Santa Monica to host 43rd Annual Venice Family Clinic Art Walk & Auction

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

In 1979 when the Venice Family Clinic was on the brink of closing its doors and a low-income community on the edge of losing its only access to quality affordable medical care, local artists came to the rescue by hosting an emergency art walk and auction. Now 43 years later, the clinic provides quality healthcare to over 45,000 patients in need a year and this annual event continues to be an epic community fundraiser.

This year, for the first time and following two virtual events, the Venice Family Clinic Art Walk & Auction is coming to a gallery in Santa Monica. From April 15 through May 1, over 200 donated artworks will be on display at Santa

State water restrictions would have little effect on drought-conscious Santa Monica

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

As Californians are asked to further cut back on their water use, Santa Monicans must simply keep up the good work — at least for now.

With citywide water use down around 18-20 percent from 2013 baseline levels, new water restrictions recommended by Governor Gavin Newsom last Monday, March 28, will not result in belt-tightening locally, but local water experts say there's always more to be done.

Newsom's executive order directs the State Water Resources Control Board to consider requiring local suppliers to move to the second step of their conservation plans, which assumes water scarcity of 20 percent. About 140 cities and retailers are already operating at that level — including Santa Monica.

"If you look at the executive order Governor Newsom put out, they they're asking all the [water] agencies to be at a level two response, which is 20 percent reduction in water use — or water demand — from each agency," Santa Monica Water Resources Manager Sunny Wang said, later adding, "We've been at that level since 2014 already ... The executive order wants everybody to be on that page now, but Santa Monica has been there for quite some time."

Monica Place and open to all members of the public. This year will also feature the clinic's first ever NFT art auction and these digital art pieces will be on display both in the gallery and on Nifty Gateway.

Over 200 artworks will be on display at Santa Monica Place

"Every winning bid funds healthcare for people in need, so it's a great opportunity to start a collection of meaningful, beautiful art and also give to a very critical cause that's helping people right in your neighborhood," said Erin Harnisch, Venice Family Clinic Event Director.

While Venice Family Clinic has expanded to include 17 sites in its network of care, which stretches from the Santa Monica Mountains through the South Bay, a significant portion of its life changing services take place right in Santa Monica.

The largest clinic in their network is The Simms/Mann Health and Wellness Center at 2509 Pico Boulevard, which provides a wide range of medical services including primary care, mental health services, dental care, vision care, chronic pain treatment, nutrition education, stress management and food distribution. Venice Family Clinic also runs a teen clinic out of Santa Monica High School and has a street medicine team that is deployed to assist patients experiencing homelessness in Santa Monica.

The Venice Family Clinic team is excited to bring its largest annual fundraiser to Santa Monica and hopes that this will allow a new group of people to learn about and support the clinic.

"I think one of the things that is most exciting about the Venice art walk is that it attracts so many people. In a normal year we have five or six thousand people that attend the event, so it's a really great way to get the word out about the Venice Family Clinic and garner new supporters," said Harnisch.

The event has a long history of support from legendary local artists. The initial art walk and auction was spearheaded by renowned architect Frank Gehry, who was integral in encouraging other artists from Venice and Ocean Park's thriving art scene to take part. Some of these artists include Lita Albuquerque, John Baldessari, Larry Bell, Billy Al Bengston, Laddie John Dill, Ed Moses and Ed Ruscha, who all donated works and opened their studios for public tours, which became the art walk component of the event.

Several of these artists or their estates continue to participate in the event to this day. The event maintains a focus on highlighting local artists while also attracting many star artists from across the country. Some of this year's featured artists include Gary Baseman, Bumblebeelovesyou, Fritz Chesnut, Rosson Crow, Sam Durant, FriendsWithYou, Alexandra Grant, Lauren Greenfield and Brenna Youngblood.

The 2022 Venice Art Walk Signature Artist is artist, activist and Angeleno Andrea Bowers, whose work addresses contemporary political issues such as immigration, environmental activism and sexual assault.

"Health care is a human right. I'm so grateful the Venice Family Clinic exists so that people in need have access to quality health care they can afford. The Clinic alone cannot meet the tremendous necessity for health care. Our society must do more—for places like the Clinic, for their patients and the millions of uninsured in this country," said Bowers.

The art walk gallery will also feature an exclusive edition of 44 prints called "Sky's the Limit" by Japanese American artist and Los Angeles artist Gajin Fujita.

Bidding on the artwork will begin on April 15 and conclude at 6 p.m. on May 1. Physical artworks will be auctioned at artsy.net/veniceartwalk and the NFT auction will take place on Nifty Gateway. The gallery is in the 1st floor East Court of Santa Monica Place and will be open to the public from noon to 6:00 p.m., April 15 to May 1. More information on the event and featured artwork can be found at venicefamilyclinic.org/veniceartwalk.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Send comments to editor@smdp.com

This letter is to correct claims made by Airport Commission Joseph Schmitz in his March 28, 2022 letter, to shed light on the Airport Commission's Brown Act violations and as a plea to City Council for a change to the composition, conduct and accountability of the Airport Commission.

The Commissioner's statement that Santa Monica has failed to curb children's lead poisoning by toxic avgas is not supported by the Santa Clara study and reflects a motive dressed up as a pretext of health concerns for children. The Santa Clara Study found: the statewide average for blood lead levels in children ages 0-18 is between 1.5% and 2.6% depending on age. Of the Santa Clara children residing within 1.5 miles of the airport, 1.7% had elevated blood lead levels which is consistent with the state average. The study does not support the Commissioner's claims.

Most general aviation airplanes are required to use 100 octane low lead (100LL) aviation fuel, which admittedly contains two milliliters of lead per gallon. Using 100LL is an FAA requirement, not a pilot choice. Despite pressure from pilots, the FAA has not yet approved unleaded 100 fuel. The importance of ensuring a pilot can self-fuel his or her own aircraft is so critical to safety that Santa Monica incorporated it into its Municipal Code at 10.04.06.140(a), "The right of a pilot to fuel his or her own aircraft pursuant to Federal law shall be respected."

As a resident of Sunset Park and a general aviation pilot who flies for public benefit, I am a member of the class most highly exposed to lead. As a mother, I too am concerned for the health and welfare of children. Like virtually everyone in the aviation community proverbially, "waiting in the wings", the switch to unleaded aviation fuel cannot come soon enough which is why the Commissioner's misleading statements suggest something much bigger is at play.

While City Council's composition has changed since the September 2015 statement identifying closing the airport as a priority ahead of homelessness and infrastructure, concerns that certain members of City Council receive developer incentives to close the airport remain. Because the airport provides approximate $250 million in annual economic impact, 1,500 jobs, not to mention the critical emergency relief role it plays if a natural disaster occurs such as an earthquake or wildfire and as the airport closest to UCLA, it serves numerous charitable organizations that use the airport to transport patients for specialized medical care, serves veterans, delivers rescued animals to new homes and the search and rescue missions conducted by the Civil Air Patrol squadron based at the airport , concerns about developer incentives remain.

The Commissioner "...plead for transparency" reporting the minutes sanitized his comments related to "Item 7) Commissioner Items." However, the agenda contains no "Item 7" nor any "Commissioner Items." Despite it not being on the agenda, the Commission permitted the discussion nonetheless, a Brown violation.

During the meeting (at 1:28:27) Chair Andrew Wilder shared his screen, displaying an email sent to him from Alan Levenson confirming Chair Wilder's "similar take on the City Manager report" and, "Between us I have a call scheduled with David White in a couple of weeks" and "Ben (Wang) found a clause in the Atlantic lease regarding the north fuel farm and leak remediation and more that demonstrates, at least to me, that there are paths out of the below ground fuel farm." At 1:39:40, Chair Wilder mentioned that Ben Wang had sent several messages in "the chat" during the Airport Commission meeting. The chat is not accessible to the public. This raises questions of why the Airport Commissioners are having back door communications with a sleuth lawyer employed by a real estate firm at all, let alone during Airport Commission meetings.

Commissioner Schmitz plea for transparency asks, "The City Council should now direct the City Manager to stop enabling Atlantic Aviation's sale of leaded avgas" just as the undisclosed communications between Alan Levenson and attorney Ben Wang surreptitiously discussed. These communications should do more than raise eyebrows. Commissioner's Schmitz and Chair Wilder should be immediately removed from the Airport Commission and the City Attorney investigate whether acts prohibited by Government Code §54959 have occurred.

The Airport Commission is void of any women, tenants of the airport and pilots who actually fly airplanes in/out of the Airport. This imbalance is not right. It is not just. It is not the progressive principles upon which Santa Monica prides itself. It is exclusionary. It is discriminatory. It is wrong.

City Council should disband the Airport Commission, direct the City Attorney to investigate the violations and/or require, effective immediately, the Airport Commission be comprised of residents who possess skills and expertise in professional fields of aviation or aviation related fields of benefit to SMO.

Give the Gift of Life, Donate Blood at Malibu City Hall on April 8

The City of Malibu has teamed up with UCLA Health to host a Blood Drive at City Hall in the Multipurpose Room on Friday, April 8, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. City Hall is located at 23825 Stuart Ranch Road.

"Giving blood is one of the most powerful ways that regular people can make a big difference for people whose lives depend on the supply of donated blood," said Mayor Paul Grisanti. "It is yet another positive sign of our improving COVID-19 rates that we can host an in-person blood drive at City Hall, so I encourage everyone in Malibu to join in this important effort."

The COVID-19 pandemic has severely reduced blood donations and blood supplies due to facility closures, stay-at-home orders and other impacts. Donated blood is badly needed every day for surgeries, emergencies and regular medical procedures. Blood supplies are used in any major emergency such as earthquakes and other natural disasters.

With COVID-19 rates continuing to improve, the City is proud to be able to once again safely host this life-saving activity at City Hall. Facemasks are no longer required, but are strongly recommended, while inside, in line with the updated Los Angeles County Health Officer Order as of March 4. See the Order: http://publichealth.lacounty.gov/media/Coronavirus/docs/HOO/HOO_SaferReturnWorkCommunity.pdf.

Please register for an appointment in advance at www.ucedonor.com (click on Blood Drives, and enter MALIBU or 90265 in the Zip Code or Account Code box). City Hall is located at 23825 Stuart Ranch Road, Malibu. Bring a photo ID, and drink plenty of water and eat well before and after giving blood.

Seven Tips for Managing Caregiver Stress During National Stress Awareness Month This April

Stress can damage your health if you do not manage it properly—especially if you are caring for a loved one with Alzheimer's disease or another dementia-related illness. As part of National Stress Awareness Month this April, the Alzheimer's Foundation of America (AFA) is providing seven tips to help caregivers manage their stress.

"Stress management and self-care are essential for every Alzheimer's caregiver. Untreated stress increases the risk of caregiver burnout and can cause high blood pressure, heart problems, anxiety, depression, and numerous other health issues," said Jennifer Reeder, LCSW, AFA's Director of Educational and Social Services. "Being proactive in dealing with stress has both short-term and long-term benefits for caregivers' physical, mental, and emotional health, which is why it's something that they should prioritize."

AFA suggests the following tips for Alzheimer's caregivers to prevent and manage their stress:

Flexibility helps. A caregiver's attitude plays a huge role in stress levels—if the caregiver is calm and relaxed, it helps the individual living with Alzheimer's to be as well. Conversely, an angry, agitated caregiver increases the chances that the person for whom they are caring will be angry and agitated too. Be adaptable, be positive, and aim for constructive solutions to changing situations.

Deal with what you can control. You cannot control every stress-causing factor, but you can control how you react to them. Focusing on finding solutions to the problem can help reduce the stress it's causing.

Mind your health. Inadequate rest, poor diet and lack of exercise can all exacerbate stress (and create other health problems as well). As best you can, prioritize getting sleep, eating right, drinking plenty of water and being active. You cannot provide quality care to a loved one if you don't take care of yourself.

Clear and refresh your mind. Exercise, yoga, meditating, listening to music, walking, or even taking a few deep breaths can all help relax the mind and reduce stress. Find something that works for you and do it regularly!

Take things one day at a time. Resolving everything at once is both impossible and unrealistic—don't hold yourself to that unreasonable expectation. Prioritize, set practical goals, do your best to achieve them, and take things one day at a time.

Stay in touch. There are so many ways to stay socially connected with family and friends—visits, FaceTime, phone calls, text messages, and emails, just to name a few. Disconnecting from your support structure and staying bottled-up increases stress.

Be open with your feelings. Sometimes just talking about your stress can help relieve it. Whether it's with someone in your support structure, a professional or even a stranger, don't be reluctant to open up. AFA's Helpline has licensed social workers available for caregivers seven days to provide support or even just listen.

The AFA Helpline is available seven days a week to help provide information and support regarding caregiver stress and other caregiving questions. Connect with a licensed social worker by calling 866-232-8484, web chatting at www.alzfdn.org or sending a text message to 646-586-5283. The web chat and text message features can serve individuals in more than 90 different languages.

WATER CONSERVATION

If the Governor's water cutbacks come to be, those come from cities and local water districts, not the state, with members of Newsom's administration saying allowing local retailers to set conservation needs is the best approach in a state of nearly 40 million people where water needs vary.

"We live in a state that has many different hydrological zones, many different water usage scenarios and that one size fits all doesn't really work in California," Jared Blumenfeld, secretary of the California Environmental Protection Agency, said.

Blumenfeld spoke to reporters after Newsom, a Democrat, issued an executive order outlining new actions aimed at reducing water use on the heels of a historically dry January through March. The governor has previously called on all Californians to reduce their water use by 15 percent compared to 2020, but it's not a mandate and so far total savings sit at 6 percent.

Like much of the U.S. West, California is experiencing severe or extreme drought across most of its land. Though it rained last Monday on both ends of the state, state officials offered a sobering assessment of the state's water picture.

"How we protect this precious resource has to be baked into everything we do," Blumenfeld said. "Our lives here in California are really going to be shaped by water scarcity going forward."

Roughly 385 cities and other local water districts have to submit drought response plans to the state detailing six levels of conservation actions based on water scarcity. As less water becomes available, the local water districts adopt more aggressive controls that establish how and when people can use water. Those suppliers, which include Santa Monica, serve more than 36 million people, or more than 90 percent of the state's residents.

Additional restrictions are not currently in the pipeline for Santa Monica, which already provides a whole slate of incentives and programs to encourage water conservation.

"We offer free low-flow showerheads. We offer high efficiency, low-flow faucet aerators for hand sinks and also for kitchen sinks," Santa Monica Sustainability Analyst Thomas Fleming said. "We also offer toilet dye strips to check for leaks in your toilets." Fleming said the city also offers rebates on appliances like toilets ($100) and washing machines ($300), plus the popular cash for grass rebate, offering $3.50 per square foot of turf grass replacement, up to $6,000.

Wang said Santa Monica's Water Resources Department focuses more on education of current ordinances (such as not washing sidewalks with water and not using overhead spray irrigation between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.) than further restrictions or penalties.

"We try to educate — we don't want to punish," Wang said. "I don't remember the last time we issued a fine for anybody exceeding their water use allowance. We use those opportunities to educate and start that dialogue."

One key tool for the City is consultations, where residents can request staff come to their properties and suggest ways to be more water wise. Sometimes consultations come during high usage calls, when residents get a nasty surprise in their water bill, only to discover they've had an undetected leak for weeks.

Fortunately, those may soon be a thing of the past, with Wang and Fleming sharing a new city program that could alert residents to leaks within days, instead of months: AMI (advanced metering infrastructure) smart meters, which track water use in real time.

"The real advantage of AMI is automatic leak detection and alerting," Fleming said. "That's huge. That's a huge conservation tool."

Wang agreed.

"Just an example: Right now, the meters are read manually; every two months, we're able to read one meter, it's because that's just how long it takes us to make that route back again," Wang described. "So, if you have a leak, you may not detect it for two months until you get that bill ... with this, you will know within a day if you have a leak or not."

While Santa Monica will see a smooth transition from level one to level two restrictions, level three (a cut of 30 percent of the City's overall water use) could be the one that really affects residents, ushering in things like a drought rate structure (meaning: higher water bills) or other restrictions.

> "The executive order wants everybody to be on that page now, but Santa Monica has been there for quite some time.

Newsom's executive order asks the state water board to consider a ban on watering of grass that is used purely for ornamental purposes, such as grass on highway medians or in office parking lots. Green spaces such as baseball fields or parks likely wouldn't be affected. Banning watering of such grass could save an amount of water annually equivalent to what's used by more than half a million homes, Newsom's office said in a press release.

The state water board has until May 25 to consider the actions Newsom outlined.

Beyond limiting outdoor watering and urging more conservation, the order puts in place permitting rules for new wells to ensure they don't overdraft groundwater that people rely on for drinking. It also eases the processes for permitting groundwater recharge projects and protecting fish and wildlife that suffer from drought including salmon. And he's directed the state water board to boost inspections aimed at catching illegal water diversions.

In non-drought years, groundwater makes up about a third of the state's water supply. But during droughts, when less water is available from mountain snowpack and state reservoirs, the state turns to groundwater for about two-thirds of its supply, said Wade Crowfoot, secretary of the California Natural Resources Agency.

Kathleen Ronayne of the Associated Press contributed to this report.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 4)

Out with the old. Like sandbags dropped from a hot air balloon, you'll toss then rise. Your spirit is made even more buoyant with excellent company coming into your realm. You'll share laughter, good food and novel experiences with talented friends. Also featured: a change of purpose, hearts on fire and poetic justice. Sagittarius and Leo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 6, 9, 2, 28 and 12.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). One thing you can count on is that however good or bad a situation may be, it will change. The impermanence of today's situation is what makes it precious and beautiful.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Countries, companies and families all have a culture. These things are more clearly seen from the outside. You'll visit a different group. Your most significant observations will happen just before you step inside the boundary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Where humor is lacking, you'll have a remedy. But making people laugh isn't your only contribution. You can trust that many would not be where they are today without your birth.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). The energy that goes into making an impression will be well-spent, not necessarily because you make the intended impact but because you'll learn something in the process.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Peer pressure is real today. People do well-intended but strange things in the name of fitting in. To be an observer in this will be much better than having a participatory position.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your strengths will carry a project through. If someone else is weak in an area, you'll override the deficiency. As they say, what doesn't kill you makes you stronger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You know what you stand for, and many believe as you do. Involve them as you get into action mode. Sketch some plans. Work solo first, then bring your ideas to the group to revise and refine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). An identity crisis doesn't have to be a large-scale personal catastrophe. Who you are is always changing. Not knowing who you are and what your purpose is at every moment just means you're a human, open to possibility.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). What you think is happening may be incorrect. Pretend, for a minute, that you're wrong. New ideas will occur to you. You'll get unstuck. You may even learn the truth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're unsure about the next move. There's someone who would feel honored to be your mentor. Figure out what you need and how best to communicate that. Then drum up the courage and ask for it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Diversity makes groups strong. It's true for your friend group, too. People with different strengths will add to your life, whereas a group that is too much of one thing won't have the spark.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You're a meteorologist of emotional weather. You read the atmosphere and determine what kind of protection will be appropriate. A metaphoric umbrella will serve you well around certain individuals.
