federal law buy firearms or explosive devices, but Americans on the National Counterterrorism Center's consolidated watch list can -- and may possess an unlimited quantity. (In 2013 and 2014, 455 of 486 prospective purchasers on the list passed the background check, and going back to 2004, 2,043 of 2,233, according to a recent Government Accountability Office report.) Legislation to add watch listees as a banned category was introduced again this year, but has failed several times in the past.

■ The annual National Basketball Association All-Star game in February provided a windfall for the co-host arena's proprietor, James L. Dolan, whose family owns not only Madison Square Garden but also the NBA's richest franchise (the Knicks), hockey's second-richest (the Rangers), and the New York region's telecom juggernaut Cablevision. Among the government handouts Dolan receives is the 33-year (and counting) exemption from property taxes for the Garden's four square blocks ("among the most valuable (plots of land) on Earth," according to New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio) -- a government gift, in 2014 alone, worth $54 million.

★★★★ Work with your finances, and try to trim down your budget where you can. Others seem to be off-kilter at this time. You could be distracted by and somewhat concerned with their actions or words. Relax, and choose to go with the flow. Tonight: At your favorite haunt.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Be responsive to someone who seems a little upset. This person's mood could have an effect on your day. A conversation, if not handled properly, might trigger more anger. Do not blame or criticize the other party. Attempt to walk in this person's shoes. Tonight: Your treat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You will feel the need to play it low-key. You might want some downtime to relax or perhaps you need to handle your taxes. A loved one will delight you with his or her spontaneity. Use care with spending, especially if you are eyeing a big commitment. Tonight: Be impulsive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Take the time to assess your direction and your choices. How you see an evolving situation could change. You know what you want, so zero in on that desire. A family member is likely to demonstrate his or her instability. Tonight: Take some much-needed personal time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Tension builds during the day as you attempt to sign off on a project. You might need to take the lead in order to complete it. What you hear from someone quite eccentric could surprise you. Try not to be too reactive. Tonight: Be happy, and join your friends.

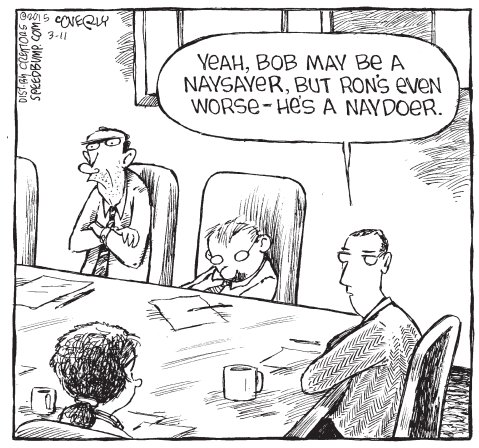

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Try seeing a situation from a different perspective. First you must detach, then you can decide which way will work best. Avoid taking any risks, even if you believe things will work out perfectly. Proceed with caution. Tonight: Count on being up late.

Wednesday, March 11, 2015

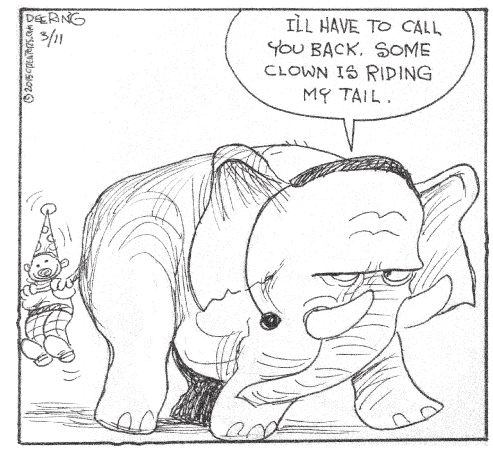

This year you experience unexpected events that might affect your finances. You will find that you get frustrated easily. For your sake, work on letting go of this feeling. A friend could be instrumental in this process. If you are single, come fall, someone quite appealing could steal your heart. You certainly will know when you meet this person. If you are attached, you might want to make a commitment to a mutual cause. You will enjoy the people you meet together. SAGITTARIUS means well, but he or she often creates tension when you are around.
