City proposing new rules for street vendors

MADELEINE PAUKER
Daily Press Staff Writer

Downtown Santa Monica's ubiquitous fruit and churro vendors will be required to get business licenses and health permits starting in May.

City Council will vote Tuesday on regulations for sidewalk vending to comply with a new state law that requires cities to establish rules for vendors without prohibiting or criminalizing them. In addition to creating a permitting system for vendors, City Hall is looking to ban them from the beach, Santa Monica Pier, part of Palisades Park and the Third Street Promenade and direct them to other downtown areas like the Colorado Esplanade.

The Pier and Palisades Park are of immediate concern, City of Santa Monica staff said. The deck and stairs on the north side of the Pier have become overcrowded with vendors in recent months, blocking access to the Pier and leading to fights among vendors battling over turf that have resulted in multiple arrests. Staff is presenting the new rules as an emergency ordinance so they can go into effect before the summer tourist season.

"The recommended approach places public safety as the highest priority — including protecting public health, mitigating risks of fire and protecting emergency evacuation routes, minimizing obstruction of access in the public right-of-way and managing crowds at the city's most iconic and high-traffic public spaces," staff said.

The Safe Sidewalk Vending Act went into effect Jan. 1 following several years of efforts by sidewalk vendors and advocates to decriminalize and legalize vending, which escalated when President Donald Trump was elected and indicated he would crack down on undocumented immigrants, putting many vendors at risk. Cities across California are now moving to regulate vendors, but the law includes restrictions on what rules they can enact.

Unless there are health, safety or welfare concerns, local authorities can't require vendors to operate in specific areas or prohibit them from doing business in parks. They can, however, limit their hours of operation and require them to obtain a permit for sidewalk vending, a business license and a seller's permit. Stationary vendors may also be prohibited in residential areas.

City Hall is proposing banning vendors from the beach, Pier, part of Palisades Park and the Promenade, asserting that they create unsafe congestion in those areas and block views. The state already prevents stationary vending on public beaches, and Santa Monica will maintain the ban and extend it to Palisades Park within 500 feet of the entrance of the Pier.

"Prohibiting stationary vending in this limited portion of Palisades Park would protect public safety, allow emergency personnel to manage the existing congestion at this bottleneck and preserve the park's scenic and natural character," staff said.

The City is looking to redirect

MORETON BAY FIG TREE

OCEAN AVENUE AND WILSHIRE BLVD.
PLANTED PRIOR TO 1900, DESIGNATED 1976

As legend has it, the story of this tree dates back to the late nineteenth century. An Australian sailor had no money to pay for his drinks in a local bar and instead paid the bartender with a sapling, a Ficus macrophylla, native to Australia. Having no interest in plants, the bartender then offered the sapling to Georgina Jones, wife of Senator John P. Jones, who in turn gave it to her gardener to plant in the yard of Miramar, the Jones's private estate fronting Ocean Avenue. Their home has since been replaced with a hotel, but the tree remains, gracing the courtyard of the hotel. This 80-foot tall Moreton Bay Fig tree is the second largest of its kind in California, and is notable not only for its grandeur and magnificence, but also its association with Senator Jones, one of the founders of Santa Monica.

Santa Monica Public Library Presents Jazz Flute Star Nicole Mitchell With Electronic Musician Alex Lough

On Wednesday April 17, at 7:30 p.m., the Soundwaves new music series at the Santa Monica Public Library presents a set of improvised duets by flutist Nicole Mitchell and electronic musician Alex Lough, in the Martin Luther King Jr. Auditorium of the Main Library at 601 Santa Monica Blvd.

Nicole Mitchell was the first woman President of the AACM (Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians) and has repeatedly won the Downbeat Critics and Readers Polls as a flutist and composer/bandleader, among many other honors. She records and performs prolifically as a leader and collaborator, including on the forthcoming 50th anniversary double-album by the Art Ensemble of Chicago. Since 2011 she has taught at the University of California at Irvine, but this fall she will leave her native California to run the Jazz Studies program at the University of Pittsburgh.

Alex Lough is working on his PhD at UC Irvine, studying with Nicole Mitchell, among others. His practice links performance and visual art with sound, making creative use of everyday objects and obsolete technologies and amplifying the resonances of materials and spaces.

Soundwaves is a concert series emphasizing artists who appear on the DRAM (Database of Recorded American Music) streaming service. The Santa Monica Public Library is the first public library to offer this service to its cardholders. Listings of past and upcoming Soundwaves shows as well as sound and video recordings are at SoundwavesNewMusic.com

Admission is free and all are welcome. Seating is limited and on a first-arrival basis. The Santa Monica Public Library is wheelchair accessible. CROSSFIT

Questions will vary from person to person, but there is one question most people's eyes won't be able to ignore: just how did some of these wrestlers get so shredded?

The answer is a man in Santa Monica's backyard, Crossfit trainer Josh Gallegos.

Gallegos, who is just as quietly unassuming as the Paradiso Crossfit Gym he coaches at, has been training WWE's top wrestlers for several years now.

The wrestling-loving Gallegos provides workout and meal plans to Vince McMahon's athletes, training with the wrestlers in person or sending plans via text while they're on the road.

"It's been surreal, man," Gallegos said of the experience. "This is my life now. I grew up watching wrestling, so this is literally living the dream."

Gallegos got his start helping WWE superstars wrestle with their workouts by way of Seth Rollins, a former WWE champion. Rollins took a chance on a Gallegos workout after a Crossfit athlete's suggestion. Rollins liked what Gallegos brought out in his workouts, turning other wrestlers on to his work out plan.

Gallegos scales his workouts per what the wrestler requires-- some require a blown out, bodybuilder physique that can last the duration of an iron man match. Others need a plan that will sculpt them, bring better aesthetics to their body.

The Crossfit trainer makes custom workouts for each of his clients with custom meal plans as well.

Among the wrestlers now cliqued up with Gallegos are Cesaro, Bayley and even WrestleMania main eventer (and arguably WWE's top superstar) Becky Lynch.

Lynch says before Gallegos and Crossfit she was going through the motions of her standard bodybuilding routine. She told Rollins she needed a change in her workout and he recommended Gallegos.

Much like Rollins before here, Lynch hit it off with Gallegos, calling him a "badass, great trainer" that knows his stuff. After all, who could plan for wrestlers better than Gallegos, who grew up loving WWE?

"The two mirror each other in a weird way," Gallegos said of Crossfit and wrestling, one of his favorite pastimes."They're both functional fitness, moving quickly for short periods of time, spiking and dropping and spiking again. Wrestlers already do that day in and day out."

Lynch agreed.

"When you're wrestling, you're constantly training in different movement patterns, awkward movement patterns," Lynch said. "True exhaustion and tiredness happen and when you do that stuff regularly, it helps to apply that to the ring. Josh has helped me, my career, tremendously."

Aside from WWE wrestlers and indie wrestlers, Gallegos trains the everyman. He's trained soccer moms, executives and parents who just want a full body workout that will be able to help them keep up with their kids all day.

"I tell people we're a gym for everybody," Gallegos said. "I try to tell people to not be intimidated by what you see. You walk in and see some shredded dude and deadlifting 225 or a guy that's also shredded and snatching 275. And yeah, this is crazy. But you know, that's their goal. And I want to help people reach whatever goals they may have."

Whether they're wearing spandex or sweats after a long day at the office (or in the ring), Gallegos relishes what he and his Crossfit gym can do for people.

"It's the most gratifying thing I've done in my life. I love helping people change, every day."

vendors to areas downtown less prone to bottlenecks, particularly the Esplanade, which runs from the Expo Line station to the Pier. The heavily trafficked south side of the Esplanade offers an opportunity for safe, profitable street vending, staff said.

Two Code Enforcement officers will be stationed by the Pier to enforce the new rules. If Council approves the ordinance, staff will set administrative fines for vendors who violate it. In the meantime, they will be subject to the citywide default fine of $75 for a first offense, $93.75 for a second offense, and $112.5 for a third offense.

Victor Narro, a researcher at the UCLA Labor Center, helped the City put its ordinance into context with the regulations Los Angeles enacted last November. Narro worked for several years with Los Angeles vendors to advance legislation that would protect them from police harassment, high fines and immigration enforcement.

"Vendors were struggling to survive economically," he said. "They would get numerous tickets they couldn't pay and would end up with arrest warrants or a criminal record of misdemeanors."

Narro said he thinks Santa Monica is creating a humane policy that addresses health and congestion issues but doesn't unduly restrict vendors. Outreach to vendors will be key in seeing it through, however, as vendors who have stayed in one area for a long time typically don't want to leave, he said.

The City held a town hall last month that drew more than 100 vendors, whom Narro said were willing to work with the new system but were concerned about a ban on vending on the Pier because business is particularly profitable there. Similar meetings will follow Tuesday's Council vote, he said.

"If you want to move them to another area, it doesn't happen overnight," he said. "It can't just be city telling vendors 'this is the new law and this is where you're going to have to be.' That approach doesn't work well. You have to bring vendors into the process, engage them and work out solutions together."

would be required to offer overnight parking to currently enrolled homeless students who are in good standing with the school. The bill's author references a recent study from the Hope Center which found that 19% of community college students in California have experienced homelessness at some point in the past year.

Mason Mineo, a second-year student at SMC, told the board, "A year ago, spring of 2018, when I was in my first semester, I was displaced from my housing situation. I spent the night unhoused in order to get to my 8 a.m. class on time."

The bill is aimed to help students like Mineo continue their education despite personal hardships.

"We would allow housing-insecure students to sleep in parking structures overnight in their cars," Hunter Balingstrum, an SMC student told the board. "We would be showing awareness of the needs of the students that we serve by putting them at lower risk of physical and sexual assault."

Although the Board of Trustees has not officially opposed the bill, Superintendent Kathryn E. Jeffery did write a letter to the Higher Education Committee chair that asked for the bill to be amended.

"I just want for the record for you to know that this was not a statement against the legislation," Jeffery clarified, "but it was not a statement in support of it the way it is currently written and I asked for amendments."

Jeffery echoed the same concerns raised by the Los Rios Community College District that "a one-size-fits-all solution will not likely help students as intended and may create even more stress for them."

Kimberly Hernandez, a member of SMC's Associated Student government, insisted that overnight parking is only meant as a temporary solution.

"Our intentions are not to create a permanent spot for these students," said Hernandez. "The student board just wants to give them a grace period where they do not have to worry about where they park, don't have to drive miles away from Santa Monica to prevent tickets, and we want to allow them to have eight hours of sleep for the first time probably in a long time."

Another student, Lucia Aguilar Cole, urged the board to set the example for California community colleges. "We are the top community college in the state and in the region," Cole said. "We are an icon. It is our responsibility to use our position and our power to make sure that others hear the same call. That they follow suit and stand behind their students as well. It is our job to be leaders. We are strong leaders. So support the students here. This is a school that honors pride. Make us proud."

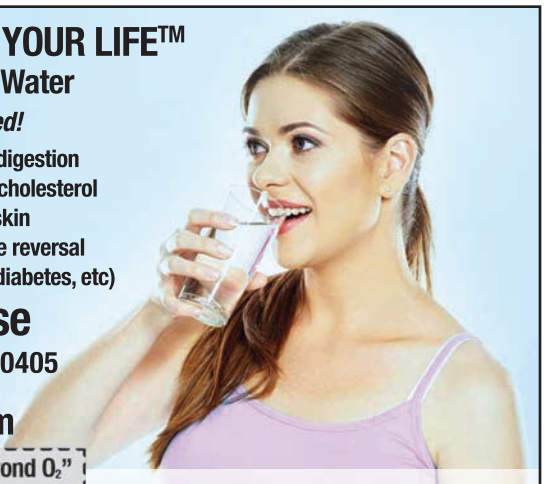

The board was largely supportive of the students' efforts. "I was just moved by their compassion and caring for their fellow students," Trustee Susan Aminoff said. "It was just very good. Proud to be SMC."

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 8)

This solar return energizes you -- or, more aptly, inspires you to choose the lifestyle options that will raise your energy continually throughout the year. Letting go of past pain allows you to observe your experiences clearly and make the intelligent choices that will run more money and love through your life. Libra and Sagittarius adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 3, 20, 1, 11 and 18.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You can take hundreds of steps and wind up just where you started if the path is a circle. Progress isn't just about taking steps. Alignment of actions is as important as action itself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Question: How many people have to call someone "great" before that someone has achieved greatness? Answer: one. The rules of greatness are that everyone gets to choose and abide by their own criteria.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). There are many ways you tell your personal story. Much depends on who's asking. Right now, you're telling it to yourself in an effort to figure out why you left a place and how to get back there.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll be setting a goal. The proper scale will matter. It should be high enough that you're not sure how you're going to get there and low enough that it accommodates the reality of your situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Getting one important thing accomplished today will make you feel like a star. Getting halfway through five things will make you feel unaccomplished. Success depends on narrowing the focus.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Just as everything you own needs its place, everything you want to do needs a time slot. If you don't say when, the answer may as well be "never." Even a distant date stamp is better than none at all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You know why you care about a thing, but you're not sure why everyone else should. This is worth giving some thought, as you won't get the support you need until you help others understand what you're doing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Social skills are about making people feel comfortable, starting with yourself. Uncomfortable situations will happen. This is an excellent time to plan for them so you'll have the things that might make you feel better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Do you shake hands or go in for a hug? How do you sign off on the email? What do you say at the end of the phone call? These and other negotiations of intimacy will be an interesting part of your day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). What's waiting to be discovered in this day is truly fascinating, though you wouldn't know it by the way information is presented to you. You'll have to look past that to get to the gold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Lots of people know what you can't do, what's unlikely and all the ways that things are wrong. And yet, you know otherwise. You're seeing, feeling and knowing in your bones what's possible, and you can do it, too.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Don't let the day, or even one hour of it, become an unwitting contract with passivity. There's something dear at stake here: your confidence. You'll gain more with every ounce of gumption you show.

Appetite Moon Advice

With the moon in the sign of appetites, too often we don't know when we've hit the "enough" zone until we're too far into the "way too much" zone to turn back. Planning is prevention. Speculate and imagine what you'll be getting into. Take measures to make sure you're not overly hungry, tired or emotional going in. If you are, turn back and fix it first.

VENUS IN PISCES AND THE HEART'S INTUITION

From Samson to Macbeth to the latest milliondollar divorce scandal, many a strong, accomplished and successful character have been brought down by a loved one. Additionally, most people who have been romantically involved can recall a decision they made under their partner's influence that wasn't the best. Why do some relationships impair our judgment so? Could it be that letting the wrong person into our hearts runs some kind of interference with our heart's own intuition?

This Venus transit through Pisces turns up the heart's intuition, which makes it an excellent time to tune in to what that is -- what it feels like and how to listen to it -- so you can allow this inner compass to provide consistent guidance.

The human nervous system is so complex that many scientists feel we have only just begun to understand how it works. There is intelligence stored all over our bodies, not just in our brains. Scientists are learning that the heart has an organized intelligence network all its own. Furthermore, the heart's response to stimulus is more immediate than the brain's. So before your brain can form an opinion, your heart already knows. More tomorrow!
