THE READY TO LAUGH? ISSUE

Homeless labor, pedestrian bans 100 years ago

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON

Daily Press Staff Writer

BAY CITY ARCHIVES How do you end homelessness in Santa Monica? Lock them all up and “add them to the rock-pile squad.” That was the plan put forth by the chief of police 100 years ago this month, according to Los Angeles Times archives.

Chief Randall used the acronym “I.W.W.” — short for “I Won’t Workers” — to describe vagrants and he “issued orders to his men to arrest all dissolute loungers,” the Times reported.

Previously, the policy had been to give suspended sentences to the unruly homeless and ask them to leave town. Randall wasn’t having it.

He promised that all “undesirables” would “be taken up on sight” and given “stiff jail sentences,” or forced into hard labor.

“It is also believed to be legal to employ such men on the street work in Santa Monica,” the report said. “There is a lot of repairing to be done on the road between here and Topango.”

7.5 quake on California fault could be disastrous

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LA HABRA, Calif. Experts say a bigger earthquake along the lesser-known fault that gave Southern California a moderate shake could do more damage to the region than the long-dreaded “Big One” from the more famous San Andreas Fault.

The Puente Hills thrust fault, which brought Friday night’s magnitude-5.1 quake centered in La Habra and well over 100 aftershocks by Sunday, stretches from northern Orange County under downtown Los Angeles into Hollywood — a heavily populated swath of the Los Angeles area.

A magnitude-7.5 earthquake along that fault could prove more catastrophic than one along the San Andreas, which runs along the outskirts of metropolitan Southern California, seismologists said.

The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that such a quake along the Puente Hills fault could kill 3,000 to 18,000 people and cause up to $250 billion in damage. In contrast, a larger magnitude 8 quake along the San Andreas would cause an estimated 1,800 deaths.

In 1987, the fault caused the Whittier Narrows earthquake. Still considered moderate at magnitude 5.9, that quake killed eight people and did more than $350 million in damage.

Samohi’s Conner Greene is destined for stardom

BY TONY CAPOBIANCO

Special to the Daily Press

Even though spring training has ended for big leaguers, it’s about to start for Santa Monica High School’s latest pro pitcher, Conner Greene.

Greene finished his senior year for the Samohi Vikings with a 1.63 ERA and 76 strikeouts. Scouts liked his fastball, which at the time clocked as high as 90 mph. They also say that Greene needs to both physically develop and improve on his splitter and breaking ball.

It’s an assessment that Greene took to heart. When the Toronto Blue Jays drafted him in the seventh round of the 2013 MLB Draft, he was 165 pounds. He’s added 20 pounds to his 6-foot-3 frame and it has real-

'Noah' rises to top of box office with $44M debut

DERRIK J. LANG

AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES After weathering a sea of controversy, "Noah" arrived in first place at the weekend box office.

Paramount's biblical epic starring Russell Crowe in the titular role opened with $44 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

The imaginative take on the tale of Noah's Ark from "Black Swan" director Darren Aronofsky led some religious groups to claim the story had been inaccurately depicted and prompted Paramount to add a disclaimer to marketing materials noting

Girl talks to pope on immigration, dad freed

AMY TAXIN

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES After a 10-year-old California girl traveled to the Vatican to plead with Pope Francis for help as her father faced deportation, the man was released Friday on bond from immigration detention.

Mario Vargas was freed from a detention facility in Louisiana after he posted $5,000 bond. A relative who saw the girl on television pleading with the pope during a public audience helped with the funding, said his wife, Lola Vargas.

"When she left, her wish was that her father would be home," she told The Associated Press in Spanish. "Thank God she is going to get her wish."

Mario Vargas' release came after his daughter Jersey, of Panorama City, Calif., addressed the pope this week as part of a California delegation that traveled to urge the Vatican to prod President Barack Obama on immigration reform. The girl and a teenager went as part of the 16-member group to represent the American children of immigrant parents who are afraid their families will be divided by deportation. The president and the pontiff met for the first time Thursday.

"I feel very happy and proud because I'm finally going to have my dad back and we're going to be reunited," Jersey told the AP late Friday before boarding a flight from Rome to Los Angeles.

She said her father was also heading to Los Angeles, and that she hoped he would get there before her arrival.

"I haven't seen him in two years," she said. "It's been very hard since my dad hasn't been home. My mom has had to be the provider for my family, she's been the mother and father for two years."

Mario Vargas was arrested last year in Tennessee and convicted of driving under the influence before he was taken into federal custody earlier this month, said Bryan Cox, a spokesman for Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Authorities released him after he posted bond, and an immigration judge will determine the outcome of his deportation case, Cox said.

Lola Vargas said she had been gathering money to pay for her Mexican husband's bond but didn't have enough until one of his cousins called, surprised to see the girl on television, and offered to help. Her husband had gone to Tennessee to look for work in construction and had been sending money to his family in California, she said.

A message left for Vargas' immigration attorney, Alex Galvez, seeking comment was not immediately returned.

Juan Jose Gutierrez, an immigrant advocate who coordinated the trip to Italy, said the archdiocese of Los Angeles helped get the group a key spot so they could speak with Pope Francis amid the crowds.

Airport serves a purpose

Editor:
How is it that Valerie Davidson ("Not-so-friendly skies," Letters to the Editor, March 28), a Mar Vista resident, or any other resident living outside the city of Santa Monica, can talk about what Santa Monica needs or wants for its own airport. She says that the majority of residents want the airport closed. But is that really what the majority of Santa Monicans want?

The airport brings in millions of dollars into the economy of Santa Monica and its surroundings and multitudes of patients needing the health facilities of Santa Monica's health resources. All of these indigent and needy patients are brought in from far outlying areas or taken back home at no expense to them by many pilots, including me, through voluntarily donating our time, use of our aircraft, and at our own expense, through the coordination of Angel Flight, an organization started here at SMO in the early 1980s, still based here at SMO, and since gone nationwide. Take away SMO and you have taken away the hopes of thousands of needy, sick and potentially doomed adults and children, whose only hope is the care they receive from health facilities in and around Santa Monica. Most, if not all of these patients, would suffer severely if not for Angel Flight West, because most could not tolerate the long drive from their homes, or afford the costs of transportation they would have to pay otherwise.

And as far as being a health risk to the community, what about all those fumes generated by those automobiles and trucks that ply our streets, contributing thousands of amounts of fumes and contamination more than are generated by the aircraft that come and go to and from SMO. By the same reason that the Santa Monica City Council is contemplating closing down fuel sales at SMO, perhaps they should also ban cars and trucks from our streets and close down all service stations that sell gasoline to them in our city, as well. Isn't that what one would consider being anti-discriminatory?

Honesty an issue in supervisor race

THIS YEAR, THE RACE FOR THE THIRD District of the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors promises to be a donnybrook.

The district includes Santa Monica and parts of the Westside, Beverly Hills, Fairfax, Hollywood, Agoura, Malibu, and areas of the San Fernando Valley ranging from Northridge and Woodland Hills to Studio City.

Zev Yaroslavsky has finally termed out and the front runners to replace him are former Santa Monica City Councilman and Mayor Bobby Shriver and Sacramento legislative veteran Sheila Kuehl. A few weeks ago, I endorsed Shriver because I know he'll do an awesome job.

Shriver is an imaginative thinker, successful businessman and solves problems "out of the box." Unlike most "spend and tax" politicians, he regularly utilizes entrepreneurial methods and taps private enterprise or his worldwide resources to achieve amazing outcomes.

Tackling poverty and AIDS in Africa is a huge undertaking. Instead of relying on slow-acting governments to step up, Shriver created several global organizations including "RED," "One" and "Data" to raise hundreds of millions of dollars to fight AIDS and improve human lives in the poorest places on the planet.

"A Very Special Christmas," co-produced by Shriver, is the single most successful benefit recording in musical history with over $116 million in royalties and investment proceeds generated for the Special Olympics.

Shriver pushed hard to get the Veterans Administration to renovate derelict buildings on its West Los Angeles campus to provide much-needed housing and health services for homeless vets. Through Shriver's efforts, the VA is close to opening one of three renovated domiciles expressly for mentally impaired, homeless veterans.

While on City Council (2004-12), he worked to fight traffic, resolve homeless problems, clean up the Santa Monica Bay and make City Hall more responsible to the people. Shriver wasn't afraid to challenge the status quo.

He supported Measure T, a citizen-created 2008 ballot referendum. The 15-year measure would have limited commercial development to 75,000 square feet annually in an effort to manage traffic. It was strongly opposed by developers and Downtown business interests.

Sheila Kuehl served 14 years in Sacramento. While there, she authored 171 bills that were signed into law, including legislation to establish paid family leave, overhaul California's child support services system, protect domestic violence victims and their children. She also worked to prohibit discrimination on the basis of gender and disability in the workplace and sexual orientation in education among many others according to her campaign website.

Yet, there's something about Kuehl that really bothers me.

Previously, I mentioned Measure T (also known as RIFT or Residents Initiative to Fight Traffic) that capped commercial development — like the 770,000-square-foot Hines project that's now the subject of a citizen referendum. Unfortunately, it failed that November, but it was a watershed event in Santa Monica politics.

Developers spent $800,000 to defeat it — a record for a local campaign — through contributions to "Save Our City" (SOS) the anti-T committee headed by present Mayor Pro-tem Terry O'Day and Judy Abdo. Abdo is a former Mayor and councilwoman (1988-1996) and a member of the powerful Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights (SMRR) Steering Committee. She's been the developers SMRR "go-to" person for years.

I dove into my extensive campaign literature collection and found a pile of SOS propaganda. One mailer quoted Kuehl: "I oppose Measure T because it further encourages landlords to demolish affordable apartments and displace renters. Vote No on T to protect renters."

Kuehl had to know that Measure T addressed only commercial development and specifically exempted residential property. It had nothing to do with renters and it didn't encourage landlords to "demolish affordable apartments."

Nevertheless, she continued to lay it on thick. "It will put the security of seniors and working families at risk and will jeopardize our already diminishing supply of affordable housing," screamed another Kuehl mailer. This was also complete and utter nonsense.

Kuehl is a smart woman, She must've known that her statements completely misrepresented the measure. So, why did she participate in this scam? Developer money for her next political run, like for supervisor? Maybe. But, take a look at a quote on yet another misleading SOS brochure headlined, "Measure T will harm renters and working families."

"Measure T will allow landlords to displace existing renters and replace affordable apartments with expensive condos. It will not reduce traffic like it claims." It's not Kuehl's quote but that of her BFF (Best Friend Forever), SOS co-chair Judy Abdo identified on the mailer as "Steering Committee Member, Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights." Ouch! Somebody else's pants are on fire, too.

I think that Kuehl made a bad decision in doing a favor for Abdo and blew her own credibility by parroting the lies. Did they think we are too stupid to recognize a blatant deception?

Despite the sorry history, of course SMRR endorsed Kuehl for Supervisor. I wonder whether her other political endorsers were/are aware of how she tried to mislead an entire electorate.

What else will she misrepresent if she wins Yaroslavsky's seat? The County Board of Supervisors is one of the most pro-development entities in all of government. That's why we need Shriver.

He supported Measure T and flew in the face of the SOS developer clique. Shriver proved that he's independent and can't be bought. Kuehl on the other hand supported big money developers and their cronies by deliberately misinforming voters about a ballot measure. She should be ashamed of herself.

The Third District needs a supervisor with integrity who won't prevaricate and flim-flam us. Kuehl? No way, Jose!

Search dogs take break from mudslide recovery

JONATHAN J. COOPER
LISA BAUMANN
Associated Press

DARRINGTON, Wash. Families coping with the loss of friends and neighbors sought comfort Sunday in church services, while crews searched for more victims of the mudslide that buried the mountainside community of Oso more than a week ago.

Many of the dogs that have been essential in the search will take a two-day break, rescue crews said. Days of working in the cold and rain have taken their toll on the animals, and officials say the dogs can lose their sensing ability if overworked.

"The conditions on the slide field are difficult, so this is just a time to take care of the dogs," said Kris Rietmann, a spokeswoman for the team working on the eastern portion of the slide, which hit March 22 about 55 miles northeast of Seattle and is one of the deadliest in U.S. history.

Dogs from the Federal Emergency Management Agency that arrived more recently will continue working, said Heidi Amrine, another spokeswoman for the operation.

Late Saturday, authorities revised the number of people believed to be missing from 90 to 30, while the official death toll increased by one, to 18, said Jason Biermann, program manager at the Snohomish County Department of Emergency Management.

Officials have said they had expected the number of missing to change as they worked to find people safe and cross-referenced a list that likely included partial information and duplicate reports.

Authorities have said they recovered more than two dozen bodies, but they won't be added to the official tally until a formal identification is made. Underscoring the difficulty of that task, Biermann said crews are not always discovering complete remains.

Crews have completed a makeshift road that will link one side of the debris field to the other, significantly aiding the recovery operation.

They have also been working to clear mud and debris from the highway, leaving piles of gooey muck, splintered wood and housing insulation on the sides of the road.

Searchers have had to contend with treacherous conditions, including septic tanks, gasoline and propane containers.

When rescuers and dogs leave the site, they are hosed off by hazardous materials crews.

The slide dammed up the North Fork of the Stillaguamish River, causing water to pool up on the east side. The river cut a new channel through the mud, but the rain has raised the water level nearly a foot, Rietmann said.

In at least one place, the water level got so high that it covered areas that have already been searched, said Tim Pierce, leader of Washington Task Force 1, a search-and-rescue team.

"At this point, there's no point in searching (that area) again until the water drops back down," he said.

Rescuers should get some relief soon. Conditions were improving Sunday, and mainly dry weather is forecast Monday through Wednesday in western Washington.

The size of the debris field is also smaller than initially thought, officials said Sunday. After review and analysis, geologists have determined it is about 300 acres — just under half the size of an earlier projection of one square mile.

Away from the whirring chain saws and roaring bulldozers, many residents of nearby Darrington sought comfort in church services before another week of recovery efforts.

"I can only compare it to a hot, hearty meal after a very cold day," said Slava Botamanenko, who works at the hospital in Arlington. He said he spent two nights there to be sure he was available for work after the mudslide blocked a road.

All week, a steady stream of people has stopped in to pray at the Glad Tidings Assembly of God on the edge of town, said Lee Hagen, the senior pastor.

"At a time like this, everybody knows they've got to have God's help," he said.

Steve Huot, lead chaplain for the Arlington Fire Department, said he is seeing people in various states. Some are in shock, while others have begun to grasp the reality of the disaster. Many are exhausted.

"It's more about listening right now. You need to encourage them and maybe change their focus to staying busy for the group, for the team," he said. "You might need to drive them into something productive and make sure that they feel a sense of accomplishment and contribution."

Dear EarthTalk:

What are some cool apps that work with a mobile phone that can help me get in better touch with the environment?

Mitchell Brown

Troy, Mich

NOT SURPRISINGLY, THERE ARE THOUSANDS of "green" apps out there that make it easier for people to find and share information to help us all become better stewards of the natural environment.

The American Lung Association's State of the Air app shows live color-coded air quality maps for any U.S. location and includes both ozone and particulate pollution counts. The app also provides air quality alerts, short-term forecasts and opportunities to learn more about air quality risks and to contact lawmakers to push for more stringent pollution regulations. Another way to find out who's emitting what nearby is via aMobileFuture's Pollution, a free app that compiles information from various pollution databases around the world and then shows users which big polluters are emitting what near them. Coverage includes 1,380 cities, mostly in Europe and the U.S.

Ethical shoppers will appreciate the GoodGuide, a free app that shows how any of 120,000 food, personal care and household products stack up in terms of sustainability, fair wages and even health risks. Users just snap a picture of an item's bar code to get the low-down on whether or not it's a "good" buy. And the free JouleBug app turns living greener into a game, taking specific sustainability-oriented steps such as reducing energy use, recycling more or buying local and translating these small acts into positive "units of impact." Embedded videos demonstrate ways once can green up daily life.

Adair Systems' 99 cents GasHog app makes it easy to track a car's fuel efficiency.

Enter the odometer reading and amount of fuel added each time you refill the tank and the app calculates the fuel economy of the previous tank and compares it to historical averages. The app also offers tips for improving fuel economy. And Avego's free CarmaCarpooling app matches nearby drivers with riders to share the commute and the expense. At the end of the trip, the rider can send a payment through the system to the driver to cover a share of gas and wear-and-tear.

PaperKarma is a free app to help reduce junk mail. Users input their address information once and then snap a picture through the app of any unwanted junk mail. Behind the scenes, PaperKarma's automated system notifies the publisher to take the user's name and address off their list.

Another popular app is Light Bulb Finder, a free app designed to help ease the transition from older incandescent bulbs to more energy efficient replacements. Users enter in their zip code-the app automatically inputs average regional electricity rates accordingly-and then choose which type of fixture, size/shape and wattage bulb(s) they are looking to replace. The app then suggests options that use less energy and shows how much money the user can expect to save with the newer bulb(s).

It's nice to know that the little screens we've become increasingly dependent upon-and which otherwise tend to distract us from nature and the outdoors-can also be used for the betterment of the environment.

American farmers confront sweeping data revolution

ROXANA HEGEMAN

Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. Farmers from across the nation gathered in Washington this month for what has become an annual trek to seek action on the most important matters in American agriculture, such as immigration reform and water regulations.

But this time, a new, more shadowy issue also emerged: growing unease about how the largest seed companies are gathering vast amount of data from sensors on tractors, combines and other farm equipment.

The increasingly common sensors measure soil conditions, seeding rates, crop yields and many other variables, allowing companies to provide farmers with customized guidance on how to get the most out of their fields.

The involvement of the American Farm Bureau, the nation's largest and most prominent farming organization, illustrates how agriculture is cautiously entering a new era in which raw planting data holds both the promise of higher yields and the peril that the information could be hacked or exploited by corporations or government agencies.

Seed companies want to harness the data to help farmers grow more food with the same amount of land, and the industry's biggest brands have offered assurances that all information will be closely guarded.

But farmers are serving notice in Washington that the federal government might need to become involved in yet another debate over electronic security and privacy. Some members of Congress from rural states such as Kansas were already aware of the concerns, although the issue is new to many urban lawmakers.

Rep. Lynn Jenkins, a Kansas Republican who grew up on a dairy farm, said agriculture must achieve technological advances to keep up with population growth, which is expected to require 60 percent more food by 2050. But she has heard farmers' concerns about data collection.

"Information and data utilization is the way of the future," Jenkins said in an emailed statement. "And just as our federal government struggles with privacy concerns through records at the NSA and various health records, so too must we maintain appropriate privacy protection of individuals from corporate entitles."

The Farm Bureau isn't sure what it needs from Washington, or whether action is even warranted yet. But farmers want their elected officials to be aware of how the industry is changing.

This year's trip to Washington was primarily "an educational effort" to make sure members of Congress know about the data collecting and understand "the implications of the issue for our farmers and ranchers," Steve Baccus, an Ottawa County farmer and president of the Kansas Farm Bureau. "We may need to come back at some time in the future and talk to them about legislation."

Farmers worry that a hedge fund or large company with access to "real-time" yield data from hundreds of combines at harvest time might be able to use that information to speculate in commodities markets long before the government issues crop-production estimates.

Others are concerned that GPS-linked farm data could be obtained by the Environmental Protection Agency, antagonistic environmental groups or, in the Farm Bureau's words, "an overall-clad Edward Snowden," a reference to the former National Security Agency analyst who disclosed intelligence-gathering operations.

"It is not like we don't all trust them," Mark Nelson, director of commodities for the Kansas Farm Bureau, said of agribusiness companies. The new data-collection systems deliver "a lot of good things" to producers. "But as an organization we are looking at, 'What is the big picture?'"

The Farm Bureau Federation put together a "privacy expectation guide" to educate its members and recently drafted a policy asserting that data should remain the farmer's property. The bureau also opposes allowing any federal agency to serve as a clearinghouse for proprietary or aggregated data collected by private companies.

Agribusiness giant Monsanto and other corporations have tried to allay fears by reassuring farmers their data is secure and will not be used beyond providing services farmers request.

This season, growers in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Minnesota can even buy for the first time a Monsanto "prescription" that offers a precise seeding recipe tailored to their soil type, disease history and pests.

The St. Louis-based company, which has dominated the bioengineered seed business for more than a decade, expects to expand its prescription services to other states. It calls the advancements the "Green Data Revolution" — a play off the so-called Green Revolution of the 20th century in which mechanical, chemical and biological advancements drove unprecedented increases in food production.

Monsanto expects the use of ag data to offer comparable improvements in the next few years. It bought Precision Planting, a high-tech farm equipment maker, in 2012, followed last October by the purchase of the Climate Corporation, a data-analytics firm that provides weather-related farm services and crop insurance and is handling Monsanto's fledgling data-related services.

The Green Data Revolution will help farmers make more profit per acre, said Dave Friedberg, chief executive officer of The Climate Corporation. The average farmer, he says, won't have to be "tech savvy."

"Tech will just become integral to the work that they do ... in the same way that more than 100 years ago, we adopted machine-based farming equipment as the standard in the industry," Friedberg said.

Companies are also pushing an Open Ag Data Alliance, which would set uniform data standards and allow systems built by different manufacturers to talk to one another.

Farm equipment manufacturer John Deere has partnered with DuPont Pioneer to tout what it calls "Decision Services," a system in which farmers upload data onto servers that respond by sending seed and fertilizer prescriptions directly to Deere tractors in the field. Other companies offer services that let farmers connect a tablet computer to the seed monitor in the cab and download the information.

Farm groups are conflicted about what role, if any, government should have in regulating data-gathering practices.

"We don't believe ultimately there is a legislative fix for this," said Terry Holdren, chief executive officer and general counsel for the Kansas Farm Bureau. "It is a contractual model for folks who have technology and folks who want technology."

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria--enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms--that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our swimmers are happy.

In a century at Wrigley, innovations abound

ANDREW SELIGMAN
DON BABWIN
Associated Press

CHICAGO It's hard to think of Wrigley Field as anything but a place of heartbreak — a place where fans wait, season after season, for an elusive World Series title that never comes.

Yet in the century without a championship, the ballpark has been in first time and time again in changing the way America watches baseball.

It was the first to let fans keep foul balls. The first with permanent concession stands. The first with organ music. The first to clean the park and broadcast games as part of an effort to diversify the fan base and attract women and their kids to a game traditionally more popular among men.

“We think of all this as so obvious, but back then this was considered revolutionary,” said Cubs historian Ed Hartig.

The ballpark will mark its 100th birthday this spring, and the Cubs plan a celebration in April to honor one of the nation's most classic ballparks, where runs still register on a manual scoreboard and watching a game is like taking a step back in time. As the centennial approaches, the Cubs and Chicago have found themselves stuck in a debate about how far to go in modernizing the ballpark with the same Jumbotron that towers over other fields.

“When you put a Jumbotron in the outfield I think you are messing with what makes Wrigley Wrigley,” said Phillip Bess, director of graduate studies at the University of Notre Dame's architecture school and who helped lead an effort to save Fenway Park from demolition. “If the Cubs do that it means they really don't understand what it is about Wrigley that is unique (and) the kind of place people will come to even when the team is bad.”

But don't be so quick to call Wrigley Field a tired, old home of a perennial loser. It may have been the last ballpark to install lights for night games, but he park's ivy-covered walls are a defining feature of what was once a sparkling, modern ballpark run by men who were trying to create a new experience for fans.

The park was built by a man named Charles Weeghman for a team in something called the Federal League, which was trying to give the more established National and American Leagues — which the Cubs and the crosstown White Sox played in — a run for their money.

After hiring the same architect who a few years earlier designed Comiskey Park for the White Sox, workers needed just two months to demolish the buildings that once housed a seminary and build a simple, single-story grandstand and the rest of the 14,000-seat Weeghman Park just in time for the start of the 1914 season. Finished two years after Boston's Fenway Park, it cost about $250,000. Two years after the park opened, the Cubs moved in.

“It was considered a great looking park, a lot nicer than the rat-infested park the Cubs were playing in on the West Side,” said Stuart Shea, author of “Wrigley Field: The Long Life and Contentious Times of the Friendly Confines.”

More important is that it was built with an eye to the future: It could be retrofitted and expanded, something that was considered genius, he said.

From almost the day it was built, the owners started tinkering with the place. After nine homers were hit in the first three games — an astronomical total for the time — the Chicago Federals, the original tenants, picked up the left field fence and moved it back about as much as 50 feet in some spots. In the early '20s, the Cubs expanded the seating capacity and the size of the playing field itself by slicing the grandstand into 11 pieces and moving them to create more space. The pitcher's mound today sits where the batters' box used to be.

Wrigley also was keen to understand the Cubs were losing money because women simply refused to come, or let their children come, to a filthy and unsafe ballpark.

The park, renamed Cubs Park in 1919, began to feel different than anyplace else. Shea believes the reasons start with Weeghman's obsession with cleanliness, something he learned in the restaurant business. Hartig said it was William Wrigley Jr., team owner P.K. Wrigley's father, who, after a couple years of investing in the team, bought Weeghman's shares and started making changes.

“The Cubs were really the first ones to start cleaning the ballpark after every single game and (make) sure that the players always had the cleanest uniforms,” Hartig said.

Wrigley also cleaned up the way the park operated.

“You could have a ticket and someone would be sitting in your seat already because the usher was bribed,” Hartig said.

that "artistic license has been taken" in telling the story.

The polarizing attention apparently paid off for "Noah," which features such additions to the well-known Bible story as angelic rock creatures and chic wardrobes for Noah and his family.

"Noah," which also stars Jennifer Connelly and Emma Watson, also sailed smoothly in 22 international markets, such as Russia and Australia, earning $33.6 million abroad.

"It certainly feels like the film has really connected with both mainstream moviegoers who are looking for a really sophisticated film and those folks who really want to see a movie that honors their faith," said Rob Moore, Paramount vice chairman. "It's been a very interesting journey to get to this point, but it's definitely a spectacular launch."

"Noah" is the latest faith-centric film to win over audiences this year. Others include the independently released "God's Not Dead," which earned $9 million in its second outing this weekend, and "Son of God," whose domestic total now stands at $57.9 million since opening last month.

"I think these biblical-themed movies are like the next frontier in Hollywood," said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst for box-office tracker Rentrak. "Hollywood hadn't cracked the code on a biblical movie that would have mainstream appeal. Now, I think they've figured it out. We may see a flood — pun intended — coming down the pipeline. We already have 'Heaven is for Real' and 'Exodus' slated for later this year."

Elsewhere at the box office, Lionsgate's teen science-fiction thriller "Divergent" starring Shailene Woodley came in second place and earned $26.5 million in its second weekend, bringing its domestic total to $95.3 million.

"Muppets Most Wanted," the globe-trotting Muppet sequel from Disney featuring Tina Fey and Ricky Gervais, captured third place with $11.4 million in its second weekend. The latest Muppet caper's total domestic haul is now at $33.2 million.

The weekend's other major new release, "Sabotage," flopped in the seventh spot with $5.3 million. The Open Road action flick starring Arnold Schwarzenegger is the latest failure for the former California governor, whose "The Last Stand" and "Escape Plan" were box-office duds last year.

Disney's "Captain America: The Winter Soldier," which opens in the U.S. on Friday, dominated 32 international markets by capturing $75.2 million. The sequel stars Chris Evans as the patriotic Marvel super-soldier.

Some things do change.

PROTESTING TREE REMOVAL IN PALISADES PARK

Other things don't change.

No less than four articles were written in March and April of 1914 about protests, organized by the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, of a Parks Commission decision to cut down the palm trees in Palisades Park — then called Linda Vista Park.

City Hall wanted to modernize the park but the women's group called it a "desecration" of the old gardens and a waste of money.

Others said the removal of the trees along the edge of the bluff could open up the possibility of the wealthy landowners "erecting buildings which might obscure the present marine view from the park seats."

The mayor asked the protesters to withhold judgment and made clear that the work would go on.

HIT-AND-RUN PROBLEM? BAN PEDESTRIANS

Heres just a few of the Santa Monica automobile injuries reported in newspaper archives in March and April of 1914: A man swerved to avoid a dog and flipped his car. A horse ran into a tandem motorcycle injuring everyone involved. A city employee was killed crossing the street. One driver nicked a curb, causing his car to "turn turtle." A 14-year-old kid was severely injured after he was struck by a hit-and-run driver.

Instead of strengthening the speeding law, which "leaks like a sieve," according to the L.A. Times archive, City Council considered banning pedestrians from crossing several streets.

"The local City Council is not prepared to say that nursemaids ought to be arrested for wheeling their infant charges along the speedway," an L.A. Times article said. "But the city fathers took the position today that there is plenty of room on the ocean front and other streets without running risk of injury or even death."

YE OLDE CRIME WATCH (AND FIREARM FAILURES)

- P.J. Ostergaard, a rancher who thought he had a chicken thief in the sights of his shotgun, fired off several rounds of birdshot severely wounding what turned out to be his son Elmer. A surgeon fixed young Elmer — who'd been returning home from a party — and noted that his life was saved by his father's choice to use light rather than heavy birdshot.

- Police found eight sticks of dynamite, percussion caps, and a fuse underneath the Pacific Electric station. The cops believe that Elmer Simmons (no relations to the not-chicken-thief Elmer), a 17-year-old who fled to Mexico, planted the explosives. Simmons was also believed to be behind a dynamite detonation on an abandoned property a few weeks prior. The motive for stealing the dynamite was surmised to be "boyish bravado" with the intent to explode it "just for fun."

- Cops cracked down on a street gang of 8- to 14-year-old "hoodlums" who terrorized local merchants, stealing bikes and car parts.

- Sergius Apraxin, a wealthy Austrian count, passed a fake check in the city by the sea. Cops didn't care about his royal blood and locked him in the city jail.

- Arthur Brown, a motion picture actor, was unloading his revolver on the set of an outdoor film studio when he accidentally shot himself in the groin.

Part of the problem with the potential damage is that the fault runs near so many vulnerable older buildings, many made of concrete, in downtown Los Angeles and Hollywood. And because the fault, discovered in 1999, is horizontal, heavy reverberations are likely to be felt over a wide area.

The shaking from a 7.5 quake in the center of urban Los Angeles could be so intense it would lift heavy objects in the air, like the 1989 Loma Prieta Earthquake in Northern California, where the shaking was so bad "we found an upside-down grand piano," USGS seismologist Lucy Jones told the Los Angeles Times.

That would "hit all of downtown," Jones said. "And everywhere from La Habra to Hollywood."

About 150 aftershocks, including one of magnitude-4.1, were felt since Friday night's quake, which forced several dozen people in the Orange County city of Fullerton out of their homes after firefighters discovered foundation problems that made the buildings unsafe to enter, authorities said.

Fire crews red-tagged 20 apartment units after finding a major foundation crack, but residents have since been allowed to return. Structural woes, including broken chimneys, were uncovered in half a dozen single-family houses, which were also deemed unsafe to occupy until building inspectors clear the structures. About two dozen residents remained displaced, down from more than 80 after the initial quake.

Another 14 residential structures around the city suffered lesser damage, including collapsed fireplaces.

A water-main break flooded several floors of Brea City Hall, and the shaking knocked down computers and ceiling tiles, Stokes said.

It was not immediately clear if City Hall would reopen Monday. An e-mail to the mayor was not immediately returned.

"Hopefully this year I can hit 95 mph and stay up there consistently," Greene said.

Living in Santa Monica has allowed Greene to work on strength and conditioning in unique ways. Anything that involves the beach is good for the young pitcher.

"I go to the [gymnastic] rings about every other day as my upper body workout," Greene said. "It's great for my shoulders. I do core exercises down there as well. Surfing is one of my biggest pastime workouts because paddling is good resistance, kind of like throwing."

Greene comes into extended spring training getting his preseason work in preparing for the minor league's short season levels. There's the rookie level Gulf Coast League and application league as well as the short season single-A Northwest League. Ideally, Greene will be assigned to the Blue Jays' Vancouver Canadians so he can play in a big city.

The path to the Blue Jays takes Greene to their minor league headquarters in Florida both in the GCL and advance-A Florida State League, as well as Buffalo for Triple-A, a city that supports an NFL team and an NHL team.

Greene comes into the 2014 season fully aware of how precise he needs to be with his pitches in the minor leagues. He went from a 1.63 ERA in high school to a 5.28 ERA in rookie ball, all in the same year.

"That's really the difference between high school and pro ball," Greene said. "If you leave the ball up, where you don't want to, it's going to be hit. In high school, they'll probably still miss it because you're throwing 90 mph and they can't hit that."

It's only a matter of time until Greene breaks into the big leagues as either a starter or reliever. The Blue Jays have traded nearly all of their top pitching prospects either to get Jose Reyes or R.A. Dickey. So maybe Greene could end up making his MLB debut somewhere else.

As for off the field stardom, Greene has the connections and the outer tangibles needed to succeed in entertainment. He has been a model since his early childhood and continues to dabble in it.

"Modeling, for me, compared to when I was young, is now I can drive to castings and my jawline and body are becoming matured and more manly rather than childlike," Greene said. "So as I'm growing older, it's helping."

That being said, Greene believes that it's harder to make it in Major League Baseball than in modeling.

"Pro male models have a look that what the agency is trying to create," Greene said. "They won't choose you if you don't have that look. You can get better at baseball."

Greene also has a key friend in the acting business in Charlie Sheen, who also played baseball at Samohi.

"Charlie really loves baseball," Greene said. "So he appreciates what we're going through and trying to make it in the game."

For Greene, Sheen is a great ally to have. He's a diehard Cincinnati Reds fan since the days of the "Big Red Machine" in the 1970s and has starred in some of the biggest baseball movies such as "Eight Men Out" and "Major League." He currently has a sitcom called "Anger Management," which Greene will make an appearance in on May 1, 2014.

"You should see him take batting practice," Greene said. "If he took batting practice at Dodger Stadium, he can hit it out."

Greene says that even with the connections and avenues in entertainment, his top priority is to play professional baseball.

"Not only is Conner Greene a great talent, he's also a good kid," Sheen said. "There is no doubt in my mind that we will be seeing up on the mound in the MLB in the near future."

CONNECT WITH A LOVED ONE, LIBRA

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ Someone is likely to sense your strength. As a result, this person will push you to get a reaction. You might decide to give him or her that reaction, just to catch him or her off guard. From there, you can continue with your guard. From there, you can continue with your day. Tonight: All smiles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You might prefer not to have to give explanations or deal with much. On some level, you could be experiencing a knee-jerk reaction regarding what is happening around you. You also might not feel a need to redefine or rethink your response. Tonight: Nap, then decide.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You feel destined to achieve certain goals. You could be a little tired or feel pushed by someone else. You might want to put this person in his or her place. Keep your eye on the long term, and be more forthright with a loved one. Tonight: Perk up.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ All eyes turn to you whenever others question what to do next, as your leadership qualities are rather evident. You could be flattered that your judgment is so valued. Tonight: Find your friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Realize what is happening with those around you. One person seems determined to have things go his or her way. This individual could push beyond any normal level. Tonight: How about a concert or jam session?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Deal with a loved one directly. You could want and need to rethink your interactions with this person, as he or she seems to have copped an attitude as of late. Tonight: Get your taxes done, then look at your budget.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You could be far grumpier than you realize. Look around and note others' reactions to you. Rather than growl and grumble, root out what is really going on with you. Only then will you be able to get more control over your feelings. Tonight: Connect with a loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Dive into work or a project. With concentration and focus, you'll accomplish much more than you previously might have thought possible. Make a call to a new friend. Tonight: Your treat!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Your playfulness and ability to honor a quick change will make all the difference in your choices. Re-evaluate what needs to happen between you and a new flirtation. As always, every bond has its limitations. Tonight: Ever playful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You'll want to understand why someone is behaving a certain way before you make a judgment. This person seems to be all over the place. Get feedback from a friend, but realize that you might not feel comfortable with all of his or her opinions. Tonight: Make it early.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Reach out to someone at a distance who might be searching for some feedback. Try to understand what is going on. Do not be adverse to picking up the phone and making some calls. You need more information. Tonight: Catch up on emails before deciding what to do.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You might be more sensitive to a loved one than you usually would deem necessary. Your ability to understand mood changes probably could be applied here. Do not personalize a comment. Tonight: Treat a loved one to a favorite dessert.

Monday, March 31, 2014

This year your libido energies peak to an unprecedented level. You seem to sleuth your way through problems and come up with remarkable solutions. Others will come to you for help more often; they admire your ingenuity. You will tend to be me-oriented this year, so try to temper any excessive egotism. If you are single, you could open up to a very intriguing person who you feel you have a lot to learn from. The two of you could become quite the dynamic duo. If you are attached, your relationship quality will depend on your ability to remain sensitive to your sweetie. A fellow ARIES could become even more important to you this year.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) A plaintiff in an auto-accident lawsuit, who is claiming an injury that has impaired her inclination for "social activities," was ordered by a judge in Nova Scotia to prove her loss by showing a reduction in the time she spent on Facebook. Justice Glen McDougall ruled that Joanne Conrod must disclose her log-in and log-out information but need not reveal her complete Facebook profile. (2) Arizona-based Christian "exorcist" Bob Larson, who claims to have performed more than 20,000 demon-expulsions, recently branched out by allegedly (in front of CNN's Anderson Cooper) cleansing a client in Norway -- via the Internet-enabled phone application Skype. (Given the fragility of computer operating systems, critics -- including "mainstream" exorcists -- find it puzzling that a demon could not disable Larson's.) ■ Kevin Walters, 21, staged an emotional, though unsuccessful, one-man, chained-to-the-door protest in March to prevent the closing of a commercial rest stop along the Jane Addams Memorial Tollway near Des Plaines, Ill. Ultimately, the Des Plaines Oasis, housing shops and fast-food restaurants, will be demolished as part of a highway-widening project. Walters told WBBM Radio that his poignant attachment to the oasis was because his parents had told him it was where he was conceived as they returned home from a 1992 Phil Collins concert.
