New tapas restaurant to offer more dining diversity to Downtown

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

While the Mexican dining experience is well represented in Santa Monica, the Spanish is less so, but that's all about to change as celebrated southern Californian chef Sandra Cordeo is set to open a new tapas restaurant Downtown.

The incoming eatery is to be located at 516 Santa Monica Blvd, the former Heroic Italian space, and just a few doors down from Andrea Inio's upscale Italian restaurant Orto. It's called Xuntos (pronounced: she-un-tos) which means "together" in Galego, which itself is a dialect of Spanish from the Galicia region, sometimes referred to as the Iberian Peninsula.

Cordeo has lived in the US for over 20 years but hails from the Netherlands and spent her summers in the north-easternmost tip of Spain. She previously ran another popular Spanish-themed restaurant called Gasolina Cafe in Woodland Hills. Unlike that eatery however, which had an all-day cafe feel with a plentiful supply of paella, this new endeavor will focus on classic tapas, together with one or two Californian-influenced offerings together with a unique collection of specially selected wines chosen by sommelier Scott Baker.

"I'm very excited that we're seeing more Spanish restaurants because there's so many different kinds of Spanish food from all of the different regions of the country," Cordeo said.

JAMS assistant principal on a mission to empower parents

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

Following 20 years working in education, John Adams Middle School (JAMS) Assistant Principal Joseph Eure is now channeling the insight he has gained throughout his career into a book series for parents to help them better support their children's learning.

The series, titled Courage to Change, is an initiative of Sudden Impact, a non-profit organization founded by Eure along with partners Melvyn Miller and Leo Posada, with the goal of giving parents the tools and knowledge they need to be effective advocates for their kids.

"What we offer through the series are specific things that parents can ask for, specific wording, specific strategies that they can ask teachers and school administrators to implement to help support their children's education," he said. "One of our mottos is, an informed parent is an empowered parent."

Eure said the books are just one avenue through which he and his partners hope to achieve their goal. The group has also been conducting workshops for parents at local schools.

"It's not just about the book..." he said. "The information in the book is powerful, but through the workshops we want to show parents how to use the book," he said.

One such workshop took place

IS IT WORTH IT?

Coffee is a strangely personal food. There are people who consider customizing their drinks an act of personal creativity and modern culture has allowed many to actually base their personality on drinking a cup of coffee. There's merchandise to announce your extra fierce coffee attitude, schools to teach you how to draw pictures in milk and deeply entrenched arguments over how you pour the water over the beans.

A cup of coffee has three ingredients: Coffee (with its varying attributes of taste, roast, strength), sweetener and the mixer with deeply personal preferences for what you combine and in what ratios. To make it even more complicated, this is Santa Monica so there's no shortage of vegan "health" options to supplement your legal drug addiction. In fact, there are several grocery stores that carry more vegan latte options than cow-based options.

So Is It Worth It to get a vegan latte option from the store? Well, do you have to have it vegan? Because if not, then No. None of the tasted options were strictly better than traditional options and in most cases, the veganality of the tested drinks did count against them in either taste or texture. Are there options that work in a pinch? Yes. You can absolutely grab one or two of these if you're in the store and as a temporary, occasional caffeine hit, you'd have no complaints. However, if you're planning your everyday drink, you'll probably want to find something else.

For comparisons: 8 FL OZ of regular coffee has about 95 MG of Caffeine and a 12 OZ can of coke has about 34 MG.

BUT FIRST, COFFEE

#1 POP & BOTTLE

Pop & Bottle Vanilla Cold Brew. 11 FL OZ, 100 MG Caffeine. The winner in a split decision. This bottle achieves a nice texture without any thickeners or chemical trickery, however, there's a residual feeling of something in the throat that is reminiscent of dry oatmeal (which is strange as it's an almond based drink). This won out based on taste, but personal preferences are going to have a big impact on your feelings here as it has flavor components that are not necessarily part of everyone's coffee routine.

#2 RISE

Rise Nitro Oat Milk Latte. 7 FL OZ, 70 MG Caffeine. The coffee really lives up to the description on the can "... creamy, naturally sweet and refreshingly smooth ..." I have no idea where the abundant sweetness comes from as the ingredients are just water, oats, coffee, sunflower oil, salt and potassium carbonate but it is good. The drink does have an aroma and flavor that was described as "oaty" or "pastry" which resonated differently with different tasters.

#3 CALIFIA FARMS

Califia Farms Cold Brew XX Espresso. 10.5 FL OZ, 150 MG. As an almond milk entry Califia Farms could have been #1 or #2 depending on personal preference. It has no definable "plant-based" taste, good texture and an almost mocha-like taste. However, it really tastes stronger than the others and going back to the notion that coffee's many permutations really alter the amount of personal enjoyment you get from any specific cup, that distinctly robust espresso taste was not to everyone's liking.

#4 POP & BOTTLE

Pop & Bottle Classic Cold Brew + Coffee Berry. 8 FL, OZ 80 MG Caffeine. A nice texture and sweetness but this is defined entirely by the coffee berry flavor. The "berry," is the fruit of the coffee plant that surrounds the "bean" which is roasted to make actual coffee. It is supposed to have its own health benefits but the flavor is very different. To some it was coconut, to others it was cherry but it made the coffee distinctly fruity. Similar to a fancy chocolate candy that you'd get in an assortment box, it was pleasant on the first sip but quickly became overwhelming and unpalatable for a full cup.

#5 LATER DAYS

Later Days Lil' Oat. 8 FL OZ, 236 MG Caffeine. There's nothing in the taste of this can to suggest the quantity of caffeine in it. That is a real benefit to those that want the extra jump in their morning. It also has the least sugar. However, it had the worst texture and presented as very watery with very limited flavor. Its nutrition benefits are on paper better than the others but it just wasn't the drink anyone would reach for out of enjoyment when compared side-by-side with the other options.

2023 the site was completely closed for renovations and construction work after which it was only partially open.

Inspired by both the Romanesque and Art Deco movements and perched on the cliff tops overlooking the Pacific Ocean, the Georgian has been a part of Santa Monica culture since its debut in 1933. Given its prime location and fashionable aesthetic, it quickly became popular, attracting a stylish clientele. In the halcyon heyday of Hollywood regular guests included Charlie Chaplin, Clark Gable, Marilyn Monroe and members of the Kennedy family.

It was the dream of renowned Californian hotelier, Rosamond Borde, who commissioned celebrated architect M. Eugene Durfee to design a hotel of grand proportions. The landmarked property has been lovingly restored to its former glory by a host of international hospitality development specialists, including BLVD, interior design firm Fettle, architects HLW and the Corso Marketing Group.

The official blurb sums the experience up rather well, "Guests walk upon a Havana Deco inspired floor as they cross the threshold into the Georgian's historic lobby. High ceilings accented with custom Art Deco chandeliers and original decorative reliefs welcome travelers to the cinematic entryway, with the visually striking horseshoe-shaped Sunset Bar to the left, and intimate dining room to the right."

It offers a total of 84 suites, made up of 56 classic rooms and 28 one bedroom suites and all feature an antique bar cart, a Marshall speaker, branded diamond knit bathrobes, vegan R+Co toiletries plus a Harry Josh hair dryer. The Georgian also offers Alo Moves, which allows guests to complete a selection of yoga tutorials via the in-room television. Apparently, each suite will also contain Polaroid cameras to "chronicle the visit to Santa Monica on film" and Victrola record players to "provide the perfect vinyl soundtrack with curated records from California-based Ubiquity Records."

The dining experience is under the direction of Chef David Almany, who joins from upscale Italian eatery Osteria Mozza on Melrose Ave under Chef Nancy Silverton for almost a decade. As such, the menu will incorporate an Italian theme. Australian Jerom Morris will manage the bar and Kristin Olszewski will serve as Wine Director, both will feature Italian themed offerings.

Located beneath the Georgian lies The Georgian Room, a historic dinner-only restaurant and piano bar that will re-open for the first time in over 50 years. This speakeasy-style hangout gained a reputation amongst the rich and famous, with guests like Carole Lombard, Clark Gable, "Bugsy" Siegel and Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle all seeking refuge and a stiff drink within this notoriously exclusive secret.

Given its unique look and feel, it comes as no surprise that the Georgian has appeared in a number of television shows and movies, including doubling as an apartment building in Miami in the excellent movie adaptation of the Elmore Leonard novel Get Shorty. Room rates start at $700 per night.

She also says that her decision to open this restaurant in Santa Monica was a very deliberate choice. "People don't explore by walking so much in LA. Yes, there are some neighborhoods where this happens, but not as many as other places. Nobody just discovers us by walking by, so, that's really challenging for a restaurant.

"You have to do a lot of different ways to reach out. And we have, we did become a true neighborhood restaurant [Gasolina Cafe]. And we're very involved in the community. And we have so many regulars, which is really great. That's the kind of restaurant I like to create, one that becomes part of the community and becomes a second home to people," Cordeo said.

"We've been looking on and off for a while. And then we finally feel like we really found the right spot, the right building. It's a beautiful building, it just speaks to me, because it's an old building and has history. It speaks to my European vein."

Cordeo is aiming for a late spring/early summer opening, roughly two months from now. The split level space will accommodate a bar with tall seats and dining availability in addition to banquette seating and two small mezzanines, making a total of about 75 covers. She says the interior decor will be classic with refurbished wooden floors and just a hint of art deco.

"I'm so happy to see this trend of Spanish food happening in Los Angeles, finally, because I lived in New York for eight years and there's Spanish food everywhere. And you know, London or Amsterdam, you know, it's normal, but there's definitely a surge here now and it's really exciting to be riding that wave, for sure."

last week in the JAMS library during a meeting of English Language Advisory Committee parents. Eure and Posada presented an overview of the books' contents, ran the parents through various scenarios they may encounter with their children and discussed how to best handle them.

"Some areas that we specifically address are students struggling with reading, struggling with attention and focusing issues, concentration, work completion, low test scores, low grades, confidence, motivation and attendance – those are all issues that come up frequently," Eure said.

Eure is thrilled that the response to the organization's work and the series so far has been overwhelmingly positive.

"They truly, truly appreciate the information and what the information can do to help support their children to be successful in school," he said.

Sudden Impact has plans to publish several more books in coming months including one specifically focused on college preparation and another on social emotional learning. There are two already out, The Parents' Playbook and The Parents' Road Map, which are directed at student athletes and English language learners. The books are all available in Spanish as well as English.

Eure said they are working on raising money to continue adding to the series and to be able to share their work at professional conventions and conferences. This past week, Eure and Posada had an exhibition table for Sudden Impact at the California Association for Bilingual Education (CABE) conference and he said they hope to be able to attend the California State PTA Convention in Sacramento this April.

> "They truly, truly appreciate the information and what the information can do to help support their children to be successful in school
> - Joseph Eure

In his experience, Eure said he has never met a parent who did not want to support their child, however he has encountered many who are unsure how. He hopes the books and the organization's other work contribute to changing this.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (March 27)

Welcome to your year of easy but profound change. You aspire to habits, adopt them, build on them and gain the benefits that come from the discipline you've always wanted for yourself. You're so attractive that people will seek your company and guidance. More highlights: an opportunity to teach, the keys to an exclusive situation and a loving sidekick. Taurus and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 14, 28, 17 and 12.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Minor irritants and annoyances can be chalked up to life as usual. But persistent pain of any kind, including emotional, warrants investigation. What's it trying to tell you? Heed the message, which will lead you down a path of healing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). To move forward in life, you'll need to break the current pattern. Patterns break the same way everything else does — with a jarring interruption of the status quo. Try bending them the opposite way until they snap.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You expect nothing in return for your kindness, though actually, the return is inherent to the act. Kindness to others stops you from being overly focused on yourself and anything bothering you. To alleviate another person's suffering will automatically lessen your own.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Unfinished business is the enemy of a beautiful day. It creates drama, clutter and distraction. What's undone is always at the back of your mind — a detriment to focus and momentum. Stop and handle the hard stuff, then proceed to a truly wonderful day.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your frustration is not a sign of inadequacy, rather it's a sign of knowing you're capable of great things. Take a breath and try this mantra: "I have plenty of time to figure this out."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It's a day to test the recipe, apply the theory and follow the assembly instructions. You'll need to build the thing to know whether these abstract ideas will pan out in practice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Many take stability for granted, but having been in unstable environments, you prize predictable comforts. You also value people who, like you, do what they say they are going to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's not hard to nurture connections. Mostly, it's a matter of attendance. Whether it's a conversation, event or task, if you know that it means something to your loved one, you'll be sure to show up. Your presence will be requested.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You'll be much more productive than the others, which leads you to wonder if you're doing it right. Should you be pacing yourself, or are they slacking? Should you be in a more challenging position? Not everything will get answered today, but some of it will.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Don't waste a minute thinking you should be feeling differently. Your emotions flow in their own way without regard to your preferences. Whatever comes up, accept it and steer the action from there.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Examine your motives. If you're unsure of what they are, your best clues will come from looking at what's happening around you. Your circumstances will reflect your intentions. You can change your purpose at any moment of your choosing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Today, you'll be receiving good fortune, not creating it. Doing too much gets in the way of what the universe is trying to do for you. Relax a bit. In a sense, doing too much is undoing.
