Samohi grad running for Vermont lieutenant governor

Fundraiser for Kesha Ram slated for March 19 in Santa Monica

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

Long before Santa Monica native Kesha Ram started campaigning to be second in command in the state of Vermont, she ran for student council president at Roosevelt Elementary School.

It was a race against three boys, she remembered, and she won.

"It was a do-or-die moment," she said. "I took it quite seriously."

Ram took the position seriously too. She recalled writing speeches on index cards, speaking in front of the local Board of Education and launching the Teddy Tribune student newspaper on campus.

It was the first elected office in a political career that has blossomed since her primary education days. Ram, 29, is a candidate to be Vermont's next lieutenant governor.

Local supporters Paul Song and Lisa Ling are hosting a fundraiser for Ram in Santa Monica on March 19, less than six months before the Aug. 9 election. Expected attendees at the fundraiser include State Sen. Ben Allen (D-Santa Monica) and City Council members Kevin McKeown and Sue Himmelrich as well as U.S.-Japan Council president Irene Hirano Inouye.

POLITICS: Kesha Ram graduated from Santa Monica High School and has moved to Vermont where she is now running for lieutenant governor.

Ram, who has served in the Vermont Legislature for nearly eight years, said her experiences as a preschool teacher, social worker and government official have motivated her to try to help others.

"Whether it's for Vermonters or other Americans, it's hard to find a pathway into the middle class," she said. "Families struggle to afford child care and health care. We're struggling to retain and attract our next generation. ... I find myself looking at my peer group and colleagues and seeing the struggle to be able to give their children access to quality early education, the struggle to pay off student debt or pay off a loan. That's what I intend to focus on."

Growing up, Ram said, her mother gave

SMC stages "Once In A Lifetime" March 18-27

The Santa Monica College Theatre Arts Department is pleased to present "Once in a Lifetime" March 18-27 at the Theatre Arts Main Stage on the SMC main campus, 1900 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica.

"Once in a Lifetime" chronicles the misadventures of a vaudeville group that wants to cash in on the new talkies, and heads to Hollywood.

Written by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman - and the first of eight plays they collaborated on - "Once in a Lifetime" satirizes the film industry and its power over us. The play's story is as timely today as it was when originally written. The SMC production is directed by Janie Jones.

Show times are 8 p.m. on Friday, March 18 and March 25, and Saturday, March 19 and March 26. Matinees are at 2 p.m. on Sunday, March 20, and on Saturday, March 26, and Sunday, March 27. A preview is scheduled at 8 p.m. on Thursday, March 17.

Advance tickets range from $12 to $15 ($8 for preview), plus a service charge, and can be purchased by going to www.smc.edu/eventsinfo or by calling (310) 434-4319 or (310) 434-3005 Monday through Friday. Tickets are $3 higher at the door before performances. Parking is free on Friday evenings and weekends.

Gelson's Markets, one of California's premier supermarket chains, is excited to open its first store in Santa Monica, located at 2627 Lincoln Boulevard, just south of Ocean Park Boulevard, on Thursday, March 17.

The highly anticipated opening will commence with a ribbon cutting at 9:00 a.m. Gelson's will thank its first 200 customers with a special gift bag valued at $20. In addition, all customers will have the opportunity to sample featured merchandise and dishes throughout opening week.

"With its proximity to a variety of diverse neighborhoods, its iconic beach culture and residents' appreciation for the great food of the Southern California lifestyle, Santa Monica is an ideal community to open a Gelson's store," said Rob McDougall, Gelson's president and CEO. "We are thrilled to launch our first store in Santa Monica - our 22nd store overall - and we know the local community will appreciate the premium-quality merchandise and exceptional customer service that has become the hallmark of Gelson's."

The Gelson's Santa Monica store features an emphasis on fresh, great-tasting food across a broad spectrum, including grass-fed beef, organic and non-GMO items, and vegan, vegetarian and raw food options. The full-service deli will offer signature creations from Executive Chef Peter Fiore along with healthful and delicious salads from Gelson's registered dietitian, for the benefit of Santa Monica residents, employees and visitors alike. With a mission to customize each store for its neighborhood, Gelson's Santa Monica will include a carving station (selected hours), gourmet cheese section, olive cart, soup and salad bar, hot food bar, fresh sushi and poke bar, kosher foods and bakery, along with a coffee bar, dining area, floral department, custom and ready-made gift baskets, and free gift wrapping.

The supermarket chain, long revered by chefs, celebrities, and foodies in Southern California, purchased eight Southern California locations from Haggen after the chain filed for bankruptcy in late 2015. Reopening quickly with some essential improvements was a priority in order to re-employ existing Haggen associates, some of whom have worked at the location for many years under previous ownership. A more extensive remodeling of the Santa Monica store is slated for later in 2016.

City-planned festivities for Expo a waste of money

APPARENTLY, CITY HALL STAFF IS WORRIED that many will not be aware of Metro's Expo light rail service when it begins operation to Santa Monica, May 20. That's as if you won't be aware of a 270 foot long, 100 ton train when it passes down Colorado Avenue 24 times an hour during peak periods creating traffic gridlock.

You can bet that staff's motivations aren't just to build awareness of Expo but to also hype us on abandoning our personal cars and riding the commuter rails, instead. Staff proposed hiring a public relations/marketing firm (or "consultant" as the bureaucrats call it) for a maximum of $750,000 over two years to accomplish this task.

Having never seen a buck it wouldn't spend, City Council approved a contract for PR services a few weeks ago. The deal is to "execute a professional service agreement with GOOD Worldwide Inc., in an amount not to exceed $500,000 for one year, with one-additional one-year renewal option in the amount of $250,000… for a total amount not to exceed $750,000 over a two-year period..." Future year funding is contingent on council budget approval.

Some of you are ahead of me, here. "Well, Mr. Bauer, why is the City hiring yet another marketing consultant when City Manager Rick Cole just established a whole new City Hall Department of Communications. Do we really need another consultant to set marketing and promotional goals for the City and work closely with Downtown stakeholders and business interests to insure constant, positive and consistent messaging?"

Yes, Virginia, we do. There are over 1,926 fulltime and 490 part time highly paid city employees, on the municipal payroll according to Cita-Data.com. Each full time employee serves about 48 residents - one of the highest employee-to-resident ratios of any municipality in the country.

And, that doesn't include a whole raft of outside consultants and advisors also under contract to the city. The annual cost to taxpayers is close to $200 million smackers - not counting pensions, insurance and other benefits.

I was hoping that when Cole was hired he'd put our bloated City government on a diet. Instead, he established a new communications division with a half dozen more employees and a million dollar annual budget.

Staff's report to council does note that, "the Office of Communications, with the assistance of a (newly-retained) marketing consultant, is developing marketing, outreach, and educational strategies for an overarching campaign focusing on the issue of mobility in Santa Monica…"

Promotional support would specifically address commuters and riders, arrival and departure circulation, first and last mile connections, maintenance, public safety and launch and opening events. Launch and opening events? Funny that should come up.

David Martin, director of Planning and Community Development, Karen Ginsberg, director of Community and Cultural Services and Beth Rolandson AICP of Principal Transportation Planner are "planning a series of community-oriented events to help welcome Expo to the City." There you go, folks. Three, top staff members are really in the party-planning business. No wonder traffic is so screwed up.

Their "Welcome to Expo" event memo advises City Council that, "In addition to supporting Metro's ribbon cutting ceremony by hosting activities at each of the new Santa Monica stations on opening day, (May 20) the City of Santa Monica is also planning a series of community-oriented events to help welcome Expo to the City."

The City will also introduce a collection of commemorative Transit Access Pass (TAP) cards featuring local artists and host its own open streets celebration to mark Expo's arrival. Of course, vehicular traffic will be restricted on sections of Wilshire Boulevard, Ocean Avenue, Colorado Avenue and Main Street "for walking and cycling" on Saturday, June 4 for an "Open Streets event" because they just can't help inconveniencing most of us.

Say "goodbye" to this year's Santa Monica Festival. Its resources and funding could be diverted to Expo-related activities.

"The event will focus on sustainable mobility, celebrate the arrival of Expo, capitalize on the completion of the Colorado Esplanade, while weaving art, culture and environmental learning opportunities throughout, similar to the Santa Monica Festival." It just all sounds so "Santa Monica-like," doesn't it?

"The Open Streets event will serve as the City's signature event this year with an even larger footprint than the traditional Santa Monica Festival… Members of the entire community with opportunities to experience the streets in a different and exciting way," promises their memo. We'll see.

Metro's Open Streets Grant Program provided a $200,000 grant - a $50,000 in-lieu local match was previously approved by council - for the "one-day open streets event that will allow pedestrian and bicycle access to streets free of automobiles with activity hubs along the route."

Staff from nearly all City departments will participate. The Ocean Park Association, Downtown Neighborhood Association, Downtown Santa Monica Inc., the Main Street Merchants Association, Santa Monica Travel and Tourism, the Chamber of Commerce, the Santa Monica Pier and Santa Monica Place will work together to ensure favorable and mutually beneficial outcomes from the event.

Final plans and a request for yet another outside supplier - a production contract for the open streets event - will be made at the March 22, council meeting.

Ohhh! I'm so excited! Not with the Expo activities, but with all the time and money that's being hosed away in the name of propaganda and agenda.

Where is home rooftop solar a good option?

Dear EarthTalk:

Is it true that home rooftop solar only makes sense in certain parts of the U.S. with proper incentives as opposed to where the sun shines the most?

Esther Knox
Wilton, NH

THE SHORT ANSWER IS YES: IN THE United States, whether or not it is easy and economical to go solar depends more on state politics than prevailing weather trends. In those states with ample sunshine and the legislative initiative to get solar panels on residential roofs, there has never been a better-or cheaper-time to put photovoltaic panels to use.

According to Solar Power Rocks, a website that helps homeowners understand the rules, incentives and investment returns on local solar panel installations, the top three states where switching over to solar power makes the most economic sense are in the Northeast (New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut). Maryland, Connecticut, Oregon, Minnesota, New Mexico, Vermont and Colorado round out the top ten.

What makes these states particularly prime for rooftop solar is their willingness to allow homeowners to lease photovoltaic equipment from third-party owners (like Sun Edison, Solar City, SunRun, etc.) and legislature-backed incentives to help keep costs down overall. Going solar in one of these states might end up being cheaper than remaining on the grid.

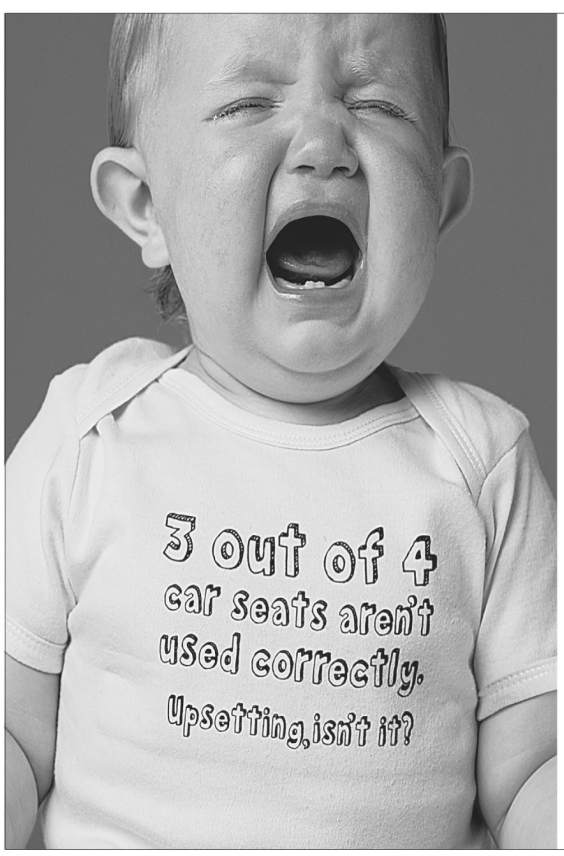

Surprisingly, a few states in the South (Florida, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Kentucky), where solar panels would seem like a no-brainer, continue to resist this change for the better, in large part due to entrenched utility lobbies intent on maintaining their fossil-fuel-based lock on the status quo. According to a recent Rolling Stone article by Tim Dickinson, the recent ascent of solar power in the U.S. poses a grave threat to the business interests of big fossil fuel industry investors. Dickinson details how these entrenched interests are "mounting a fierce, rear-guard resistance at the state level-pushing rate hikes and punishing fees for homeowners who turn to solar power." He adds that their efforts have "darkened green-energy prospects in could-be solar superpowers" like Arizona and Nevada. "But nowhere has the solar industry been more eclipsed than in Florida, where the utilities' powers of obstruction are unrivaled."

"The solar industry in Florida has been boxed out by investor-owned utilities (IOUs) that reap massive profits from natural gas and coal," reports Dickinson. "These IOUs wield outsize political power in the state capital of Tallahassee, and flex it to protect their absolute monopoly on electricity sales."

While Florida might be a laggard on rooftop solar for now, that could all change if some residents are successful in their drive for an amendment to the state constitution to allow for third-party solar ownership (which would enable solar leasing). Of course, the state's utilities have challenged the amendment by creating their own, designed to confuse voters into keeping solar panels off their rooftops.

For more information on where your state stands in terms on rooftop solar, check out Solar Power Rocks 2016 U.S. Solar Power Rankings. Also, visit the website of the Database of State Incentives for Renewables & Efficiency (DSIRE) for a full run-down of state-by-state, federal and other incentives for installing solar panels and other forms of renewable energy equipment.

her biographies about women and people of color who changed the world.

A 2004 graduate of Santa Monica High School, Ram initially thought she would effect change through activism. She started a recycling program at Samohi, interned with the Coalition for Clean Air and supported hotel workers alongside civil rights leader Dolores Huerta.

But she started to view elected office as a channel for activism.

"What it means to be involved in politics is to protest and use my voice," she said. "I had this strong sense that people had fought and died and lost opportunities for me to have the right to vote and participate in the democratic process. So I want use my voice to make others voices' heard as well."

While attending the University of Vermont, Ram fell in love with the Green Mountain State. She also met a member of Sen. Bernie Sanders' campaign staff and was asked to introduce him at a campus event.

"Bernie gave me my first big break," Ram said, adding that she voted for Sanders in his state's Democratic presidential primary earlier this month. "I owe him quite a bit for that."

Ram, who ran for a seat in her state's House of Representatives when she was 21, said she feels her relative youth in U.S. government is an asset.

"One of the reasons I'm running is because I have the energy to be a connector-in-chief, to help Vermonters come together to rise to the challenges," she said. "I still feel energized at the end of the day."

between Monday and Thursday.

The Monday Landmark's Commission meeting (7 p.m. at City Hall, 1685 Main St.) will include the first hearing of the week related to the old post office on 5th Street and the installation of a fence surrounding the property.

"The proposed color for the perimeter fence will complement the proposed color of the landmark former U.S. Post Office building. The color choice for the five foot high maximum security fence will not detrimentally change, destroy or adversely affect any exterior feature of the landmark Post Office building. All work will be completed in a manner that is consistent with the Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation," said their report.

The Commission will review demolition permits and consider filing applications for structure of merit or landmark status for 15 properties. All are residential in nature and two are currently identified on the Historic Resources Inventory.

One commercial property at 3355 Barnard Way will be considered for landmark status and the Commission has 13 items for discussion ranging from interaction with other government agencies to administrative updates to miscellaneous outreach topics.

The Santa Monica Airport Commission will hold a special meeting on Tuesday, March 15 (7:30 p.m. at City Hall, 1685 Main St.). Agenda items include a report on airport leasing policy, a report on noise management and a discussion of internal commission rules.

Airport leases have been controversial since the City forced all aviation related businesses into month-to-month leases. The recent departure of a master tenant has increased interest in the topic with questions about the fate of several sub-tenants.

The Commission for the Senior Community will meet March 16 at 1:30 p.m. in the Ken Edwards Center (1527 4th St.). The meeting will include a presentation on the Local Coastal Plan, discussion of the boards videos and budget, possible proclamation for the Older American's Act and various reports from other commissions.

Planning Commission will also meet Wednesday. The meeting, held at City Hall, 1685 Main St. at 7 p.m., will have the week's second discussion of the old post office location.

According to the staff report, an application has been filed to "adaptively reuse and expand the former U.S. Post Office building at 1248 5th Street to add 14,490 square feet of new creative office space within a 32 feet tall, three-story building. The project would include construction of a proposed addition to the rear exterior of the building along 4th Court while preserving and rehabilitating its historic character-defining features in a manner consistent with the Secretary of the Interior standards."

Staff is recommending approval of the project.

Planning Commission's agenda also includes clerical changes to the Zoning Code (such as spelling mistakes and formatting changes). A discussion is scheduled for the meeting to identify policy issues that have arisen since adoption of the Zoning Code.

Housing Commission is the first of Thursday's meetings. It will be held at the Main Library (601 Santa Monica Blvd.) in the Community Meeting Room (2nd Floor) at 4:30 p.m. On their agenda is a discussion of transitioning Mountain View Mobile Hope Park to private ownership while preserving the property as affordable housing, discussion of the Commission's retreat, a review of the Downtown Community Plan, election of a new chairperson and several informational reports.

The final meeting of the week is scheduled to be Recreation and Parks. The Commission meets on the third Tuesday of each month at City Hall (1685 Main St.) at 7:30 p.m. The March 17 meeting is listed on the City's calendar of eventsm, however no agenda has been posted for the meeting as of press time.

the City of Santa Monica and the Federal Aviation Administration made opening arguments before a three-judge panel in a dispute over control of the property.

The City, which is attempting to establish its right to the land, is appealing a recent U.S. District Court dismissal of its case against the FAA.

Deanne Maynard, an attorney representing the City, asserted that Santa Monica's claim under the Quiet Title Act is valid and that the federal government does not have the authority to take over the property if the City ceases airport operations there.

"The U.S. wants to have its cake and eat it too," said Maynard, a partner with the firm Morrison & Foerster LLP, who was previously an assistant to the U.S. Solicitor General at the Department of Justice. "The City wants the power to decide what to do, in the best interests of its citizens, with its land."

Maynard added that the title to the property cannot revert to the federal government because the federal government never owned the land in the first place.

"You can only get back what you started with," she said.

Arguing on behalf of the FAA, Alisa Klein said the district court was correct in its dismissal of the City's case. She argued that there are restrictions on the City's claim to the property and that the statute of limitations has passed. She added that the City should have known about the federal government's interest in the land well before its 2008 assertion.

"There is a cloud on this title," she said.

Judge Harry Pregerson pressed Klein on the applicability of the so-called reverter clause as it relates to a 1948 agreement in which the U.S. surrendered its airport land interests to the City.

"Whoever wrote it didn't know what they were saying," he said. "They were stupid."

Pregerson, 92, even made an airplane-themed joke about Klein's diminutive stature as she approached the podium to outline the FAA's arguments.

"You're flying low to the ground," he said.

When asked by Judge Richard Paez about the FAA's interests in the airport, Klein said SMO serves as a reliever airport for congestion at nearby Los Angeles International Airport.

Judge Jacqueline Nguyen asked Klein why the federal government believes it has authority over what Santa Monica does with the property if it doesn't own the land.

"If the parties are fighting over the terms of the merits," the judge said, "then the court needs to figure out what the merits are."

In October 2013, the City of Santa Monica sued the FAA regarding the title to the airport property, disputing the claim that it must operate the airport in perpetuity.

In early 2014, when the FAA filed a motion to dismiss the case, the City argued against the idea that the U.S. could claim the title to the land if Santa Monica stopped operating the airport.

The FAA's motion to dismiss was granted by the U.S. District Court's Central District of California, which concluded that "the City knew, or should have known, that the United States claimed an interest in the Airport Property as early as 1948."

The City appealed the ruling in October 2014, saying that its claim under the Quiet Title Act remained justified. The FAA contended that the statute of limitations had passed.

The 1984 settlement agreement between Santa Monica and the U.S. expired July 1.

An appeals court hearing was announced in late December, a month after the City hired Nelson Hernandez as an airport affairs advisor to City Manager Rick Cole.

"The future of Santa Monica Airport is at critical juncture and securing local control is one of the City's top priorities," Cole has said.

California lawmakers benefit from public records carve-outs

JONATHAN J. COOPER
Associated Press

Californians are entitled to view a wide variety of emails, memos and other records created by their state and local governments. Ask to see who your state lawmaker is emailing, however, and they'll get a two-page canned response that says, in essence, "no way."

Access to public records is considered paramount to maintaining trust in government holding politicians accountable. But California lawmakers wrote themselves out of the 1968 Public Records Act that requires other government officials to release their records when the public asks.

Lawmakers instead apply their own, less transparent law.

The issue has come into focus repeatedly since the Legislative Open Records Act was signed in 1975, but little has changed.

Government transparency laws like those allowing public access to records allow citizens to keep an eye on their government, ensuring politicians are keeping their promises, and deter corruption, said Jessica Levinson, a professor at Loyola Law School who serves as president of the Los Angeles Ethics Commission.

"When people know that they're going to have to tell the public what they're doing, or how they're getting and spending money, or how they're spending their time, then they may think twice before engaging in questionable behavior," Levinson said.

Legislators have long defended their carve-outs as necessary protections for constituents and for maintaining a forum for frank debate in the Legislature.

The Associated Press requested a week's worth of calendar entries and emails for the four top lawmakers in every state and most governors.

In California, officials in Gov. Jerry Brown's office said they release the governor's calendar monthly and declined to provide earlier access to a week of appointments. Brown did not use his official email account during the week requested by the AP, spokesman Evan Westrup said.

The Assembly and Senate Rules committees declined requests for emails and calendars for the top legislative leaders, citing a number of exemptions including privacy and legislative privilege.

California's legislative branch is bound by a less transparent public records law than the Public Records Act, which applies to other government agencies, including the executive branch and local governments.

The Legislative Open Records Act, signed in 1975, exempts from public disclosure all "correspondence of and to individual members of the Legislature and their staff" as well as any communications between private citizens and the Legislature.

In denying the AP's requests, the Rules committees also cited a 1991 California Supreme Court decision that said Gov. George Deukmejian was not required to disclose his calendar. Yet, Brown and his predecessor, as well as other statewide elected officials, regularly release their schedules upon request.

In 2011, three lawmakers told the AP and San Jose Mercury News they would be willing to release their personal meeting calendars, but were prohibited from doing so by the rules committees that control legislative documents. The rule appeared to be extremely rare among state legislatures.

That same year, then-Assembly Speaker John Perez said he'd create a task force to study open-records issues following an uproar over the Assembly's refusal to release lawmakers' office spending records during a feud with another Democratic lawmaker.

The task force does not appear to have ever met, and Perez referred questions about it to the Assembly Rules Committee. Chief Administrator Debra Gravert said she was hired three years later but would research the issue.

"We already did more disclosure than was required by law, and more disclosure than the Senate did," Perez said.

California gets fourth day of rain, snow

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A storm brought strong winds, periods of heavy rain, snow and high surf to California on Sunday, the fourth day of wet weather that has prompted road and school closures and left an officer injured.

Dry conditions and warmer weather are forecast for Monday.

A California Highway Patrol officer was in serious but stable condition Sunday after being struck by an out-of-control vehicle as he provided traffic control in snowy conditions on a mountain pass, the CHP Truckee office said.

The accident Saturday led authorities to temporarily close a portion of Interstate 80 near Donner Summit, a treacherous road in the Sierra Nevada in the northeastern part of the state that has been battered by a series of winter storms. The weather was bad enough that the officer had to be taken to the hospital by ambulance instead of by helicopter, CHP Lt. Sven Miller told the Sacramento Bee.

More than 1 foot of snow fell in the area overnight and up to 3 feet were expected in the higher elevations of the Sierra Nevada through Monday, the National Weather Service reported.

In counties north of San Francisco, rivers swelled and the flood risk was high. About 8 _ inches of rain fell during a 72-hour period in the unincorporated town of Venado in Sonoma County.

Water from the rain-swollen Sacramento River was spilling Sunday over a 33.5-foot-high concrete wall and into a bypass built to divert flood water.

The overflow is expected to reach a depth of 3 feet Tuesday then start receding, said Robert Hartman, a hydrologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

It's the first time water that has spilled over the so-called Fremont Weir crest and into the Yolo bypass since 2012. The nearly 2-mile-long concrete wall is located about 8 miles northeast of Woodland.

The bypass is an expanse of farmland and natural habitat that stretches from Sacramento to Davis and was created a century ago.

A portion of California Highway 1 in Mendocino County was closed where slides nearly toppled a California Department of Transportation dump truck with an employee inside.

The truck hit a guardrail - stopping its fall - and landed at a 45-degree angle. No one was injured.

In the East Bay, a landslide near the Moraga Country Club prompted at least two homeowners to evacuate from their hillside homes. Tim Alford told the Contra Costa Times he noticed cracks at the foot of his home on Tuesday, and two days later his decks had collapsed.

He and another neighbor, Darlene Martel, hired a geologist.

"He came and told me: 'I would not sleep here,'" Martel said.

Powerful rains also slammed the central part of the state, flooding streets in Fresno and briefly shutting down the airport there.

The storm dumping rain in much of Northern California is expected to weaken as it moves south, though the southern part of the state could see scattered showers or drizzle, and beachgoers were warned of powerful surf along the Central and Southern California coast.

Waves up to 8 feet could pound beaches for most of the day Sunday, the National Weather Service said.

A high surf advisory is in effect in Santa Barbara, Ventura and Los Angeles counties.

Meanwhile a wind advisory has been issued for some coastal areas and in the mountains and high deserts.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MARCH 2 AT APPROXIMATELY 11:30AM

A Santa Monica police officer assigned to the HLP Team was patrolling the embankment at the 1000 block of the I-10 freeway and saw two homeless men in a makeshift camp site. The officer issued a citation to one of the men, but the other one said he had no identification. The man also gave the officer a false name and birthdate. When the officer was able to finally get the man's true identity, a search of his criminal record showed he had a "No Bail" warrant for his arrest. The man was then taken into custody and booked at the Santa Monica jail.
The suspect was identified as Jefferey Roddenberry, 57, homeless, and was charged with false identification and flash incarceration. No bail was set.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

TODAY IN HISTORY

1903 – The Pelican Island National Wildlife Refuge is established by US President Theodore Roosevelt.

1910 – Lakeview Gusher, the largest U.S. oil well gusher near Bakersfield, California, vents to atmosphere.

1915 – World War I: Cornered off the coast of Chile by the Royal Navy after fleeing the Battle of the Falkland Islands, the German light cruiser SMS Dresden is abandoned and scuttled by her crew.

1926 – El Virilla train accident, Costa Rica: A train falls off a bridge over the Río Virilla between Heredia and Tibás. 248 are killed and 93 wounded.

1931 – Alam Ara, India's first talking film, is released.

1936 – The first all-sound film version of Show Boat opens at Radio City Music Hall. (There had been a part-talkie, part-silent version of Show Boat in 1929.)

1939 – Slovakia declares independence under German pressure.

1942 – Orvan Hess and John Bumstead became the first in the United States successfully to treat a patient, Anne Miller, using penicillin.

1943 – World War II: The Kraków Ghetto is "liquidated".

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■Seattle's ambitious Office of Arts & Culture has allocated $10,000 this year to pay a poet or writer to create a work while present on the city's Fremont Bridge drawbridge. The office's deputy director told the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in January that the city wants to encourage "public art" and that the grant will oblige the recipient to create a work of prose or poetry from the bridge's northwest tower, to help the people of Seattle understand the function of art in the city. (The artist will not be "in residence," for the tower has no running water.)

■The dominant-submissive lifestyle soared to higher-brow status in February when The New York Times reported on the recent marriage of the celebrated composer of "moody, queasy" works (and compulsive dominant) Georg Friedrich Haas to Mollena Williams, who blogs introspectively about her own kinky bondage as "The Perverted Negress." Friedrich had introduced himself to her on a dating site with the note, "I would like to tame you," and credits her acceptance for his improved productivity – because, he said, "I am not (any longer) disturbed by unfulfilled thoughts." Although Williams-Haas is a black woman submitting to a white man, she explained that, "To say I can't play my personal psychodrama out just because I'm black, that's racist."

Let it go, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You will encounter your share of controversy early in the day. You might feel as if you are misunderstood and overly tired. Keep trying to keep the peace rather than have a disagreement emerge. Later in the day, you still won't be able to clear the air. Tonight: Let it go.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You might be more aware of the repercussions of heading in a certain direction. If there is a risk involved, you would be well-advised to back off. It probably won't work out as you would like it to. Tonight: Saying "no" to others right now is akin to saying "yes" to more freedom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ Beam in more of what you want. You could be in the middle of controversy and be able to seize the moment. You'll hit a home run while everyone else is creating uproar. No one will be upset by your unexpected success. Time will be on your side. Tonight: You call the shots.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You might sense a lot of activity going on around you, though your imagination could be attaching the wrong meaning to what is happening. Let go, and try not to be so concerned. Listen carefully in conversations, and note what isn't being said. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You will land where you want to, but you'll have to jump through several hoops to get there. Your ideas could fall flat at first. Confusion surrounds communication as well. Once you understand what is happening, you should be able to clear the air. Tonight: All smiles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You are optimistic when no one else is. Others seem to be dealing with other matters instead of coming up with a solid response to a situation. A personal matter could cause you some dismay. You'll have a better way to handle a problem. Tonight: In the limelight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You will be much happier if you take an overview or quickly adopt a philosophical point of view. Otherwise, you might be upset by what happens. An effort to communicate might be thwarted. Let go, and allow others to come to you. Tonight: Make an important call.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ One-on-one relating usually solves most of your hassles. Unfortunately, a friend can't seem to hear what you're trying to say. Confusion surrounds you even more than you realize. Do not get discouraged; there will be an amenable solution soon enough. Tonight: Make nice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might feel that someone is making uncomfortable assumptions. Understand that a solution is right around the corner. What is going on with this person is simply representative of a changing mood. Avoid becoming unusually stern. Tonight: The only answer is "yes."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Focus on one task at a time, and you will be less likely to encounter a problem. Even if you do, try not to take it personally. It probably has much more to do with the moment and with others' moods than with you. Detach, and you will feel a lot better. Tonight: Put your feet up and relax.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your playfulness easily could be taken as something else. Maintain a sense of humor, and know that misunderstandings are the likely source of irritation. You might be experiencing a tense moment, as others seem to be doing what they shouldn't be. Tonight: Playful, aren't we?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ You might have the best intentions to let go of a problem, yet you can't. A personal matter could be a source of tension. Lighten up and understand that this, too, will pass. You also might need to walk on eggshells around a boss. Tonight: Be happy that the day has ended.

Monday, March 14, 2016

This year you open up to many new possibilities on the homefront. You instinctively might cling to what you have known, yet a partner or dear friend offers you so much more. The change might require a huge leap of faith, but you can do it if you so choose. If you are single, a serious bond could become more of a complication than a pleasure. Know that you are with the wrong person if this is the case. If you are attached, you might see that your significant other wants to make some lifestyle changes. Your adaptability will be tested. GEMINI can be very superficial.
