SMMUSD proposes new language coordinator

Parents call for improvements to dual immersion program

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

When Laurie Newman was a parent at Edison Language Academy, she was amazed by the school's dual immersion program and its commitment to teaching students in English and Spanish.

By the time her child had settled in at John Adams Middle School, though, she was left astounded by the lack of continuity in language education.

"And in high school, I hear, it's a different story," she said. "A worse story."

Newman raised her concerns earlier this month as the local Board of Education weighed a proposal to create a new language and literacy coordinator in the Santa Monica-Malibu school district.

The proposed employee would work with district and site staff at all levels to implement language programming while increasing professional development for both

Park list approved for county research project

BY MATTHEW HALL
Daily Press Editor

Supporters of a multi-use sports facility found themselves on thin ice this week when Council excluded a potential ice rink from the first wave of park construction at Santa Monica Airport.

The County of Los Angeles is conducting a study to assess park needs in all municipalities and unincorporated areas. The results of that study will be used to develop a list of priority park projects and that list will become the basis for potential future bond funding similar to the Proposition A bond measure that passed in 1992.

Santa Monica is one of 189 study areas participating and local input has been gathered by staff, at public meetings and at the Recreation and Parks Commission.

The culmination of the local process was a presentation to the City Council on March 22 prioritizing a set of park projects. Council approved a staff recommended list that included fields at the Civic Center, expansion of Memorial Park, expansion of parkland at the airport, opening Mt. Olivette reservoir to the public, renovating Stewart Street Park and prioritizing acquisition of new land citywide for future parks projects.

According to the presentation, about 72 percent of Santa Monicans live within a half mile of a park providing significantly better access than the county average

BAG BAN

Students from several University of California chapters of CALPIRG (California Student Public Interest Research Group) are spending their Spring Break traveling to six cities, including Santa Monica, in an effort to support a statewide ban on single use plastic bags. The students are participating in beach and river cleanups in those cities as part of their campaign. Locally, the students were joined by representatives from Heal the Bay and the City of Santa Monica.

of 49 percent. However, the city only has 134 park acres for a population of 92,529 or about 1.4 park acres per 1,000 residents, about half the county average of 3.3 acres.

There’s no guarantee the county moves forward with a funding mechanism nor is there any requirement such a measure will actually fund the specified projects. Rather, participation in the study provides a broad roadmap for countywide planners and staff said it would also provide clarity for Santa Monica’s own park planning process.

A proposal to specify a new multi-purpose sports facility at the Airport was removed from the recommendation. While the Recreation and Parks Commission had supported a proposal for a new facility that could include an ice rink, sports field and other amenities, Council sided with staff who said the city has already made promises to convert the first 12 acres of land at the airport into an open park. Council voiced support for locating such a facility somewhere in Santa Monica, even possibly at the Airport, but said mandating a multi-use facility on either of the sites currently earmarked could delay completion of the park process that was promised to voters in 2014 when residents passed Measure LC.

Supporters of an ice rink brought several speakers to the meeting.

Dr. Steve Weinberg was one of the speakers representing Bring Back The Ice, a regional group supporting construction of a new ice rink on the Westside. He said professional sports teams are eager to find a home for a multi-use facility.

“The Los Angeles Kings and the LA Galaxy have an intent to build it somewhere,” he said. “This is a great opportunity for you, the city and the local community to fill the void in ice facilities as well as field sports facilities.”

Shay Beebe said she spoke on behalf of the Kings/Galaxy organizations and said if the city were to officially consider a proposal, the professional sports teams could easily pay for and build a facility.

“We would build something green, state of the art with many, many community amenities,” she said.

Several Santa Monica residents spoke on behalf of other priorities. Several were specific in asking council to forego endorsing the multi-use facility at this point.

Andrew Gledhill said parents of Santa Monica kids were eager for new parks and it was important for the City to keep its promise to residents to convert 12 acres of former aircraft parking into an open park.

“While the city needs an ice rink and more swimming pools, lets please stay with the plan,” he said. “Lets turn the first 12 acres at the airport into a park so everyone sees promises are kept and lets do it while those children are still small.”

Community Garden supporters said there are more than 300 people on the waiting list for a plot with some waiting more than eight years. They said including gardens helps the environment, promotes well-being and meets a strong community desire.

“I really want this city council to appreciate the imperative to have community gardens in as many parks as possible,” said Cris Gutierrez.

Council unanimously approved a motion by Mayor Pro Tem Ted Winterer that removed the multi-use facility from the priority list and added emphasis to acquiring new property for parks.

“I think we need to be somewhat generic in what we suggest because we don’t know what we’re going to be able to afford to do, but I do think land acquisition should be part of it,” said Councilman Kevin McKeown.

Councilwoman Sue Himmelrich supported the motion but said buying more land for parks created some internal tension when existing land isn’t being used for open space.

“When we’re confronted with pieces of land we already have, and I’m thinking specifically of 4th and 5th and Arizona and other pieces of land, instead of using it for this open space that we so desperately need, we want to build buildings on it,” she said.

3rd St. Apartment fire on 3rd Street

An apartment fire on 3rd Street displaced an elderly resident, but caused no damage to the surrounding area on March 23.

According to the Santa Monica Fire Department, firefighters responded to a call of smoke in an apartment at 938 3rd St. at about 6:38 p.m. on Wednesday evening.

Upon arrival, firefighters found a 2nd floor unit, of a three-story apartment building well involved with fire. Four engines, one ladder truck, one rescue air unit, one hazardous materials unit, and a Chief Officer, responded to the emergency. Firefighters quickly extinguished the blaze, and were able to confine the fire to the unit of origin.

The fire resulted in the closure of 3rd Street, gas service to the building being interrupted, and one elderly resident displaced. Firefighters assisted Southern California Gas Company with restoring gas service, helping the resident find shelter, and were subsequently able to reopen the street to normal traffic in approximately one hour.

The cause of the fire was determined to be a cooking accident. The occupant was evaluated for smoke inhalation, but was not transported to a hospital. No injuries to Firefighters were reported. The Santa Monica Fire Department would like to remind all our residents to the importance of Smoke detectors, and the part they play in giving us early warning to residential fires.

Laughing Matters

Jack Neworth

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

Ladies and gentlemen, Shecky Greene!

I'VE ADMIRED COMEDIANS ALL MY LIFE.

I've even "played" one here since 2006. Among the most multi-talented I've ever seen is the iconic Shecky Greene who will turn 90 on April 8. On April 3, Shecky will be honored in Las Vegas, where he lives, by 250 fans, friends and family in a gala birthday tribute at the prestigious Smith Center. I was fortunate enough to see Shecky in person at an "unscheduled event," that I still remember.

Over 20 years ago, I met Shecky at A Little Taste of Hoboken restaurant on Westwood Boulevard. Because it was so crowded, the charismatic owner, Matteo ("Matty") Jordan, asked if we'd share a table. All I knew about Shecky was that he was a legendary Vegas lounge comedian. In fact, Shecky literally pioneered the lounge act and, at one time, was making $150,000 a week. (To this day he laments, "$125,000 of it went to my bookie.")

Over lunch, Shecky basically told me his life story, using spot-on impressions, dialects and he even sang a few bars. (Shecky has a terrific voice!) I was thoroughly mesmerized. So, when I read about Shecky's upcoming 90th birthday, I reached out to him. Shockingly, he's as funny as ever. And, married to Marie Musso since 1985, is more at peace than ever.

Shecky is walking comedy history, having started in Las Vegas in 1953. He worked with just about every star, including Elvis who opened for him one year. Curiously, Elvis was terrible as it would be years before he learned to perform for a Vegas audience. At the epicenter of turning Las Vegas into a 24-hour party town, Shecky was friends with show biz royalty like Buddy Hackett, Dean Martin and Frank Sinatra. ("Frank once saved my life with five words, 'Okay boys, he's had enough.'")

In his over 60 years as a star, for much of the time Shecky battled demons that included alcohol, prescription drugs and gambling. In fact, in 1968, Shecky was "well medicated" when he crashed his Oldsmobile into the Caesar's Palace fountains. As his car was drenched under geysers of water, Shecky merely turned on the windshield wipers. When the cops arrived, he rolled down the window and asked, "What, no spray wax?"

Shecky's birthday tribute will be the subject of "Conversations With Norm," a quarterly interview presentation hosted by man-about-town columnist Norm Clarke, who has been covering the celebrity scene for the Las Vegas Review-Journal since 1999.

Proceeds will benefit the education and outreach programs of the illustrious Smith Center.

Born in 1926 on the North Side of Chicago, Shecky was in the Navy during WWII and served on a battleship that saw considerable action. When things were peaceful, however, Shecky, curiously, was in charge of the ice cream making machine. Years later, when asked what was the toughest thing about WW2, Shecky joked, "butter pecan."

After the war, Shecky, an outstanding athlete, planned to become a gym teacher. Instead, he started his comedy career at the Prevue Lounge in New Orleans. From there he went on to showrooms in Miami, Chicago, and Reno/Lake Tahoe. Then an agent persuaded him, now 27, to move to Las Vegas and be an opening act at the Last Frontier. He was held over for 18 weeks, a first for the Strip.

In addition to decades of Vegas work, Shecky played Carnegie Hall and appeared on "The Ed Sullivan Show" (which he hated: "They'd rush you on and off"). Ruggedly handsome, he also played Private Braddock for a year on "Combat," and appeared in many movies, including "Splash" and "History of the World, Part I." But Shecky was best known as a "comedian's comedian." Among his greatest fans was Johnny Carson, on whose show Shecky appeared 40 times and where he also served as a guest host.

Offstage, one of Shecky's many passions was horse racing. A horse named Shecky Greene was the front-runner in the 1973 Kentucky Derby, until Secretariat ran off with the race. Arlington Park still runs a Shecky Greene Handicap.

Unfortunately, throughout his legendary career, Shecky was plagued by depression, panic attacks and addictions. And yet, he was always open and candid about it with his audiences. (As he was during lunch at Taste of Hoboken.)

In fact, NAMI (National Association of Mental Illness) plans to honor Shecky for helping to increase public awareness and remove the stigma about mental illness. So, not only is Shecky a world-class entertainer, he's also a mensch. Happy birthday, Shecky!

For info about Shecky's birthday tribute go to, <http://www.thesmithcenter.com> and type "Shecky" in the search box. Also, to see hilarious videos, Google: "Shecky Italian Earthquake" and "Shecky's Funniest Joke." JACK is at jnsmdp@aol.com.

FILM REVIEW REMEMBER

Rated R
95 Minutes

Released March 4th / now screening at the Laemmle Royal in West LA

You might think that since the stars of "Remember," Christopher Plummer and Martin Landau, are 86 and 87 years old respectively, it's a story about old people. This could be no further from the truth. Nor is it a simple revenge story. It is a complex study of human nature, about the capacity for hatred and viciousness, kindness and compassion, which exists in all human beings, even if one or more of these traits may rise to the surface of a personality while the others remain locked away. It's about rage and pain from long ago surfacing unexpectedly. It's about arrogance, superiority and condescension spreading to a new generation. The fact that the two main characters are old is simply a key element in the plot that unspools as we watch this beautifully crafted story.

Christopher Plummer's performance is breathtaking. Martin Landau also reveals great nuances in his character's driven focus. In addition to a twisting, deep psychological plot, this is also a "road movie." Plummer's 90 year old character with dementia successfully travels across the US and Canada by bus looking for the Nazi guard from Auschwitz who murdered his family. It's interesting to note that Landau's father actually did work to rescue relatives from the Nazis during World War II.

At a budget of only about 13 million, the movie seems to be a passion project for director Atom Egoyan, a Canadian of Armenian descent, born in Egypt, and for writer Benjamin August, a novice screenwriter who had spent some years in Vietnam teaching English. August's screenplay was given to veteran Canadian producer Robert Lantos. Once Lantos read it he knew he had to make this film, and he knew he wanted Egoyan, with whom he had collaborated in the past, to direct it. He knew he wanted Christopher Plummer as the star. The three had last worked together on the film "Ararat" in 2002, about the extermination of Armenians at the end of World War I in an area that today is part of Turkey. Thus, thankfully, the film "Remember" came together, with the addition of Landau portraying the instigator of a plan concocted in the confines of his cozy room at a rest home for the aged.

In this film, music plays a key role - Christopher Plummer, who trained as a concert pianist before opting for a career as a thespian, actually plays the piano, and the camera stays on his hands as he plays classical music. His choice of music in one scene provides a crucial clue to a huge twist in the plot. Composer Mycheal Danna does a great job with the score, keeping it unobtrusive but adding to the emotion. Production designer Matthew Davies has created the characters' living quarters to convey without words a detailed story about their history and emotional trappings.

As Egoyan noted in an interview prior to the shoot, time was of the essence, as in a few years, all the people who lived through the period in history which drives this story forward, will be gone. This is definitely a movie with great sociological relevance. It is a powerful movie to watch.

language teachers and instructors with English learners in their classrooms.

According to Terry Deloria, the district's assistant superintendent for educational services, some teachers in non-language classes have had a hard time providing instruction for English language learners.

Deloria noted that the district's current English language development coordinator, Aida Diaz, has worked for years to help educate students from other linguistic backgrounds. But the alignment of the language and literacy programs in SMMUSD could be improved, Deloria said.

Diaz's position will be eliminated, district spokeswoman Gail Pinsker said. The district is hoping to create a new parent engagement position as well as a new language coordinator job.

Deloria said the creation of the coordinator position would allow Irene Gonzales-Castillo, the district's director of elementary curriculum and instruction, to spend more time improving dual immersion offerings in SMMUSD.

"We haven't been able to give it the attention it deserves," Deloria said, adding that Edison's success hasn't been duplicated. "Once you get to JAMS and Samohi, there isn't the same level of support and visibility."

Longtime board member Jose Escarce praised the Edison model, lamenting that more hasn't been done to extend dual immersion into secondary schools.

"One the one hand, it is truly a tremendous source of pride. It's untouchable," he said. "At the same time, it's really only strong at the elementary school level."

Newman, the district parent, said the proposed personnel changes brought her concerns to a head. She's currently the co-chair of Friends of Immersion, a nonprofit group aiming to improve language programming in SMMUSD.

Newman said her attempts two years ago to engage district officials in conversations on the matter were mostly futile.

"The goal of the nonprofit," she said, "is to support the program financially."

Fellow co-chair Laurie Craig said the organization has helped to buy Spanish novels for the JAMS library and organize a Spanish-language book fair at the 16th Street middle school.

But she said the teachers there have requested more help.

"They need books, they need supplies, they need translation help, communication help, accurate email lists," Craig said. "They need leadership and professional development time."

"Dual immersion is often lumped in with [English language development], but it's a distinct program with distinct needs."

CRIME WATCH
BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MARCH 17 AT APPROXIMATELY 11:05 P.M.

Harbor Guards detained two subjects at the 1500 Block of the Beach regarding a disturbing the peace call. Further investigation determined that the altercation between both subjects was a result of suspect Benjamin Corona, 37, homeless, being in possession of the other subject's backpack that had been stolen two days prior from the beach. On Monday, March 14 the victim and a friend were seated near the waterline south of the Santa Monica Pier. The victim briefly walked away from his possessions. Upon returning he was told by a witness that a male Hispanic grabbed the victim's backpack and ran east out of sight. The victim was unable to locate the suspect. On Thursday the 17th while walking near the Santa Monica Pier, the victim noticed suspect Corona wearing his clothing and carrying the stolen backpack. Corona was booked and cited out for misdemeanor possession of stolen property.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ The Cash Economy: China's Peoples Daily reported in January that Mr. Cai Zhanjiang (described as “tuhao,” or “uncultured but still well-off”) had just purchased a new truck from a dealer by driving another truck to the showroom and unloading 100,000 renminbi (about $15,300 U.S.) entirely in small bills – a stash weighing about a half-ton. Shanghaiist.com also noted a story from June 2015 in which a man (likely also tuhao) bought a new vehicle with the equivalent of $104,670 -- almost all in coins.

■ (1) The Tennessee senate voted in February to make its official state rifle the .50-caliber Barrett M82 rifle (big in the sniper community, with a range of 1.1 miles). (2) The Lance Toland Associates insurance company of Georgia said in February that it has issued Taurus handguns to each of its 12 employees as a required-carry for apparently dangerous aircraft insurance work. (3) University of Houston recommendations for faculty on the imminent extension of the right to open-carry firearms on state campuses included admonitions that professors “be careful discussing sensitive topics” and “not ‘go there’ if you sense anger.”

GET OUT OF TOWN, PISCES

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

★★★★ Schedule your meetings early on, but know that important one-on-one conversations will be more successful later in the day. You might witness a reversal involving someone at a distance. Don't worry so much about a tendency to go overboard. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

★★★★ Focus on a partner who has been somewhat resistant to being as fun-loving as you might like. Consider what is at the base of this coldness. Let go of it as soon as possible. Treat this person as if today were the first day of the rest of your life. Tonight: Go with a suggestion.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

★★★★ In the morning, settling into hard work might not be easy unless you are involved with some type of activity that involves using your imagination. Later in the afternoon, you'll want to dive into a heavy project. Be less concerned with time constraints. Tonight: Get some fresh air.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

★★★★ Touch base with family, schedule important appointments and don't get hung up on details. By midafternoon, you'll lighten up. A friend will touch base, or perhaps you'll decide on a particular set of fun plans. Tonight: Let someone think that he or she is calling the shots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

★★★★ Extremes mark the next few days. Someone very close to you might feel less than great. In fact, this person could be somewhat depressed. Your optimism shines through no matter what you do or say. You have a way of warming up this individual. Tonight: Lighten up the moment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

★★★★ Pressure builds around a family matter. The other people involved might not want to chat or share what is happening with them. If you take the time to open up and listen more, you'll understand where they have been coming from. Tonight: Close to home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

★★★★ Use the morning for important matters. In the afternoon, it might be difficult not to be self-indulgent. Make sure you can afford that path before you decide to head down it. Your instincts are right-on. Tonight: Spend time with someone whom you can confide in.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

★★★★ You'll perk up later in the day. Once you recharge your batteries, you'll feel much better. If you can, take the morning off, or make plans where you are not dependent on others. You might be in an off mood, or others might. Prevent a problem before it happens. Tonight: All smiles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

★★★★ You might see a distinct difference in your mood as well as in others'. In the morning, you will be focused on conversations and on making plans. Your sensitivity peaks by midafternoon, and your mood seems to spiral downward from there. Tonight: As you like it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

★★★★ You might be tossed into the limelight in the morning. Others count on your leadership abilities. You could be forced to accept more responsibility. Think before you leap; decide if it is worth it. By midafternoon, you'll greet success! Tonight: Happiest out and about.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

★★★★ Continue taking an overview. You might not like what you see, but you have little choice. Do some needed research in the morning, when it is quieter. You will need more facts by the afternoon, when you'll be tossed into the lime-light. Tonight: Like it or not, all eyes turn to you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

★★★★ Honor a fast change, and know full well where you are heading. A situation could become difficult if you question an older friend or relative too much. Do not be surprised by the tension that builds between you and a higher-up. Tonight: Get out of town if possible.

Friday, March 25, 2016

This year you have the wisdom and ability to understand both sides of a conflict, even if you agree more with one side of the issue than the other. For the sake of keeping the peace, you are likely to agree with all parties involved. If you are single, after summer, you enter a period where you are likely to meet someone very special. You might be surprised by how well the two of you click. If you are attached, you will learn to minimize hot discussions between you and your sweetie. You will enjoy many cozy moments together if you prioritize your concerns. SCORPIO bottom-lines issues.
