Honoring women who shape Santa Monica

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITYWIDE The four women come from different backgrounds and work in a variety of fields, but they are united by one goal: improving the local community.

These active citizens — Julia Miele, Rochelle Fanali, Julie Rusk and Sandy Jacobson — will be recognized at 7 p.m. March 26 during the eighth-annual celebration of "Women Who Shape Santa Monica," an event hosted by the League of Women Voters of Santa Monica.

The event aims to build on the legacy of the league, which was founded in 1920 to educate newly enfranchised female voters. And the Santa Monica chapter, which was established in 1934, lives on through a new generation of activists.

"It's always a privilege to shine light on the accomplishments of these special women who've given so much to our city," chapter president Ann Williams said in a release. "Their lifework expands upon the progress of the pioneering suffragists who gave American women the right to vote and founded our organization."

Three of the honorees were chosen by board members for their contributions in the fields of nonprofit work, education and government. A fourth award is reserved for an active member.

The ceremony will be held at Ocean House, 2107 Ocean Ave., between Pacific Street and Bicknell Avenue. For more information, visit www.lwvsantamonica.org, call (310) 692-1494 or email league@lwvsantamonica.org.

JULIA MIELE

As a parent in the Santa Monica-Malibu school district, Julia Miele has spent ample time volunteering, fundraising and supporting education. But having a daughter also inspires Miele to focus on improving the community for future generations.

In her role as the executive director of the local YWCA since 2008, Miele has worked to empower women and girls through a wide array of programming.

"I'm delighted to receive this honor, as it calls attention to the important work women are doing to help our community thrive," she said. "In my

Council wrap: Taxi talk continues but still no Planning Commissioner

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL City Council approved a slew of small measures, discussed the future of taxis in Santa Monica and didn't pick a new Planning Commissioner at its meeting Tuesday night.

Taxis were the topic of the night: Rides were down 27 percent last year and a franchise, which allows five companies to operate in the city, expires at the end of this year.

Four of the five companies wrote to council suggesting that they extend the franchise but one company, the largest, wants council to cut it down to two companies in order to decrease supply and meet the shrinking demand.

Councilmember Gleam Davis listed a bunch of advantages taxis have over ride-hailing apps like Uber and Lyft that she'd like to see continued or accentuated.

"I care less about what we do and more about what our goals are," she told council.

Davis expressed support for the relationships cabbies develop with residents, particularly seniors, and the fact that they are regulated to drive environmentally sustainable vehicles.

"One of the reasons for getting all the excess cabs off the street is to make sure that drivers that were franchised could make a living," she said. "That remains a very important criteria for me."

Councilmember Ted Winterer agreed with recommendations to adjust the number of cabs authorized to drive in the city. He also suggested a system that would allow more drivers on the street during the hours where demand is highest.

Councilmember Sue Himmelrich said she supports allowing taxi drivers more flexible pricing than previously offered "as long as it's not surge pricing."

She, too, expressed an interest in reducing the total number of cabs.

went to college and finished med school. The truth is, what I really wanted to do is be a teacher. I found that medicine was a way I could incorporate two of my greatest loves: teaching and science. I went into the real world and opened my own practice. Then I got married and I married a serial entrepreneur, and that's where it hit me that I have more in common with this guy than I realized and it's amazing what he does - this business of starting companies and, in his own way, changing the world. It occurred to me, "Why am I not doing this?" This is perfect. It was the things that surrounded me that turned me into an entrepreneur.

EH: Tell me about Heal.

RD: Heal is a novel approach to having a primary-care doctor. It's on-demand health care. So, if you're in Santa Monica and need to see a doctor, you request one on the app and you'll have a doctor at your house within the hour. That doctor's capacity is pretty vast. Can do a physical exam, will come equipped with electronic medical records, a whole bag of goodies to properly examine you. The doctor also brings a medical assistant who takes your vitals and acts as a scribe. We can order labs, prescriptions, etc. A normal doctor's office will take maybe 10 minutes; an appointment with us will be about 40. So, when they leave, you should feel some peace of mind and should already be feeling better because you know your problem has been handled by a pretty impressive group of doctors that we're lucky to be working with. We're hoping to work with insurance companies in the future, but in the meantime we will give you a receipt which you can give to your insurance company and they can process your claim if they cover it.

EH: How are you changing the world?

RD: This is how you're going to see your doctor. You're not going to leave the house. You're not going to have to pack your medicines, pay for parking, pack your screaming kids up in the car. We're going to come to you. We're going to take care of your whole family and bring everything you need, and be able to follow up in two days to make sure you're doing OK.

EH: Why Santa Monica?

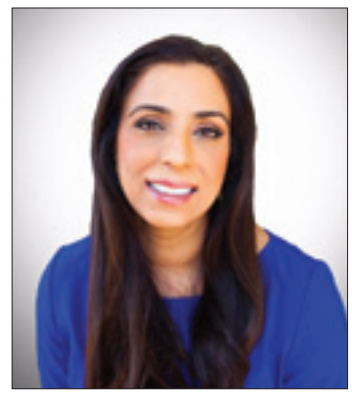

RD: We're residents of the area. This is our home. It's a place that's near and dear to us. We know there are populations of families and young adults who could really benefit from this. The startup community is where we find so much energy from people. We haven't done that much to gain press, but the amount of press we've gathered is unbelievable. I feel confident that it's because we're surrounded by young, passionate people like us.

EH: Do you have one piece of advice for entrepreneurs starting their own businesses?

RD: The first piece of advice that I would give is that there's no stupid idea. Number two, get a great team. The luckiest thing that happened to me is that I'm surrounded by a great team. I couldn't ask for a more supportive, driven team.

EH: Is there anything you'd like to share with the Santa Monica community?

RD: You should use Heal. We'll make you better at home. If you don't have an iPhone to download the app, you can reach us at 1-844-644-HEAL or find us at www.getheal.com.

Limit dispensaries

Dear Santa Monica City Council:

I am writing to you in regards to your upcoming decision on whether or not to allow Medical Marijuana dispensaries to be established in our City. The proposed location for these Medical Marijuana dispensaries is Wilshire Blvd. and Santa Monica Blvd. between Lincoln and Centinela. This geographic area is walking distance to our schools: the Lighthouse Elementary School (close to 20th St. and Wilshire Blvd.), the Lighthouse Christian Academy (close to Yale St. and Santa Monica Blvd.) and the Lighthouse Preschool (close to 20th St. and Santa Monica Blvd.)

I would never deny a sick person access to his medication however I also believe we have to protect the integrity and welfare of our community: building medical marijuana dispensaries so close to schools sends the wrong message to kids.

The fact of the matter is that there are plenty of medical marijuana dispensaries in Venice and/or West Los Angeles – all within walking distance from Santa Monica City limits. Our City is so small – only 8 square miles – and we have the complication of having schools within walking distance within every proposed geographical location of the marijuana dispensaries. They simply do not fit into the unique circumstances and hence constraints of our City.

I am asking that the City of Santa Monica not allow these dispensaries within city limits for the sake of our students and schools.

Donations wanted to help with vision project

THE SANTA MONICA LIONS CLUB, IN PARTNERSHIP with the Venice Marina LAX Lions Club, will be taking part in a statewide initiative called Lions Eyes Across California. On Saturday, March 28, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., at Virginia Avenue Park, the two clubs will be collecting old glasses while offering free vision and hearing screenings. There will also be over 100 reconditioned eyeglasses, sorted according to prescription strength, to distribute to those who need new glasses after their eye exams.

The mobile screening unit will be located at the Virginia Avenue Park Farmers Market, at the corner of Pico Boulevard and Cloverfield next to the market breakfast area. You can drop off your old glasses — prescription sunglasses are also welcome — have a free eye exam, have your hearing checked and learn more about how Lions are active on the Westside, including Santa Monica, Venice, Marina del Rey and the LAX area.

If the event is as successful as anticipated, next year the event will be held across the U.S. Then, in 2017, coinciding with the Lions Club International 100th anniversary, the event will span the globe, creating a single day of worldwide vision awareness.

Owning your zoning

LAST WEDNESDAY NIGHT I WATCHED our Planning Commission complete the last of 33 public hearings on our city's new draft zoning ordinance. Yes, that's right: thirty-three!

During over a year's meetings, the commission spent more than 140 hours on the code's many details, including hearing testimony from over 550 speakers. Besides that in-person input, the commission received thousands of emails and letters, most of which were also copied to us at the City Council. Why? Because now, at last, it is time for your directly elected City Council to represent you in amending and adopting a final version of our new zoning ordinance.

After last year's signature-gathering campaign against the oversized and traffic-generating Hines project, development became the primary issue as voters chose a new City Council.

ELECTIONS MATTER.

With our new Council, we now make final decisions in a process that has incorporated massive public input over a stretch of almost 12 years. First, we created a new Land Use and Circulation Element, a task that took six and a half years. For the five years since then, we have been operating under an interim zoning ordinance, which by law cannot be extended any further. It is time to bring everyone together to decide the future of our beloved Santa Monica.

This new zoning code will determine where new construction will be allowed, what it must provide to our community, what it will look like, and how our existing neighborhoods will be protected. This decision will affect us all for years to come, and is one of the reasons I'm honored to be your Mayor in this crucial year.

I believe in public process, and the ability in our democracy for a community to wisely determine its own future. We know the economic opportunities in Santa Monica are very enticing to those who wish to invest in our city. Now is our chance to determine what we want from future development, for ourselves and for our children and grandchildren. Whatever is built under the new zoning code will become the Santa Monica in which they grow up.

Some major choices confront the Council. After the so-called "Subway to the Sea" was delayed by decades, City staff recommended we remove proposed activity centers from Wilshire Boulevard. The Planning Commission majority disagreed. Now the City Council will have to decide.

What residents may not know, though, is that many of the potential threats to our quality of life already have been removed from the draft zoning code. To protect existing neighborhoods and avoid resident displacement, allowable units per lot for replacement projects have been further reduced, and parcel consolidations limited. Maps were modified to retain residential zoning.

Most development review thresholds were cut, meaning even smaller projects will require full discretionary review, and public noticing requirements were increased, to cover up to four times as many neighbors. More uses than ever will require a neighborhood-protecting Conditional Use Permit.

Still concerned? When we on the City Council look at the new zoning code starting in mid-April, we will have one more opportunity to weigh effects on neighborhoods and evaluate the cumulative impacts of change. This is a task in which we need your help. No one knows and appreciates a city more than those of us who live here.

I appeal to us all to make this a productive conversation. We must work to identify common interests, not just stake out positions that don't respect our shared future as one community, living together.

Recent opinion columns published here in the Daily Press have articulated two very different points of view - from unrestrained enthusiasm about maximized growth to suggestions that residents might want to abandon the zoning process in favor of planning a referendum against a zoning code that hasn't even been approved yet.

I'm willing to guess most Santa Monicans fall between those two extremes, and I hope to convene an intense and productive conversation over the next two months that lets everyone be heard.

A recent column from the business community encouraging full speed ahead on development may underestimate how very engaged residents have become in protecting neighborhood quality of life, as I pointed out to the Chamber of Commerce two months ago in my State of the City address.

The call for a referendum on an as-yet unwritten zoning ordinance, on the other hand, may underestimate our residents' long-proven ability to make public process work for us through participation, not negation.

You clearly care about this wonderful city we live in (or you wouldn't have read this far!). Will you join us now in making sure the City Council makes the very best decision for you? Hold us accountable. Give us your input. Help shape the outcome. You may be surprised at how well this turns out.

MAYOR KEVIN MCKEOWN can be reached at kevin@mckeown.net. The address for the entire Council is council@smgov.net. City Council zoning hearings begin April 14.

Planning Commission sticks it to residents - again

THE PLANNING COMMISSION'S MEET-ing last Wednesday provided more evidence of how out of sync commissioners are with the community. The occasion was the crafting of final recommendations for changes required in the zoning and building code updates so they're in harmony with the 2010 Land Use and Circulation Element (LUCE) before forwarding them to City Council for the final word.

The good news is the politically appointed commission recommended that the majority of the 115 "A" lot parcels on the LUCE and "official districting" maps that were mysteriously changed from "residential" to "commercial" should change back to "residential."

Then came the bad news - lots of it. The commission voted to oppose everything that residents wanted. Wilmont, the Northeast neighborhood and Mid-City neighbors all got the shaft.

The commission voted to keep Tier 3 developments — high-density, mixed-use residential/commercial buildings with four to six floors — proposed for Wilshire and Santa Monica boulevards. They also voted for the much-despised, traffic-generating shopping centers ("activity centers") on Wilshire. Neighborhood activists vowed to appeal the decision so that it'll have to be considered by City Council when it deliberates on code changes next month.

Controversy swirled around a huge property adjacent to the residential neighborhood at 1801 Wilshire Blvd. The rear surface parking was changed from low-rise, residential (R2) land use to high-density mixed-use boulevard (MUB). Outraged neighbors have vowed to fight like a banshee to return 1801 Wilshire to R2.

Typical of the controversy were suggested code changes to permit a 6-foot height bonus, or an extra floor, in renovated buildings that were either a historical resource or a "structure of merit" in R2-zoned, low-scale, multi-family neighborhoods that were formerly R3-zoned, medium-scale multi-family neighborhoods.

I know, it's a lot of wordy minutiae, but in a neighborhood such as Wilshire-Montana with a slew of historic properties, adding an extra floor to those buildings (when renovated) cuts off sunshine and air for neighbors, and invites conversions from apartment buildings to hotels and medical offices. It commercializes the neighborhood.

The historical preservation lobby also nabbed a ruling that allows a developer to build to higher and denser Tier 3 heights without a development agreement. No public review? Are they kidding? These aren't benign, harmless ways to save historical buildings. It permits developers to build five- and six-floor buildings next to one- and two-story homes.

Here's the deal: Under the new Zoning Ordinance, developers are gifted with construction incentives and bonuses for historical preservation, affordable housing, child care, "sustainable" construction and unspecified community benefits. This means every new mixed-use and commercial project in the city will likely be bigger, denser and wider than the district zoning supposedly allows.

What is most frightening is that commissioners Jason Parry, Jim Ries, Amy Anderson and Gerda Newbold think that the deeply flawed and well-manipulated LUCE was created by and for residents and we like it. As with the zoning code updating process, the creation of the LUCE was compromised by politics, back room deals, special interests and favoritism. Resident input was ignored or conveniently left out by commissioners and planning staff alike.

Throughout the zoning update process, developers and commissioners have said that opposition to LUCE and placement of high-density housing on transit-rich, main thoroughfares is based on fear. If that means opposition to LUCE and some zoning update recommendations is based on fear of more traffic congestion, more parking problems, more pollution, more demands for resources such as water, more air and water pollution and a distinct downgrade in quality of life — I'd say, "Yaahh!"

Commissioner Ries emailed me last week and commented on my column criticizing him and other commissioners for proposing an extra 6 feet of height (or an extra floor) for new construction on Montana Avenue and Main Street - which ultimately was dropped by the commission. "Why is it acceptable to incentivize affordable housing in Neighborhood Commercial areas along Pico, but not other Neighborhood Commercial districts? If it is good/acceptable for Pico, it should be good for other areas. If it is not good/acceptable for other Neighborhood Commercial districts, than it should be excluded from all Neighborhood Commercial Districts ... " he wrote.

My response was, "Not all neighborhoods are the same. 'One size fits all' is bad planning ... " But, we all know that the majority of planning commissioners care more about advancing their own ideals and vision for Santa Monica than representing and carrying out the residents' vision for the community.

Why incentivize extra height and density along Pico Boulevard if adjacent neighbors aren't willing to give up lower heights and density zoning for additional housing? It doesn't make any sense. As with members of City Council, this bunch is obsessed with its own social engineering agenda and the rest of us get screwed over and over as a result.

"Jennifer Kennedy and Richard McKinnon fought valiantly against Tier 3, the Wilshire Activity Centers and up-zoning 1801 Wilshire, but they had no chance with this pro-height and density commission," said Taffy Patton, chair of the Residents Coalition.

Thanks to Kennedy and McKinnon, who've been leading the fight to support resident recommendations. However, what was McKinnon thinking when he opened a can of worms by suggesting up-zoning Santa Monica Catholic Church property from low-scale R2 zoning to denser, higher R3 zoning? Saint Monica is in the middle of a low-scale residential neighborhood.

At 30, J.J. Redick is enjoying a career year

BY TONY CAPOBIANCO
Contributing Writer

LOS ANGELES Usually in the NBA, a player starts to see his production and ability decline once he reaches the age of 30. Instead, J.J. Redick gets better. On Friday, the 30-year-old shooting guard set a new Los Angeles Clippers single season record for three-point shots made with 164 in a 113-99 victory over the Washington Wizards.

"I knew I was getting close [to the Clippers Previous all-time record for 3-pointers made of 161 by Jamal Crawford]," Redick said. "I didn't know I was that close, that I was one away. Jamal had mentioned something to me two or three weeks ago, when I was at 130-something. It's cool to break Jamal's record — a good friend, and a guy I love playing with.

It is safe to say that he is having a career year. On top of this new franchise record, Redick is also among the top ten in the NBA for three-pointers made and three-point shooting percentage.

"I feel like every shot I take is going to go it," Redick said while glowing with confidence as he always does. "It's a great feeling as a player."

With the opportunity to play and start every game — which he didn't do for the Orlando Magic and Milwaukee Bucks prior to joining the Clippers - Reddick is able to convert his confidence into high level production. Drafted by the Orlando Magic with the 11th overall pick in the 2006 NBA Draft, Redick was never utilized as their main player. He didn't start his first game until his third year, when the Magic reached the NBA Finals in 2009. The most games he started in a season was in 2011-12 with only 22.

Clippers head coach and head of basketball operations Doc Rivers saw Redick in the same light as Ray Allen. When he joined the Clippers in 2013, he sought to acquire Redick in a trade with the Milwaukee Bucks and Phoenix Suns so he could be to the Clippers what Allen was to the Boston Celtics.

"Looking at our team from afar, we were a stagnant team that when you watched us, we were a dribble team," Rivers said. "My first thought was, we need a mover without the ball on this team to make this work better.

"He creates offense with his movement," Rivers said about Redick. "He doesn't have to make shots to make offense for us because you have to react to him. When he comes off a pick, it's the guy guarding him and someone else usually stunting at him, and that creates offense for us. That's the way I was looking at him. I was looking at him more as a team fit."

"That's the type of player he is," said DeAndre Jordan of Redick. "He doesn't ever get tired, and I would definitely get tired running off nine different screens and coming out to shoot a jump shot."

With the possibility of the Clippers being without Jamal Crawford for the rest of the season, it becomes imperative that Redick continues his career high stretch into the playoffs.

COUNCIL

Mayor Pro Tempore Tony Vazquez said he's not convinced that a cab reduction is the answer but said he'd like to hear city officials' ideas on the matter.

Mayor Kevin McKeown agreed, saying he'd rather even the playing field, which he believes unfairly benefits ride-hailing apps.

City officials are coming back later this year with official recommendations as to how to proceed with the next taxi franchise.

STILL NO PLANNING COMMISSION

With Councilmember Terry O'Day missing council's special meeting last Tuesday - it was rescheduled from the week prior because so many people had prior engagements - his colleagues opted to once again delay a vote to fill a vacancy on the Planning Commission created by the election of Councilmember Sue Himmelrich back in November.

Council has an unofficial policy that it does not fill a big vacant seat without a full dais, but some members are getting restless.

"I would like to suggest that if we can't get seven for some reason next week, I think we're getting to the point where we can't put it off much longer," Winterer said. "The Planning Commission will be handing off the zoning ordinance to us and they have stuff to do, and I think we need to fill that seat."

Davis was less concerned, noting that she remembers seats remaining unfilled for months.

"It's not the end of the world to have a Planning Commission that only has six people on it," she said. "I want to get them a seventh, but I think it's important with this particular commission to respect our process and our collegiality of having seven members if it all possible."

Interim City Manager Elaine Polachek told the council that a full dais is expected for the regularly scheduled meeting this week.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

case, this honor also highlights the life-changing programs of the YWCA Santa Monica/Westside, which supports our community's women, girls and families over a lifetime."

Miele, who previously held posts with the AIDS Healthcare Foundation and the American Cancer Society, noted the history of collaboration between the YWCA and the local league chapter. In October, the two groups partnered on a forum featuring state senate candidates Ben Allen and Sandra Fluke.

"Leading an organization that advances the goals and pursuits of women and girls at every life stage has given me the opportunity to deeply engage with the Santa Monica community and benefit from the support it provides to women, girls, families and community service agencies as a whole," she said.

ROCHELLE FANALI

Through the Parent Teacher Association at the local and state levels, Rochelle Fanali has been involved in education and children's advocacy efforts for the last 15 years.

But the Santa Monica-Malibu school district's current PTA council president acknowledges that her actions fall within a larger context of community activism.

"Forming nearly 100 years ago just as women won our right to vote, the League of Women Voters advocated for an open, accountable and responsive governmental system," she said. "Their mission is as relevant today as it was then."

Like the PTA, Fanali said, the league is nonpartisan but strives to be forward-thinking.

"I am incredibly honored to be in the company of the women receiving recognition by the League of Women Voters of Santa Monica this year," she said. "I am continually inspired by the commitment of so many other women - and men - to supporting the youth and public schools of our community. I feel lucky to volunteer alongside them."

JULIE RUSK

Back in 1988, Julie Rusk arrived from the East Coast to work in the city's Community and Cultural Services division. Twenty-five years later she became the department's assistant director, a position she holds today.

Her career has been marked by involvement in a plethora of projects in Santa Monica. She's overseen human services grants and after-school programs. She's worked on Virginia Avenue Park. She's contributed in the Police Activities League and spent time aiding local homeless people.

"Santa Monica is a unique city - valuing its people, committing substantial resources to things that matter to us all," she said. "Santa Monica is full of people who care about their neighborhoods, their schools, their branch library, their parks, and even their grocery stores."

Rusk, an active parent who has two teenagers in district schools, is currently a leader on several major initiatives. One is the Wellbeing Project, a city-sponsored plan to measure and improve community wellbeing. Another is Cradle to Career, a collaborative effort focusing on childhood development.

"We strive to craft and implement good policy because that's how our community becomes stronger, more connected and more resilient," she said.

SANDY JACOBSON

This year's Christabel Pankhurst Award will go to Sandy Jacobson, a league member and longtime CityTV host. A producer and program host for the local cable channel for 25 years, Jacobson is being honored for her work as a candidate forum moderator.

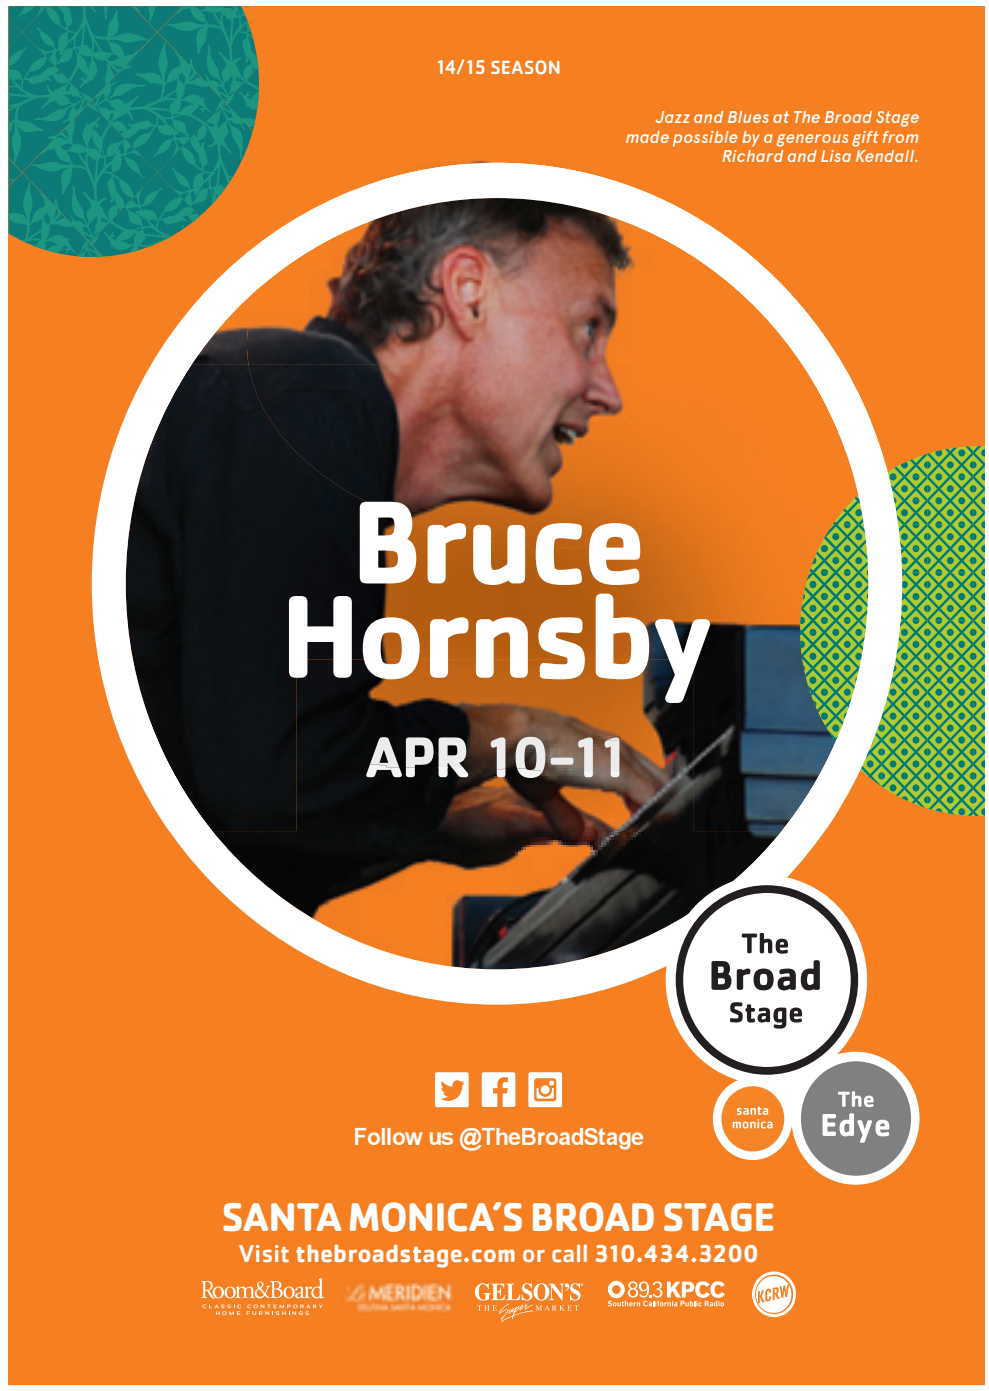

"Her professionalism and gracious personality have elevated these forums into a class by themselves," Williams said.

Jacobson has questioned numerous City Council candidates, interviewed Holocaust survivors for Steven Spielberg's Shoah Foundation, produced two Emmy Award-winning documentaries, served as a docent at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and volunteered with a literacy program through the Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles. She is also a counselor for a suicide prevention hotline.

Jacobson's award is named after an English-born suffragette who is buried in Santa Monica.

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ A 27-year-old man was arrested for trespassing in January (2010) in Seattle's Lusty Lady peep-show arcade, whose layout is a strippers' dance stage surrounded by private viewing stalls for customers. According to police, the man, after ogling the dancers, energetically climbed from his stall, through a ceiling panel and navigated the overhead crawl space -- which merely allowed him to continue staring at the strippers (but perhaps enriched the illicitness of his peeping).

■ (1) A 37-year-old man and two female companions were charged in February with stealing tailgates from nine trucks in the Orlando area. (Their spree ended when, noticing that a club owner had offered a reward on Facebook for his branded tailgate, the three tried to sell it back to him but botched the transaction.) (2) The driver of an empty car-carrying truck pulled off the Bishop Ford Freeway near Calumet City, Illinois, in February after he heard a calamitous sound and felt the trailer shaking violently. It turns out Asa Cole, 23, speeding and following too closely, had inadvertently driven his pickup truck up the low-hanging tracks of the trailer and come to a stop only inches away from the cab. Said the carrier driver, "Is this 'Dukes of Hazzard' or something?" Cole was cited for several violations.

Out late tonight, Leo

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

CRIME WATCH
BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MARCH 14 AT APPROXIMATELY 1 P.M.
Officers responded to the report of a sexual assault that had just occurred. The victim told police that she was inside of a business located on the 1400 block of 3rd Street, when she felt someone grab her buttocks as she was walking up the stairs to the second floor. She described the suspect as a white male, brown hair with dreads wearing a blue button down shirt and grey pants. About thirty minutes later, police officers received a radio call stating that a male subject, matching the description given by the victim, had approached a female in a restroom located in the 200 block of Broadway at Nordstrom. The suspect, later identified as Louis Volk, 21, homeless, had approached the victim while she was in the restroom and asked her if she would have sex with him. Volk was detained, positively identified by the victims and arrested. Volk was booked for juvenile annoyance and sexual battery. Bail was set at $20,000.
