Wave of new Spanish and Italian-influenced restaurants continues with Bar Monette in Downtown Santa Monica

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

The wave of European influenced restaurants seems to only be gathering momentum as celebrated Canadian chef Sean MacDonald is about to open his restaurant in Santa Monica.

Called Bar Monette, it will fill the space formerly occupied by Little Ruby, at the prime location of 109 Santa Monica Blvd. The intimate 900 square-foot eatery will open on Friday April 7 and offer around 26 covers inside, including standing room and 12 outside on a patio area that benefits from the beautiful ocean view.

Not only is this venture the first for MacDonald in the US, it's his first outside of his home country of Canada. Originally hailing from Calgary, he was named Canada's best young chef in 2016 by San Pellegrino.

"I was getting a number of offers for different things and I thought this was my chance to expand, but I felt like Calgary was a little too small to open up a business. So I thought why don't I go to the biggest place in Canada, which is Toronto," MacDonald says.

That restaurant, called ēst, earned recognition for its wine bar atmosphere and six-course menu, but it changed management during the pandemic. At roughly the same time, MacDonald met his now-wife, Monette Moio, who works in the film and television industry as an actress and stunt double.

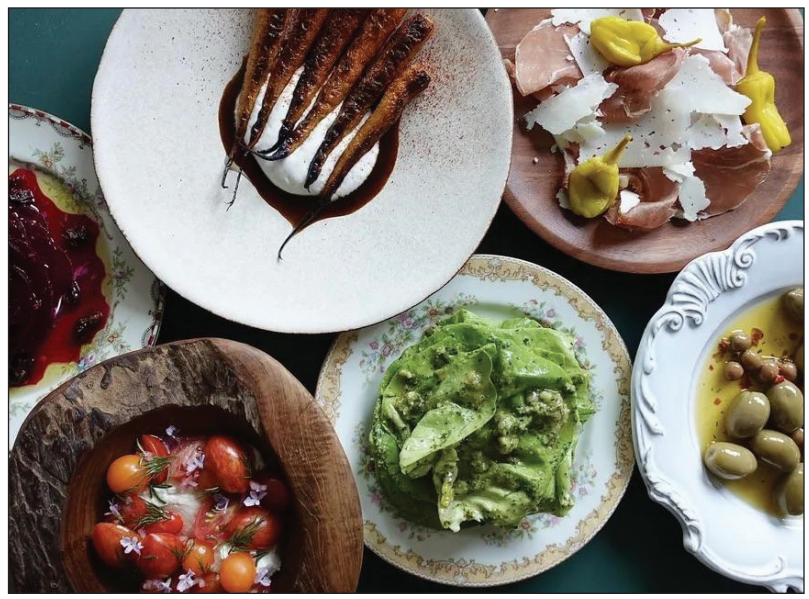

"I started making trips to California and we knew, we knew right away. It was an easy decision. And I was like, 'God, this is the place I should have been my whole life,'" MacDonald laughs.

The new eatery will offer refined bar snacks, high-end touches like caviar and truffles, plus blistered Neapolitan-style pizzas, combining both Spanish and Italian-themed ingredients. However, MacDonald says that he doesn't want to call it Mediterranean, per sé.

"I feel like as soon as you use the term Mediterranean, most people assume that includes the other culinary heavy hitter in the region, Greece, as well, but I didn't want to do that, I wanted to focus purely on Spanish and Italian. I'm basically combining two of my favorite cuisines."

Teachers push for more input in superintendent search and future district decisions

GRACE INEZ ADAMS
SMDP Staff Writer

Just over a week before applications are due for the superintendent position, the Santa Monica-Malibu Unified School District Board of Education approved a written description of what they are looking for in candidates.

The Board held a special meeting last week on March 29 to discuss the position description for the top post and made several changes to an initial draft.

These included adding language stating that candidates should value the "input and involvement of teachers" in decision making processes, have an "understanding of the needs of special education and English language learner students and clarifying that the board is open to ideas about new ways to improve the district.

The changes came following comments from several community members including parents and teachers who spoke at the meeting.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING
BEFORE THE SANTA MONICA PLANNING COMMISSION

SUBJECT: Development Agreement 13DEV-010
315 Colorado Avenue
APPLICANT: Macerich SMP LLP
PROPERTY OWNER: Macerich SMP LLP

A public hearing will be held by the Planning Commission to consider recommendations to the City Council for the following:

Request from the Applicant ("Macerich") to terminate the Development Agreement (13DEV-010) that was originally approved by the City Council on April 22, 2014 for a portion of the Santa Monica Place retail center that was previously occupied by the ArcLight Cinemas movie theater. The 2014 Development Agreement was necessary at that time to allow for additional building height to a maximum of 84 feet for the conversion of the then-vacant retail space on the third floor into a multi-screen movie theater complex. Community benefits negotiated as part of the Development Agreement have all been satisfied or were directly related to the movie theater use. This third floor tenant space is currently vacant and Macerich has leased the space to a new museum, a permitted use in the Downtown Community Plan's Transit Adjacent Zone. The building also complies with current Downtown Community Plan development standards for height.

Pursuant to Santa Monica Municipal Code (SMMC) Section 9.60.150, proposed termination of a Development Agreement requires the Planning Commission to hold a public hearing and make its recommendation to the City Council for consideration with the termination request.

DATE/TIME: WEDNESDAY, April 19, 2023 AT 6:00 PM

LOCATION: City Council Chamber, Second Floor, Santa Monica City Hall, 1685 Main Street, Santa Monica, California

OPINION FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Erythritol Ever After?

Something for nothing. More bang for our buck. It's human nature to seek value in things, even in food. We've seemingly found freebies in low calorie, diet products like artificial sweeteners and sugar alcohols. Something for nothing – all the taste and fewer calories – but what's the catch? Are they too good to be true?

A recent study in Nature Medicine suggests that, yes, one in particular may be exactly that. Erythritol, a popular sugar alcohol, is used in products from protein powders, toothpaste and ice cream to a host of other foods, particularly keto friendly products. Our bodies produce low levels of erythritol during glucose metabolism, but much of the sweetener used today is commercially produced using corn or wheat starch, making it an ultra-processed food. Because low levels of erythritol also exist in foods like grapes, peaches, mushrooms, cheese and even beer and wine, it's thought to be 'natural'.

Erythritol took off as another 'something for nothing' sweetener. It's even used to sweeten monk fruit to make it taste more like sugar. Many things with this sugar alcohol remain unclear, but it is reported to be excreted by our bodies unchanged, which is why it has close to zero calories and doesn't spike our blood sugar. It's almost as if it's sugar incognito!

The study spurred much conversation because of its subjects. A group of about 4,000 people who were undergoing cardiac assessment, all of whom were nearly age 60 or over, made up the participants. The study linked use of erythritol to cardiac arrest, stroke and ultimately death. According to the Cleveland Clinic, the results seem to show that erythritol made platelets easier to activate and form clots. Additionally, sugar alcohols were shown to remain in eight people's blood streams for days after they had eaten ice cream containing erythritol. (Naysayers rightfully call that number to issue).

None of us like bad news, especially those of us who may use this sweetener, but I got so much blowback from social media regarding my discussion of the study, that I decided to go to the source. Dr. Rigved Tadwalkar, a cardiologist in Santa Monica, has been named an 'emerging voice in the field' and was quoted in articles discussing the study on Healthline.com and in Prevention Magazine. I came across his name while researching the study and decided to contact him for an interview. Dr. Tadwalkar is as charismatic during our meeting as he is in the news clips in which he's featured. He discusses the study in a digestible manner and is cautious in telling his patients to adopt artificial sweeteners in any capacity other than sparingly.

"It makes sense that anything we can do early on, from a preventative standpoint to try to reduce our cardiovascular risk factors, is always of value. So just because you're younger, it doesn't put you in a category where you should potentially think of it as safe. Consume it sparingly."

IMPLICATIONS.

The study's outcomes beg the question: "Should we ingest erythritol?" European countries demand studies to show that a substance is not harmful before they add it to their food sources. In America, we do the opposite. We use it until it is proven, beyond a doubt, that it is not only harmful, but deadly.

"It's honestly probably better to have the real thing," Dr. Tadwalkar says. "There is some evidence that, for many people, real sugar can satiate the palate better than artificial sweeteners. Sugar activates the brains reward centers and releases dopamine which is a neurotransmitter that is associated with satisfaction and pleasure, satiation, things like this. This can create a feeling of fullness and contentment that can lead to a decrease in cravings for even more sweet foods. Artificial sweeteners don't really activate the same brain reward centers and, as a result, they don't really quite release the dopamine in the same way or to the same extent."

Given the fact that older people with chronic health conditions, like heart disease, diabetes and a predisposition to stroke, may seek to lower their sugar, thereby using erythritol or other sugar alcohols, the findings of this study may have deeper real-world implications.

My question is, what foods containing erythritol are we so attached to that we would risk our health to eat them? What is more important than health?

"Obviously we're not going to eliminate sweet foods, it's a daily part of life, it's a part of living and it's a source of contentment, we just have to do it the

TEACHERS

to lead the search, did meet with parent groups and teachers, Catherine Handleman, a kindergarten teacher at Roosevelt Elementary School said she felt it was insufficient and that her voice and others were not adequately heard.

"Teachers were sent one email concerning the search process and given less than a week's notice to attend a meeting in which they could discuss and give their critical feedback for the important criteria needed in a new superintendent," she said.

According to Handleman, the meeting lasted no more than 20 minutes, which she said was "not sufficient time for all to be heard or even really have a thoughtful discussion."

Stefanie Mathewson, a second grade teacher at Roosevelt echoed these sentiments and added that she did not feel there had been enough communication between teachers and district leaders in the past. At the Feb. 22 board meeting she shared a letter she said had been signed by 157 of the district's 615 teachers, asking board members to take this into account in the superintendent search process as well as several other traits they hoped to see.

"The severe lack of connection between district administration and teachers "on the ground" that existed in the previous administration is something we wish to proactively avoid in the next administration," it stated.

Board members were responsive to these concerns and unanimously agreed to add a point about teacher involvement, but also acknowledged the limitations of what could realistically be included in the description, which was already over four pages long.

"Everything can't be reflected as clearly as everyone wants in here…" Board member Laurie Lieberman said. "But I will say no matter what… that's an issue that I do feel is an appropriate thing that we want to ask applicants about."

With the application deadline around the corner Lead Consultant Peggy Lynch said that the role of the position description will largely be to inform interview questions in addition to helping recruit qualified candidates. She said they had already received 50 requests for applications for the position.

"What this helps us do and what all the input helps us do is formulate the questions that you really want to ask every candidate," she said. "It helps you really think about 'what are the real priorities, what are the things we really want to know about?'"

Leadership Associates will screen the applicants in accordance with the description and recommend candidates to the board that seem to be the best fit. However, Board President Maria Leon-Vasquez clarified that board members will have access to all of the applications and be able to review the materials themselves and ultimately choose who to interview.

The application deadline is April 7 by 5:00 p.m. and interviews will be scheduled for May 9 and 10.

The Life Beneath our Feet

CRIS GUTIERREZ AND JAMES OLIVER

After the rains, walking outside and breathing deeply, sweet, crisp air is refreshing. Clear skies heighten resplendent tree canopies. Plants and flowers burst with color. Nature's vivaciousness infuses a sense of vitality. Each step can feel lively. Life abounds. What can be surprising is how much diverse life can abound beneath our feet.

That's easy to forget or forego when traipsing along a paved sidewalk or street, but step into a garden or along an untrammeled natural path and be tickled by the life in the soil below. The reality is soil is complex, a wondrous realm of elements that in one sense have been decomposing since the history of Earth began. Soil teems with myriad microbial life: bacteria, fungi, nematodes, protozoa, invertebrates or arthropods (worms, "roly-polies," sow-bugs, etc.) that weave, wriggle and channel through the soil's microbiome, in fact a "micro-food web."

Nature's understory—the ecosystem's activity underground— is one where healthy soil beholds mycelium, snowy lace, a kind of glue, to bond organic matter in textured networks. As fungi and bacteria digest organic matter to make available nutrients for plants, the network of mycelium transfuses those with trace minerals, nitrogen and other chemicals, along with water, to roots that carry back and distribute needed nourishment for microbial organisms below.

This constancy of cycles underfoot, ordinarily unseen by even the most attentive gardener, includes the natural carbon cycle, which enables photosynthesis essential to our life and strengthening our capacity to confront the climate crisis. In photosynthesis CO_2 uses sunlight to create energy in the forms of sugars and carbohydrates for us to eat, releasing oxygen for us to breathe. Organic carbon is then sequestered in the soil for a diverse microbiome that also prevents CO_2 spewing into the atmosphere as a greenhouse gas. (Photosynthesis extensively takes place in oceans, too.)

We hear a lot about the benefits of trees for oxygen, attesting to the expanse of 1,800 plus volunteer pilots, AFW is a nonprofit organization that arranges no-cost, non-emergency air travel service that provides access to medical care, transport veterans, rescue animals and aid in disaster relief.

Back in 2003, Stephen and Joanna were living in Hawaii. They were both already vaguely aware of the AFW and indeed the whole concept of a non-emergency volunteer air transport service, as there are a few across the country. One fateful morning they received a mail solicitation specifically relating to AFW and decided to investigate further. The rest, as Stephen says, is history.

Now, the two reside in Carefree, Arizona having bought a property in what's called a residential airpark, which is a community specifically designed around an airport where the residents each park their own airplane in a hangar usually attached to the home or integrated into their house.

"Right now, I'm sitting in my living room and I'm looking out the front door at our hangar," Stephen laughs. "In an aviator's mind I guess we really do live a blessed life."

Just one example of someone who has benefited from their kind, generous work is 21-year-old Teylor Dunn. Three years ago, she was working at the Lincoln County Fair in Afton, Wyoming, when a gas explosion engulfed her and two colleagues. Fighting for her life, Teylor had second and third degree burns over 49 percent of her body. She required multiple surgeries and many subsequent trips between her hometown and Salt Lake City's University of Utah Burn Center, which Stephen and Joanna provided.

"Teylor had to go back and forth for treatment and it's normally about a four hour drive," Stephen says. "At first, it took them over six hours each way, because she had to stop to get out and stretch. I'm told that your skin grows so fast that the doctors didn't want her to sit for too long in one place. So she'd have to exercise her skin. We could take her down in an hour. She would go to her appointments and we would bring her back that afternoon and do it all in one day.

"I think for Teylor, we've flown her 28 times in total, she's what we call a frequent flyer. And you just would never know now. So I've invited her to accompany me to the Endeavor Awards as my special guest and highlight her story in front of the crowd."

In years past, the event has drawn some of the biggest names in aviation, names that even non-aviators have probably heard of, including Chesley Sullenberger — the US Airways pilot who landed Flight 1549 on the Hudson River in New York City in January 2009, Barbara Morgan — teacher and a former NASA astronaut who was on the backup crew for the ill-fated 1986 STS-51-L Space Shuttle Challenger mission and Scott Parazynski — a physician, former NASA astronaut and veteran of five Shuttle flights and seven spacewalks.

Headquartered in Santa Monica, AFW flies approximately 5,000 missions every year, which roughly equates to over a dozen missions every day. Missions are entirely funded by the pilots themselves and only the fuel is tax deductible.

"At the end of the day, we get to fly and we get to help people, I can't really ask for more than that," Stephen says.

The Endeavor Awards themselves were established by the Angel Flight West Organization. This is the ninth year and will also mark the 40th anniversary of AFW and its 100,000th mission.

Another volunteer pilot, Shakeel Mozaffar of Angel Flight Northeast will also receive the Endeavor Award at this year's event. Mozaffar has flown more than 45 missions and 58,230 miles over the past 27 years, including long-distance disaster relief flights to help those in need.

GARDEN

of the Amazon and rainforests to be "the lungs of Earth." Rain forests, like gardens and urban agriculture, are part of natural ecosystems and habitats embedded in soil, emerging from soil, decomposing into soil. Caring about soil health matters for personal and planetary wellbeing.

Happily, the adage, "We are what we eat," may be extended to "The soil is what is eaten." The latter is the case both in terms of fungi and bacteria digestion feeding plant roots, noted above, and in terms of compost converting kitchen and food scraps or gardening trimmings and other compostable items (untreated cardboard, unbleached paper, bamboo products, etc.) into a rich soil nutrient. Soil humus is the sable-colored organic material from the decay of plants or animals. Over billions of years, Nature's processes and cycles have sustained the soil.

Today, recycling the organic materials that we use in our daily habits for composting, instead of trashing those for the landfill, means that we can contribute to and relate to Nature genuinely as a daily practice that can enrich the soil. Composting also prevents the food-stuff and other things from breaking down and exuding methane, an intense greenhouse gas, into the atmosphere. The California law and local ordinance that require us to recycle organic ingredients to be composted reflects a policy that regards the natural systems as primary to benefit us and strengthen climate resiliency.

The magic of turning what we eat into compost can be fun, which is why so many kids thrill to imagine their breakfast, lunch or dinner, after months, becoming loamy, dark soil with earthworms and other wrigglers that give way to children's laughter or shrills when held. Compost is key to regenerative gardening, farming and agriculture. "Re-generative" means growing the soil's vitality to produce nutritious foods and hearty habitat. By contrast, synthetic fertilizers, often fossil fuel based, can cause havoc with our environment as those can displace essential microbes, cause salinification and leave inorganic nitrogen to wash away into the watershed, waterways and oceans.

Regenerative practices in home gardens, community/communal gardens, urban agriculture or landscaping rely on our best ecological understandings evinced in millennia of Indigenous knowledge, close observations, and restorative environmental science studies. Regenerative practices also reflect humanity's interdependence with Nature. Santa Monica's ground-breaking Sustainability Rights Ordinance acknowledges the rights of Nature and the community's rights as fundamental, codifying that reality. Fostering our relationship with Nature, indeed appreciating that we are a part of Nature, is confirmed as we delve into the soil's story as our own and the life beneath our feet grounds us.

Come and learn more with James Oliver, a mycologist, and celebrating Earth Month at Santa Monica's Main Street Community Gardens, Saturday, April 8, at 9 – 11, for our next in a series on the soil microbiome. The workshop begins at 10. See you in the soil!

will incorporate lots of marble and shades of green accompanied by old-school china plates and vintage silverware. The menu is made up mostly of a mixture of snack-style foods that pair well with an appropriate wine. Neapolitan pizzas, with the puffy crust for example, Margherita pizzas, plus offerings like cheesy Comte and raclette pie with truffle honey, together with jamon, Manchego cheese and peppers, plus charred carrots with horseradish and celeriac gastrique.

Nestled in-between Stout and the BOA Steakhouse in the bustling epicenter of the city's Downtown district, Bar Monette is more or less right in the middle of Santa Monica's tourist quarter, just a stone's throw from the Third Street Promenade and the Pier.

"It was like, right-place right-time. As soon as I saw this space, I thought, this is perfect. I already had the concept worked out so I was looking at other sites too," MacDonald says. "We were looking at Beverly Hills and West Hollywood for the original launch and the plan is to eventually open up additional locations, but this seemed like a better plan, to start off smaller and then open bigger sites later on down the road."

According to MacDonald, he was originally intending to just have walk-ins, without offering reservations and open slowly and quietly while the restaurant finds its footing. However, that plan seems to have been abandoned.

"We started to get so many inquiries that I decided to make a reservation system because so many people were asking how

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 3)

Welcome to your year of improved leisure. Life will often bring you your favorite company, mood and activities. Because you pride yourself in working hard and getting results, you'll need to adjust to the gorgeous, relaxed vibe that sets in. More highlights: Developments at work have you helming a key project. You'll be strengthened by different kinds of exercise. A cash win delights! Virgo and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 12, 2, 25, 30 and 16.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You've already thought enough about the problem, and now your mind is going in circles about it. Interrupt this spiral to nowhere by reconnecting with your body. The breakthrough will be physical.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The fear of success is not a fear of getting your desire but a fear of the pressures that will come along with it. How will you sustain your status? Will others be envious? Address those questions and lose your fear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). The world won't exactly sync to your timing, but take a breath, lean back and try to feel how the beat is landing, and you'll soon click right into it. Today, it will be easier to follow a rhythm than to set one.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Approval is a weird thing. Sometimes it's given when you don't need it, and other times you feel you desperately need it and it doesn't come. Don't read too much into that. People approve or don't for their own reasons.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You won't have to address, forgive or avenge the bad behavior of others. All you need to do is ignore it. Leave it alone and let it resolve itself. What you neglect will eventually diminish and disappear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Take everything a little slower than you need to. Pause to get the response. Listening well requires you to leave plenty of space before and after what you say, not only to avoid interruption but to allow thorough processing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You leave the comfort of knowing things. The things you want to know include where to land, who to talk to, how to behave, what to do... and all is revealed in the thing right before you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's only after the struggle, the sacrifice, the early mornings and late nights, and the investment of time, money and energy that you'll see results. Any result coming before you put the work in can't be trusted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Let go of pride or the need to put on a front. The truth of the matter is, you've lost something. Everyone you know has also lost something. Hearts will communicate quietly through this shared sense of loss.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Fear can be a sign that you should run away, but more likely, it's a sign that you should run toward. The opportunity for personal growth is abundant when you go toward what you're afraid of.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your experience of events will be different from another person's, and both are valid. It could also be argued that it's not how things really are. In the mirrored world of the mind, there are many illusions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Every solution creates new problems, so don't be in too much of a rush to fix things. Pace yourself and take pictures. There's something about this scene you'll miss one day.
