Female GIs struggle with higher rate of divorce

BY KIMBERLY HEFLING
Associated Press

WASHINGTON Two failed marriages were the cost of war for Sgt. Jennifer Schobey.

The breaking point in her first marriage came when her husband deployed to Afghanistan, the last in a long line of separations they had endured as they juggled two military careers. Schobey married another combat veteran, but eventually that union failed under the weight of two cases of post-traumatic stress disorder — his and hers. They are now getting divorced.

Separations. Injuries. Mental health issues. All are added weights to the normal strains of marriage.

For women in the military, there's a cold, hard reality: Their marriages are more than twice as likely to end in divorce as those of their male comrades — and up to three times as likely for enlisted women. And military women get divorced at higher rates than their peers outside the military, while military men divorce at lower rates than their civilian peers.

About 220,000 women have served in Afghanistan and Iraq in roles ranging from helicopter pilots to police officers. Last year, 7.8 percent of women in the military got a divorce, compared with 3 percent of military men, according to Pentagon statistics. Among the military's enlisted corps, nearly 9 percent of women saw their marriages end, compared with a little more than 3 percent of the men.

Like all divorces, the results can be a sense of loss and a financial blow. But for military women, a divorce can be a breaking point — even putting them at greater risk for homelessness down the road.

It has an effect, too, on military kids. The military has more single moms than dads, and an estimated 30,000 of them have

ON THEIR WAY: Samohi students Aidan Nathanson (left) and Sean Robins hold the $1,000 check they received for winning first place in the seventh annual High School Business Plan competition held in February and hosted by the UCLA Anderson School of Management.

Students honing their competitive edge in ROP

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

SAMOHI On March 18, a bevy of food trucks will descend on Santa Monica streets near the Samohi campus for a lunch period of eclectic eats.

While that spells fun for most, Aidan Nathanson and his business partner Sean Robins view it as research.

The two seniors plan on operating a food truck themselves under the name of Grub Tough, a rolling kitchen specializing in a meat-laden Uruguayan sandwich called a chivito.

"It's a top sirloin sandwich with bacon, egg and ham," Nathanson said. "It's a meaty sandwich, and it's delicious."

The research Nathanson and Robins will do at the truck luncheon will translate in a pitch to investors to raise the $50,000 in start up money needed to get the project underway.

If the artery-clogging goodness of the chivito wasn't enough to convince prospective investors of the potential benefits of jumping onto the food truck bandwagon, perhaps the fact that the business has been vetted by some of the best minds in the country might sway them.

The concept of Grub Tough evolved through the Virtual Business arm of a class at Samohi called Regional Occupational Program, commonly known as ROP.

Under the name of "Stacked," the plan won the top prize in the New On-Campus Business category at the seventh annual High School Business Plan competition held in February and hosted by the UCLA Anderson School of Management, garnering a $1,000 check.

It wasn't alone in its success.

Vike's Enterprise, a collaborative effort of the ROP ECHO and Virtual Business classes, walked away with second prize and $500 for Existing On-Campus Business, and the floral arrangement business Seflora got a $250 award for third place in Existing On-

Crunch time approaches to strike budget deal

BY JUDY LIN
Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. Efforts by Gov. Jerry Brown and Democratic lawmakers to court a handful of Republican lawmakers are expected to intensify this week as they seek to compromise on a plan to send a tax vote to the ballot.

A five-year extension of the sales, personal income and vehicle taxes enacted two years ago is the cornerstone of Brown's plan to address a $26.6 billion deficit, but he has been able to get Republican lawmakers to publicly support it. He is negotiating with some, who have said they want pension reforms, a spending cap and regulatory changes in exchange for their vote on a budget.

Senate President Pro Tem Darrell Steinberg, D-Sacramento, is aiming for a floor vote this week even though Republicans have made no commitment to a timeline for striking a deal. Brown, who already missed a self-imposed budget deadline last Thursday, is seeking bipartisan support to call a June special election to consider extending the tax hikes, which will expire by July 1.

Brown's office wants the election held June 7 to coincide with local elections in many California cities. To do so, he needs to get the Legislature to approve the tax extension question on a bipartisan vote soon.

He also faces a Monday deadline to call a special election to replace former Democratic Rep. Jane Harman, who resigned her Los Angeles-area seat last month.

The Democratic governor is balancing his proposal to extend the tax increases with $12.5 billion in spending cuts. He also wants to save money by shifting more responsibilities to local governments.

Five Republican senators — Tom Berryhill of Modesto, Sam Blakeslee of San Luis Obispo, Anthony Cannella of Ceres, Bill Emmerson of Hemet and Tom Harman of Huntington Beach — are negotiating with Brown.

"We continue to work, and we hope that the governor continues to work with his stakeholders to bring them to a position where we can find some common ground," said Joe Justin, a spokesman for the five senators.

Both the Assembly and Senate were placed on call throughout the weekend, requiring lawmakers to stay within a few hours of the Capitol.

As negotiations progress, Democratic lawmakers are feeling pressure from supporters who cautioned them not to give away too much to the minority party.

Environmental groups last week warned against weakening the California Environmental Quality Act, which requires state and local agencies to identify significant environmental impacts on projects.

"We are most concerned that the state's dire fiscal condition will encourage detrac-

'Battle: LA' conquers box office with $36M

BY JAKE COYLE
AP Entertainment Writer

NEW YORK Hollywood would like to skip spring and head straight to summer.

The summer-style blockbuster "Battle: Los Angles" performed like one at the box office, opening to a strong debut of $36 million, according to studio estimates Sunday. The film stars Aaron Eckhart as a veteran soldier leading a platoon of Marines in combat against invading aliens.

For Columbia Pictures and Sony, the sci-fi action film recalls its 2009 Oscar-nominated hit, "District 9." "Battle: Los Angeles" hasn't received nearly as good reviews, but it benefited from a 68 percent male audience and a very successful marketing campaign.

"It's kind of like having a summer film in the spring," said Rory Bruer, president of worldwide distribution at Sony. "From the beginning, this was a film we were excited about."

Bruer added that there's "definitely a connection" between "Battle: Los Angeles" and "District 9," which opened to $37.4 million and was also helmed by a South African filmmaker. Neill Blomkamp directed "District 9," while Jonathan Liebesman directed the similarly handheld-heavy "Battle: Los Angeles."

In its second week of release, the animated Western spoof "Rango" came in second, adding $23.1 million for a cumulative total of $68.7 million. The critically acclaimed Paramount Pictures film appeared on its way to surpassing $100 million.

The weekend's other new releases didn't fare as well.

"Red Riding Hood," the updated fairy tale starring Amanda Seyfried and helmed by "Twilight" director Catherine Hardwicke, debuted to $14.1 million for Warner Bros.

Worse was Disney's animated 3-D family film "Mars Needs Moms!" It opened to a disappointing $6.8 million, well below expectations. With a voice cast including Seth Green and Joan Cusack, it also opened on more than 200 IMAX screens.

Reacting to the reactors

Editor:

Shut down the two California nuclear plants around L.A., at San Onofre and Diablo Canyon, both on earthquake faults.

The lessons from Japan's ongoing crisis should teach us to close down the reactors now, and ask questions later. Nuclear power only offers a fraction of California's energy.

Why, the official escape plan for us in an accident at San Onofre is to drive by the reactor down the 405!

Shut them down!

License plates for bikes

Editor:

Last Friday, my wife and I were taking a walk with our dog on a quiet residential street in Santa Monica. We are well past middle-age and I occasionally need the assistance of a cane. As we were slowly walking along, I saw a young male cyclist barreling towards us on the sidewalk. He didn't appear to be slowing down nor moving to the street, so we tried to get out of the way the best we could. As he zipped by, I yelled, "Get off the sidewalk!" He yelled back, "You watch out!"

Since City Hall is either unwilling or unable to enforce current cyclist regulations, I propose that all bicycles in Santa Monica must have a license plate the same as autos do. The cyclist would then have the freedom to roam our streets and sidewalks, and ignore traffic signals and stop signs. City Hall would gain more revenue from the license and it would enhance City Hall's determination to promote cyclists' rights. Finally, the bicyclists would get the freedom they so richly deserve.

No time to drink

The folks from Macerich Co. went before the Planning Commission recently to ask for permission to sell alcohol into the early morning hours to people eating or drinking in the outdoor dining areas of restaurants on the third floor of Santa Monica Place.

Nine eateries currently operate outdoor dining patios with alcohol service until midnight seven days a week. Last call is 11:30 p.m. and patrons must vacate the outdoor patios no later than midnight. Macerich proposed a "last call" for drinks at 1:30 a.m. with patrons vacating the premises by 2:00 a.m. — the same as its interior eateries.

Macerich argued that patrons are inconvenienced when they have to move inside at midnight or are refused service outside after 11:30 p.m. The outdoor dining areas are primarily located on the third level dining deck along Second Street, Third Street/Broadway and Fourth Street.

The commission staff report gushed that extended service "will attract visitors and catalyze the district's shopping and dining opportunities… ." It noted that eight eateries on the Third Street Promenade already have the later hours for alcohol sales — without any problems. Staff seems to think that extended alcohol hours are the best thing to come along since the Mojito.

But, there are problems. Neighbors told the commission that extended alcohol sales mean live music, loud sound systems, car alarms, blaring car stereos and liquored-up party people screaming in the streets at two and three in the morning — plus cleaning and maintenance noise.

City Hall encourages alcohol service because it brings money into city coffers, therefore neighbor's concerns about alcohol related problems are usually ignored. It's good that commissioners listened and put Macerich's request for extended hours on hold.

Commissioner Ted Winterer told Macerich "to make a big effort with the community to keep the noise down and address their concerns." Macerich will return in the coming months with ways to mitigate potential problems. I'll drink to that.

FOGARTY MOVING ON

Eileen Fogarty has resigned as planning director for the city of Santa Monica. After nearly five years in the post, she'll exit in May.

Fogarty came to Santa Monica in July, 2006 from Alexandria, Va. She faced a community at odds over future development. The Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE), a long overdue update to the city's General Plan, which dictates development and influences traffic patterns, was moribund because of disagreements over slow growth versus overdevelopment.

Although she shepherded LUCE to completion, there is now much to be done in writing zoning codes to make it a reality. So, what were her real reasons for stepping down, now?

While she says "bi-coastal consulting opportunities," Fogarty and her staff had spent extraordinarily long hours in developing LUCE with a lot of pressure from residents, developers, Downtown and civic center interests and other stakeholders who all wanted their vision realized.

At a recent neighborhood council meeting where Fogarty was trying to muster residents' support for an interim zoning ordinance for Downtown that would limit taller and more massive buildings already pending and bring them in line with LUCE's stated goals, she seemed weary.

My sources say she wasn't happy with size, massing and aesthetics of the Bergamot Transit Village proposed by Texas-based Hines for the Paper Mate site at Olympic Boulevard and 26th Street. I've been told Hines was trying to pressure Fogarty by taking its case directly to the politicians they contributed to during previous elections.

Even accommodating Expo Light Rail had been particularly challenging — leading her to joke to neighborhood leaders, "Now I know where the term 'being railroaded' comes from."

City Hall is searching for her replacement who must be as strong as Thor, as wise as Solomon and have the skin of a rhinoceros.

Thanks for your hard work, Eileen. It's a tough job. I wish her a lot of luck.

LESS TALK, MORE ACTION

In letters to the Samohi-PALS chat line and this newspaper ("Missing the point," March 8, Letters to the Editor), school board Vice Chair Ben Allen seems confused. He wrote that a reporter called him about a leaked confidential memo from school Superintendent Tim Cuneo. While he apparently gave quotes to that reporter, he said that I "missed the point" by not including them in my column last Monday.

I stand by my statement that Allen seemed more concerned about the leak itself than the memo's offensive attack on special education parents. I've heard that at a recent Church in Ocean Park gathering, Allen was "going on and on about how terrible it (the leak) was" and asking "what kind of person would do such a thing?"

In any case, aspiring politician Allen should know the difference between news reporter and opinion columnist. Opinion writers have more flexibility on using quotes to substantiate their opinions.

While it's great that Allen's for "transparency," "solving problems," "working together" and, I'm sure motherhood and the American flag, it's time he gets past the platitudes and steps up his game.

With all the problems facing our schools, Allen needs to do more than spew clichés.

Group tries to save planet by cloning, replanting trees

BY JOHN FLESHER
AP Environmental Writer

COPEMISH, Mich. Redwoods and sequoias towering majestically over California's northern coast. Oaks up to 1,000 years old nestled in a secluded corner of Ireland. The legendary cedars of Lebanon.

They are among the most iconic trees on Earth, remnants of once-vast populations decimated by logging, development, pollution and disease. A nonprofit organization called Archangel Ancient Tree Archive is rushing to collect their genetic material and replant clones in an audacious plan to restore the world's ancient forests and put them to work cleansing the environment and absorbing carbon dioxide, the greenhouse gas largely responsible for global warming.

"In our infinite wisdom, we've destroyed 98 percent of the old growth forests that kept nature in balance for thousands of years," said David Milarch, the group's co-founder. "That's what we intend to put back."

Milarch, a tree nursery operator from the northern Michigan village of Copemish, and sons Jared and Jake have been producing genetic copies of ancient trees since the 1990s. They've now joined with Elk Rapids businesswoman Leslie Lee and a team of researchers to establish Archangel Archive, which has a staff of 17 and an indoor tree research and production complex.

Its mission: Clone the oldest and largest individuals within the world's most ecologically valuable tree species, and persuade people to buy and plant millions of copies — on factory grounds and college campuses; along riverbanks and city streets; in forests, farms, parks and back yards.

"The number of these ancient survivors that go in the ground will be the ultimate measure of our success," said Lee, who donated several million dollars to get the project off the ground and serves as board chairwoman. The group hopes donations and tree sales will raise enough money to keep it going.

Scientific opinion varies on whether trees that survive for centuries have superior genes, like champion race horses, or simply have been in the right places at the right times to avoid fires, diseases and other misfortunes. But Archangel Archive is a true believer in the super-tree idea. The group has tracked down and cloned some of the biggest and oldest of more than 60 species and is developing inventories.

The plan is eventually to produce copies of 200 varieties that are considered crucial. The trees preserve ecosystem diversity, soak up toxins from the ground and atmosphere, store carbon while emitting precious oxygen, and provide ingredients for medicines. Rebuilding forests with champion clones could "buy time for humanity" by mitigating centuries of environmental abuse, said Diana Beresford-Kroeger, an Ontario scientist who studies the roles of trees in protecting the environment.

California's coastal redwoods and giant sequoias, the world's largest trees, are best suited for sequestering carbon because of their size, rapid growth and durability, said Bill Libby, a retired University of California at Berkeley tree geneticist and consultant to Archangel Archive. The longer a tree lives, the longer its carbon remains bottled up instead of reaching the atmosphere.

"They grow like crazy," Libby said. "I have a clone of what used to be the world's tallest redwood tree in my back yard. It's still a baby, only 30 years old. It's already taller than anything around it, probably 80 to 100 feet."

Archangel Archive crew members have taken cuttings from redwoods and sequoias between 2,000 and 3,000 years old. Among them: the Stagg tree, ranked the world's sixth-largest sequoia by the U.S. Forest Service; and the Waterfall sequoia, considered the widest tree on Earth at ground level — 155 feet around.

Three dozen coastal redwood clones and nine of the giant sequoias have taken root in the Copemish facility and another in Monterey, Calif., David Milarch said. The group also has successfully cloned sprouts from stumps of a dozen redwoods that were felled years ago, including one 35 feet in diameter.

Terry Root, a Stanford University climate change expert, said giant tree clones could help fight global warming if large numbers are planted where conditions favor their long-term survival.

The Q Line

Building bridges in Malibu

For years some parents in Malibu have said they feel like second-class citizens and have complained about a lack of inclusion in the school district. Some have tried to break away from Santa Monica, and recently parents tried to make Point Dume Elementary a charter school. School board members and district officials are trying to heal old wounds and build bridges by meeting with parents, some of whom want to change the charter so there is always a school board member elected from Malibu.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you think Malibu parents have a legitimate beef? Should at least one school board seat be reserved for a Malibu resident? Is the school board sincere this time around?

RISKY? The nonprofit group Beyond Pesticides warns that some 60 percent of pesticides used today have been shown to affect the thyroid gland's production of T3 and T4 hormones. Commercially available insecticides and fungicides have also been implicated. Women are most at risk.

Pesticides linked to thyroid disease

Dear EarthTalk:

Instances of people with thyroid problems seems to be on the rise. Is there an environmental connection?

Dora Light,
Waukesha, Wis.

THE AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY reports that thyroid cancer is one of the few cancers that have been on the rise in recent decades, with cases increasing 6 percent annually since 1997. Many researchers, however, attribute these increases to our having simply gotten better at detection. Regardless, exposures to stress, radiation and pollutants have been known to increase a person's risk of developing thyroid problems.

Thyroid disease takes two primary forms. Hyperthyroidism occurs when the thyroid produces too much of the T3 and T4 hormones that regulate metabolism. This can cause a racing heart, weight loss, insomnia and other problems. In cases of hypothyroidism, the body produces too few hormones, so we feel fatigued and may gain weight, among other symptoms. According to the American Thyroid Association (ATA), many people with thyroid problems don't realize it, as symptoms can be mistaken for other problems or attributed to lack of sleep. Thyroid problems in children can delay or impair neurological development.

Doctors are not sure why some people are prone to thyroid disease while others aren't, but genetics has much to do with it. One recent UCLA study found that genetic background accounts for about 70 percent of the risk. However, researchers have begun to find links between increased risk of thyroid disease and exposure to certain chemicals, especially among women. "Pesticide Use and Thyroid Disease among Women in the Agricultural Health Study," published in the American Journal of Epidemiology in 2002, found that Iowa and North Carolina women married to men using such pesticides as aldrin, DDT and lindane were at much higher risk of developing thyroid disease than women in non-agricultural areas. According to Dr. Whitney S. Goldner, lead researcher on the study, 12.5 percent of the 16,500 wives evaluated developed thyroid disease compared to between 1 and 8 percent in the general population.

It's not just farm women who should worry. Trace amounts of chemical pesticides and fertilizers most certainly end up in some of the food we eat. The nonprofit group Beyond Pesticides warns that some 60 percent of pesticides used today have been shown to affect the thyroid gland's production of T3 and T4 hormones. Commercially available insecticides and fungicides have also been implicated.

Likewise, some chemicals used in plastics and flame retardants contain toxins shown to trigger thyroid problems in those genetically predisposed. And a 2007 study at the University of Texas Health Sciences Center at San Antonio found that triclosan, an antibacterial agent found in everything from hand soaps to facial tissues to toys — it's present in the bloodstreams of three out of every four Americans-could be causing some mothers' thyroid glands to send signals to fetuses that may in turn contribute to autism.

An increasing number of doctors now believe that hypothyroidism could be precipitated by a dietary deficiency in iodine, a trace element found in the thyroid's T3 and T4 hormones and essential in small amounts for good health. Besides eating more seafood, switching to iodized salt and/or taking iodine supplements can boost iodine intake without the need for medications. But too much iodine is not healthy, so always consult with your doctor before embarking on any new health or diet regimen.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Transit Priority Systems Project

Installation of the Transit Priority System (TPS) at 80 traffic signals along major corridors within the City of Santa Monica. Work requires installation of wireless detectors to sense approach of buses on the bus routes. Work is currently taking place on Santa Monica Blvd. between 20th Street and Cloverfield Blvd. No roadway closures are expected and impact to traffic should be minimal.

Water and Sewer Improvements

Beginning Feb. 14, the city will be making improvements to water and sewer utility lines along Broadway between West 19th and 20th streets. One lane of traffic in each direction will remain open at all times. Metered parking on Broadway between West 19th and 20th streets will not be available during this construction. Please call the project hotline at (866) 755-7679 if you have questions or need more information.

Utility Undergrounding

Various alleys will be temporarily closed for underground work on utilities in the following locations: 18th Court between Pearl Street and Pico Boulevard; 20th Street between Pearl Street and Ocean Park Boulevard; 18th Street between Ocean Park Boulevard and Ashland Place North; on Ashland Place North between 18th Street and 16th Street. Work is taking place until approximately July, 2011.Borderline Neighborhood Improvement Project

New water main installation, new various street pavement finishes, new landscaped areas, trees, pedestrian lighting, and a neighborhood kiosk. Work will be taking place on Longfellow Street at the intersections of Marine, Navy and Ozone streets. Please observe posted detour signs. Project is anticipated to be complete June, 2011.

Street & Park Lighting Project

The work consists of modifying existing high voltage series streetlight circuits to low voltage multiple circuits. Work will take place citywide through September 2011. Work will be taking place on 11th Street from Marguerita Ave. to Alta Ave., on 10th Street from Alta Ave. to Montana Ave., and on Alta Ave. from 10th to 11th Street. No roadway closures are expected and impact to traffic should be minimal.

Borderline Neighborhood Improvement Project

New water main installation, new various street pavement finishes, new landscaped areas, trees, pedestrian lighting, and a neighborhood kiosk. Longfellow Street is closed to through traffic between Marine and Ozone streets until late April. Please observe posted detour signs. Project is anticipated to be complete June, 2011.

Campus Business.

The money will go toward student activities, the ROP program and scholarships.

ROP is sponsored by the California Department of Education to give students an opportunity to break away from traditional learning and get a hands-on experience in practical subjects far afield from the usual math or language arts coursework.

The ROP program at Samohi has long been at the top of its game. In 2010, students traveled to South Africa and took first place in an international competition, beating out hundreds of students to win the top spot.

Students at Samohi specialize in business, marketing, technology and other subjects, and then work together on projects that other students take part in, most visibly the student-run businesses on campus.

Most of the seed money for those businesses comes from grant-writing and fundraising, rather than from school coffers, said ROP teacher Anita Kemp, forcing students to work within the boundaries of how people do business.

The students play by all the same rules that their competitors in the real world do as well.

When state regulations came down banning the sale of soda on campuses, for instance, Vike's Inn had to change its model and begin selling Powerade, despite the fact that it's technically a private enterprise.

Students excel by living their competitions every day, making educated business decisions based on the needs of their number one client — the student body of Samohi.

Vike's Enterprise won its prize for taking three existing businesses — Vike's Inn & Cafe, Tote-A-lly Awesome and 3Tier — and reorganizing them under the single umbrella business. Tote-A-lly specializes in making bags while 3Tier does event planning.

The move will allow the Tote-A-lly awesome bags to be sold at the cafe, for instance, and allows for a broader management structure.

The idea and associated plan was developed by this year's crop of seniors to cross-sell and market the various products hawked by each business.

It takes a lot of work, said senior Garrett Petersen.

"We were here every day after school, weekends on Saturday and late morning to early evening Sunday working on that plan," Petersen said.

The success of the program rests on dedicated teachers, energized students and the support it receives from the community, said teacher Teri Jones.

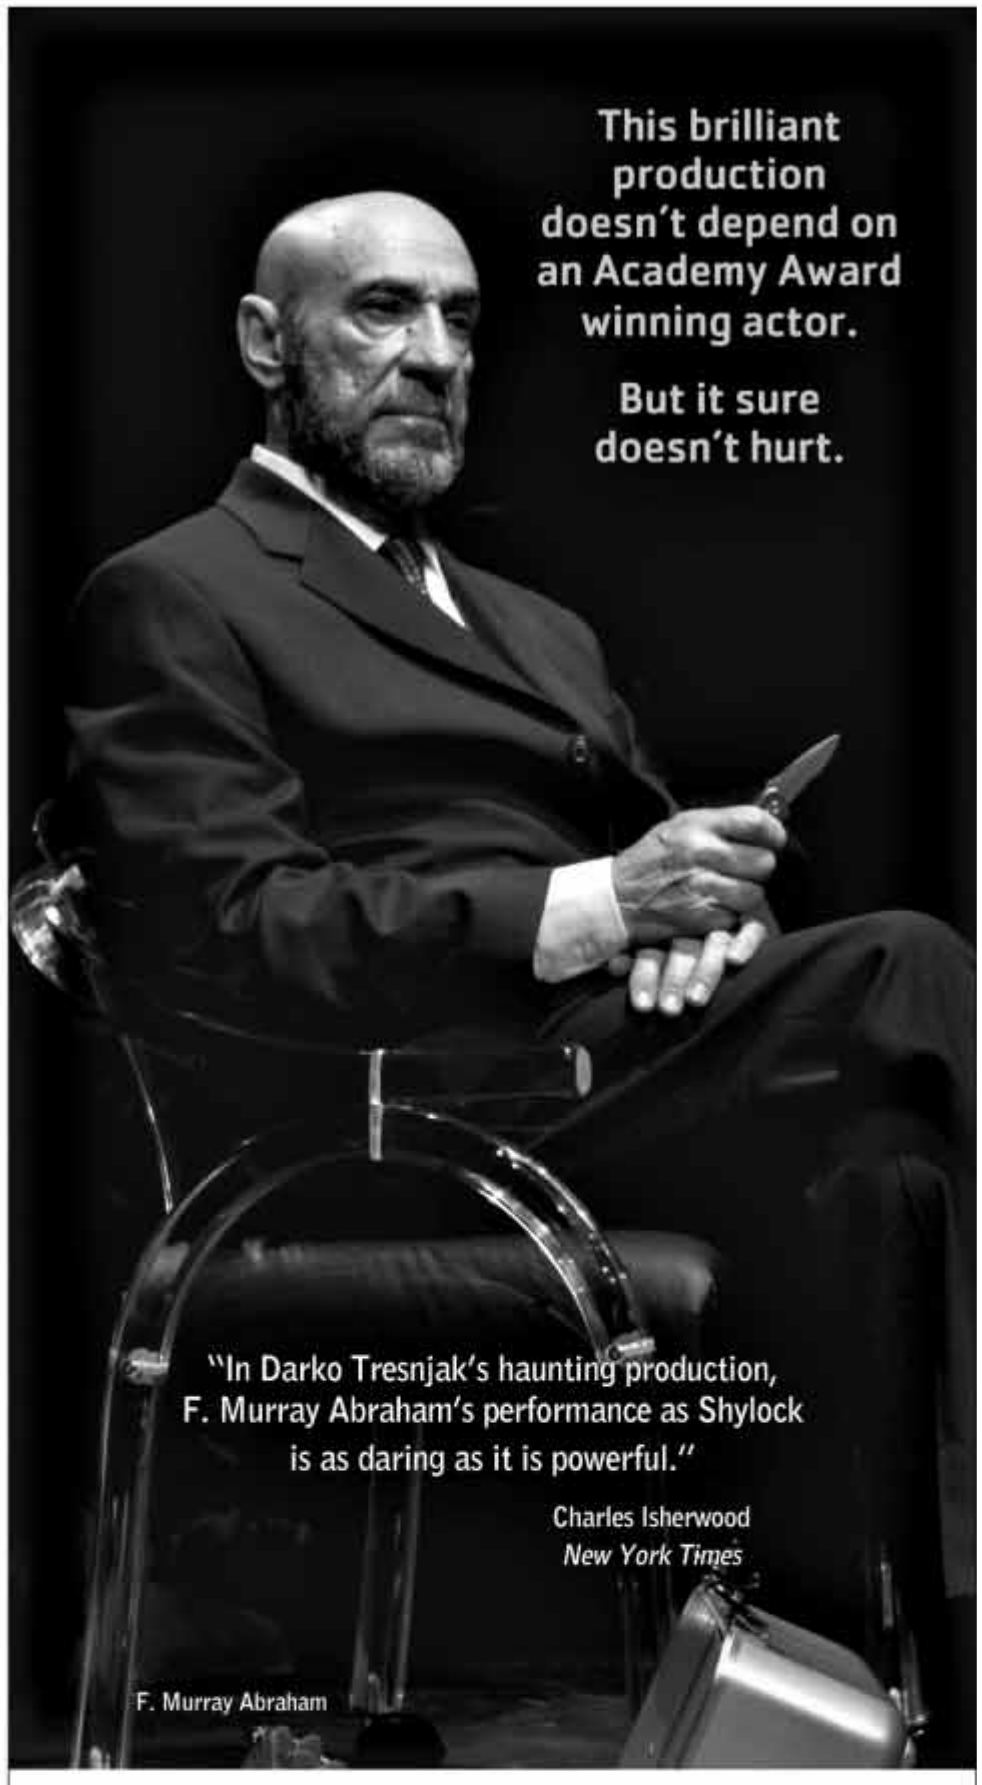

"The business community and parent community help us in a huge way," Jones said. "It lets the students grow, be entrepreneurial and develop their careers."

All that work translates into impressive resumes. Nearly two-thirds of the students enrolled in ROP go on to pursue a business degree when they get to college, Jones said.

Nathanson plans to. It's actually the biggest reason that his sandwich-slinging food truck might not make it off the ground, as college acceptances come out this week.

"We want to get the investing done as soon as parents give the OK and after I find out what colleges I get into," he explained. "It could kind of kill us."

Theatre for a New Audience Presents
F. Murray Abraham in THE MERCHANT OF VENICE
By William Shakespeare | Directed by Darko Tresnjak
APR 14-24, 2011

You might have seen Shakespeare's tragicomedy, The Merchant of Venice. But, trust us, you've never seen it like this. Not with Academy Award winner, F. Murray Abraham's nuanced unlocking of Shylock's humanity. Not with Director Darko Tresnjak's ingenious staging of a modern, digitized world. And certainly not the West Coast premiere of this highly acclaimed production in the enormously intimate 499-seat Broad Stage in Santa Monica. To see an astonishing Merchant of Venice, call or go online for tickets now.

deployed in support of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Why military women are more burdened by divorce is unclear, although societal pressure is likely a factor.

"It's a strange situation, where there's a fair amount of equality in terms of their military roles, but as the military increasingly treats women the same as it treats men in terms of their work expectations, however, society still expects them to fulfill their family roles. And that's not equally balanced between men and women," said David Segal, director of the Center for Research on Military Organization at the University of Maryland.

One speculation is that while more traditional men join the military, women who are attracted to military life are less conventional — and perhaps less willing to stay in a bad marriage.

About half of all married women in the military are married to a fellow service member, compared with less than 10 percent of military men. While it can be an advantage to be married to someone who understands military life, balancing two military careers poses challenges.

Former Army Sgt. Daniela Gibson, an Afghan war veteran, knows that first-hand. Gibson, 24, spent more than four years apart from her military husband and thousands of dollars on long-distance phone calls as they each did war deployments, training and moves. She said it's tough to not feel insecure about your own marriage as you watch others falling apart around you and see fellow service members cheating on their spouses, which she says is all too frequent during deployments.

"Even just rumors of cheating can really affect you," Gibson said.

Gibson left the military after she got pregnant. She's now raising their 1-year-old in Mannheim, Germany, while her husband continues his military career. Fortunately, she said, they were able to make their marriage work.

"It was really hard. . We've gone through a lot of difficult points in the relationship and sometimes we weren't even sure how it was going to end up. But at the end I think it made us closer because it kind of made us prove to ourselves how much we wanted it," Gibson said. "We weren't about to just give up."

Female service members married to civilians face their own challenges. The rate of divorce among military women is higher for those married to civilians, said Benjamin Karney, a psychology professor at UCLA who studied the issue for the Rand Corp. Research has found that the husbands of female service members were less likely to be employed than military wives.

"You've got to look at the realities of what military life is like on the family, and it really is kind of set up around a traditional married model of a husband and a wife that runs the house, if you will," said Kimberly Olson, a retired Air Force colonel who is executive director of Grace After Fire, a support organization for female veterans.

Olson said many female warriors don't get the support and space they need after war service to transition back to their roles as wives and mothers.

BOX OFFICE

Based on the book of the same title by Berkeley Breathed, "Mars Needs Moms!" had an estimated production budget of $150 million. Such a poor start means it's likely to be a significant loss for Disney, though that pain is somewhat alleviated by its surprise hit, "Gnomeo & Juliet." It has taken in $89 million in five weeks.

Overall, moviegoing business was still down from the corresponding weekend last year. Since November 2010, such down weekends have been the norm except for one up weekend. The box office for 2011 was 21.5 percent off last year's pace.

Hollywood.com analyst Paul Dergarabedian said the weekend business was "good news for aliens, bad news for the overall box office."

"It's a cyclical business, but this is a long downturn," said Dergarabedian. "The industry is holding its collective breath for summer to start."

With myriad blockbusters planned for both the summer and holiday seasons, Hollywood has reason to expect better business as the year continues.

BUDGET

tors of our environmental programs to propose concessions to weaken CEQA and other environmental protections during the budget process," wrote Warner Chabot, chief executive of the California League of Conservation Voters. "We urge you to insist that any proposals that reform regulations or undermine our cornerstone environmental protections be assigned to the appropriate policy or budget subcommittees for full and open discussion and action."

State Treasurer Bill Lockyer, a fellow Democrat, also criticized a recent state auditing agency report that proposed freezing pension benefits for current state workers, one of the reforms being sought by the five Senate Republicans. The Little Hoover Commission recommended a hybrid pension system that would include something similar to the 401(k) plans offered to most private-sector employees.

Lockyer said the commission's report ignored reforms adopted by the California Public Employees' Retirement System as part of the previous budget negotiated under former Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger, a Republican.

"The reforms increased all workers' contributions, and lowered benefits and raised retirement ages for new workers," the treasurer wrote. "Those reforms will save the state an estimated $10.7 billion to $13.5 billion through 2040, according to a CalPERS analysis."

On the other side, Republican senators who are talking with the governor were being pressured not to negotiate. The Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association, an anti-tax advocacy group, urged its supporters to contact the five senators to "hold the line against more taxes."

"This would be a disaster for taxpayers because Brown's government employee union allies are prepared to spend tens of millions of dollars on a campaign to fool voters into approving the largest tax increase in state history," the association wrote in an e-mail to supporters.

Meanwhile, Brown continues his coalition building. He announced on Friday conditional support from two dozen California agricultural groups, who indicated they would like to see a budget compromise. He added them to a growing list of groups that generally support his plan, including those representing businesses and law enforcement.

"This budget situation is such a wreck; no one can afford to sit on the sidelines," said Frank Rehermann of the California Rice Industry Association in a statement released by the governor's office.

LEGEND

- DRY -- each location is graded on an A – F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
- WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
- ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Tonight, a must appearance, Libra

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Your mind will be on a domestic or personal matter, no matter what. If you can get this situation handled, you will be happier and able to direct your energy positively. An overly serious attitude later today won't help. Tonight: Choose something relaxing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Keep a conversation flowing, even though it might not always be comfortable. A sense of warning could mark the moment. Remember, you are in control of your feelings, and your attitude can determine the end results. Tonight: Catch up on a friend's news.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Be aware of your budget and make good decisions. You might not know what is workable at first, so follow through on various ideas. A boss might be making a decision intuitively; therefore, for you, logic won't work here. Tonight: Head home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Speak your mind, knowing what will happen if you don't. Others will make assumptions that might not be right; therefore, it could be a problem. At least put in your two cents. Return calls promptly, as events and discussions color plans. Tonight: Chat away.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Kick back, especially if you are feeling less than upbeat. Perhaps enjoy some free time alone or working alone. Make time for a walk or yoga -- some centering activity. On the other hand, you are more sensitive and tuned in to others. Tonight: Take a deep breath.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Open up to possibilities by listening to others' suggestions. Meetings prove to be a fertile source of ideas. Brainstorm with others. Be careful about committing to spending or an investment. Wait. Be aware of what you have to offer. Tonight: Return calls.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Stay sensitive to what others offer, and be aware of the unusual factors that are playing into a decision. If a boss feels insecure, he or she could become difficult. If you need to take a stand, you may become more aware of issues around you. Tonight: A must appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Take an overview, and don't react to a situation, if possible. When you detach from the immediate, you will understand a child's or loved one's reaction. You'll know what to do as a result. Add a touch of ingenuity to the mix. Tonight: Let your mind wander.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Work with different people directly. This type of attention always gives a sense of importance to the other party. Notice how simple it is to give that feeling. A roommate or family member could be irritating. Smile and let it go. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Keep reaching out for someone you care about. You might be a bit put off by this person's attitude and actions. Let it go, especially if this person is a boss or another key figure. The right time will come. You will know when it arrives. Tonight: Visit with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Maintain a nice, level approach to a situation that could impact you. You might feel like taking more radical action. Don't -- time is your ally. Someone reveals his or her caring. Remain responsive and open; others might respond slowly, but they will respond. Tonight: Get as much rest as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Your creativity emerges when dealing with issues, friends, children or nearly anything. Just allow this energy to manifest. You have an unusual ability to bond high physical energy and dynamic creativity. Choose where you want to use it. Tonight: So what if it is Monday?

Happy birthday

Learn to communicate your bottom line and what you desire. You might not be comfortable with your options, but with willing associates and friends, you'll find the path. Often, you might need to assume a position of power, although you would prefer not to. Know that you will do well. If you are single, you will discover how easily you could tumble into a relationship. Make sure you really want what is being offered.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

ARITHMO™

CrossMath + × − ÷

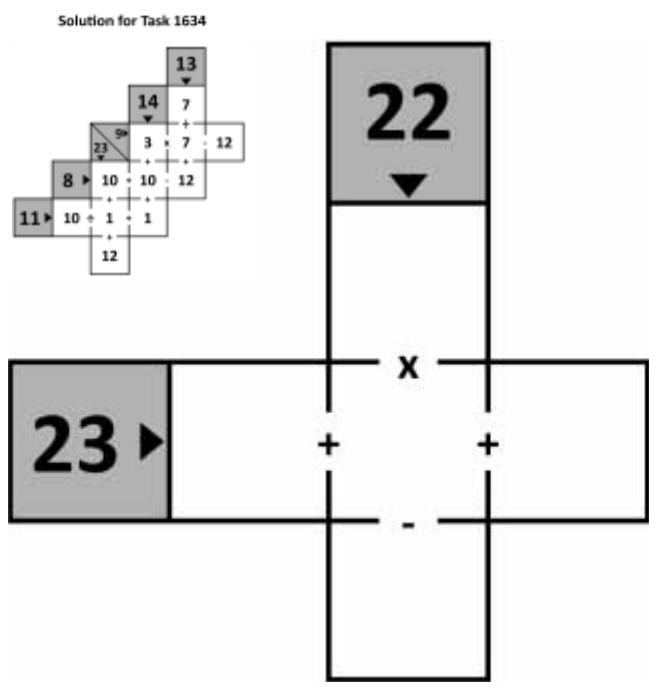

- Fill the grid with the set of given numbers (1 to 12) to satisfy the Equa demands (7 to 24) in the shaded boxes. The Equa demands represent the sum of the digits that you will insert into the empty squares.
- Each horizontal row has one Equa demand to satisfy; each vertical column also has one demand to satisfy. Each empty square in the grid dictates the math operation (addition +, subtraction -, multiplication X, and division ÷) that must be performed to meet the demands.
- You must follow the given math operations for each square and you must make sure all the numbers satisfy the demands in the shaded boxes when connected in adjacent threes and calculated together from left to right, and top to bottom.
- The numbers you insert into the grid must satisfy the Equa demands both horizontally and vertically.

For more games, go to www.arithmo.com

Fill in the empty fields with the given numbers so when calculated together they satisfy all Equas in the gray boxes:

Solution for Task 1634

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ New York University arts professor Wafaa Bilal had his camera surgically removed in February -- the one that was implanted in the back of his skull in November to record, at 60-second intervals, the places he had left behind (beamed to and archived by a museum in Qatar). The camera had been mounted under his skin, braced by three titanium posts, but his body very painfully rejected one of the posts, and his temporary solution is to merely tie the camera to the back of his neck (even though that work-around is unsatisfactory to him because it represents a less-personal "commitment" to the art). In the future, he said, communication devices like his will routinely be part of our bodies.

■ Till Krautkraemer's New York City beverage company MeatWater creates dozens of flavors of water for the upscale market of hearty gourmets who would like their daily salads, or shellfish, or goulash from a bottle instead of from a plate. Among his new flavors introduced in January, according to an AOL News report, were poached salmon salad water and a Caribbean shrimp salad water that can double as a vodka mixer. Old standbys include Peking duck water, tandoori chicken water, bangers 'n' mash water, and Krautkraemer's favorite, German sauerbraten water.

■ Sell What You Know: In December, a company in eastern Ukraine (a country known for hard drinking) announced a "drinking buddy" service in which, for the equivalent of about $18, it would supply a barroom companion for the evening, "qualified" to discuss politics, sports, women, etc., and even to offer psychological counseling if appropriate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1903 The Hay-Herran Treaty, granting the United States the right to build the Panama Canal, is ratified by the United States Senate. The Colombian Senate would later reject the treaty.

WORD UP!

aver \ uh-VUR \ , transitive verb;

1. To affirm with confidence; to declare in a positive manner, as in confidence of asserting the truth.
2. (Law) To assert, claim, or declare as a fact.
