Time of transition at Early Years School

Retiring preschool co-director passes torch to daughter

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN

Daily Press Staff Writer

For decades the Early Years School has facilitated transitions for others, helping children learn about the world around them and preparing them for kindergarten and beyond.

These days, the Santa Monica preschool is going through a transition of its own.

Co-founders and longtime directors Tama Taub and Joy Siegel are retiring at the end of the school year. Taub's daughter, Lisa Taub, is currently on staff and will officially take over directorial duties next school year.

It's the start of a new chapter for the school, which was established in 1982 and which has operated on Montana Avenue near 3rd Street for more than 30 years.

"Transitions are hard," Tama Taub said. "It's been our main work for so long, and it's hard to have that come to an end. It's a big transition. But I'm excited about it. I'm looking forward to a more leisurely pace."

The transition also yields an opportunity that her daughter envisioned seizing one day.

"It feels like coming full-circle," said Lisa Taub, a licensed clinical social worker who studied child development at Cal State Northridge before earning a master's degree from Boston University. "I have always been focused on early childhood, and I've worked at lots of different schools and child care centers. I was in college when they first started the school. It was the beginning of my career. I've had my professional journey, but I always had this goal as a touch point."

When Tama Taub met Siegel, both were working in education. They eventually decided to go back to school together, earning their master's degrees in human development from Pacific Oaks College in Pasadena.

"We wanted to use our education and work experience, plus our

Promenade welcomes young entrepreneur

UCLA grad brings multipurpose beach towels to Third Street

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN

Daily Press Staff Writer

On regular visits to Santa Monica's beaches during college, Katie Everds had a routine. She'd plop down near the shore, bunch sand together to build a makeshift pillow and then place her towel down.

She and her boyfriend at the time got to thinking: What if beach towels came with built-in pillows?

That question now has an answer in the form of the Tillow, a product that Everds is bringing to a Third Street Promenade kiosk this week as she deepens her foray into entrepreneurship.

It's the next step on what has been a whirlwind journey in business for Everds, a UCLA alumna and current Santa Monica resident who hails from San Diego.

"I always looked up to women who started their own businesses," she said. "It was kind of like, 'If anyone can do it, why can't I?'"

KATIE EVERDS

Everds often explored her entrepreneurial side during her childhood, buying a variety of products and reselling them for profit. In college she started a charity recycling program, collecting used bottles from fraternities and sororities and exchanging them for cash that

SMC, Uber partner on carpool service

BY MATTHEW HALL

Daily Press Editor

Santa Monica College and Uber have announced a new partnership to promote carpooling as a viable method of transportation for students, staff and faculty.

The new partnership has created dedicated drop-off/pick-up locations on campus, provided financial incentives to try the program and is contributing to a new environmental studies scholarship on campus.

Ferris Kavar, sustainability project manager for SMC, said the college has a history of promoting alternate transit options, including past efforts to promote carpooling, but the new program capitalizes on existing student behavior.

"Students were using Uber for social meet-ups, taking it out on a Friday night or a Saturday," Kavar said. "We said let's harness that power that Uber has created, which is using technology to know where one person is and where they want to go and match it up with other people that are on the same path."

With uberPool, riders share a ride - and the cost - with others who happen to be traveling along a similar route.

Michael Amodeo, with Uber's public affairs division, said the company can see that many Uber trips have a "lookalike" trip - a trip that starts near, ends near, and is happening around the same time as another trip. He said most of these trips transport a single or dual passenger, leaving up to three empty seats. With uberPool the company can match those lookalike trips together, reducing the cost to all passengers while adding minimal time to the ride. The system also benefits drivers who spend more time per hour earning money on longer trips without the downtown of waiting between passengers.

Kavar said the college is offering a financial incentive to first time riders that is having a real impact beyond the first ride.

"We've actually found there was a really high rate of redemption, using that code to try it for free for the first time," he said. "After it was used for the first time, there was a 70 percent repeat rate so we're seeing a pretty high usage of uberPool specifically."

He said the system is one of several SMC promotes.

"It's just another tool in our tool box of things people can use," he said. "It's not going to always work for everyone. We've got Expo opening up, Big Blue Bus, our shuttles connecting the campuses, we also have traditional carpool and vanpool hookups and we have a website where any student or staff member can log in and insert home address and then the school address and be given personalized transportation options."

Ridesharing companies, like Uber, have had a significant negative impact on traditional cab companies, slashing the number of Last surviving space shuttle external tank on way to L.A.

NASA's only remaining space shuttle external fuel tank is headed to California, where it will land as part of a permanent display with the retired space shuttle Endeavor. The tank, ET-94, was built for the space shuttle program but never used in flight. The 15-story, 32 _ ton external tank left the NASA assembly facility in New Orleans on a barge Sunday and was to arrive at the dock in Marina Del Rey on May 18 before beginning a 12-mile ride through the streets of Los Angeles to its new home, the California Space Center. NASA agreed last year to donate ET-94 to the downtown Los Angeles museum.

Santa Monica suspends negotiations for independent Malibu school District

Following the filing of a lawsuit earlier this week challenging the manner in which Santa Monica- Malibu Unified School District Board of Education members are elected, the three appointed members of the Malibu Unification Negotiations Committee representing Santa Monica have issued a letter stating they have decided to not attend the planned negotiations meeting. Santa Monica negotiating committee representatives Tom Larmore, Paul Silvern and Debbie Mulvaney issued the letter to SMMUSD Board President Laurie Lieberman and Superintendent Sandra Lyon on Thursday, requesting that the process be paused until the committee members have an opportunity to confer with the school board and superintendent. The SMMUSD Board of Education ratified the six-member Malibu Unification Negotiations Committee on January 21, that also includes Malibu Mayor Laura Rosenthal, Kevin Shenkman and Manel Sweetmore, representing Malibu. The Santa Monica members were selected by Lyon and the Malibu members were selected by the city manager of the City of Malibu. The concern of the Santa Monica committee members is that the complaint was filed by Advocates for Malibu Public Schools (AMPS), along with other parties, against the City of Santa Monica, and it asks the Court to declare that the Santa Monica City Charter provision specifying at-large elections to the school board is in violation of the California Voting Rights Act (CVRA) and the equal protection clause of the California Constitution. The complaint was filed in Superior Court of Los Angeles on April 11, 2016. AMPS is a Malibu organization whose goal is to create an independent Malibu Unified School District. Malibu negotiations committee member Kevin Shenkman is the attorney of record for the plaintiffs. The complaint also seeks recovery of attorneys' fees. "This lawsuit was filed by AMPS and Mr. Shenkman completely without warning, thereby materially impairing the collaborative nature of our discussions. In the spirit of collaboration we should have been informed that this action was forthcoming," Larmore said. "We are concerned that the inclusion of issues relating to the District and the participation of AMPS have no purpose other than to attempt to influence our negotiations. We view this as a serious matter and believe that no further meetings should be held until we have an opportunity to report to the Board and receive direction from them." "I share the concerns of the Santa Monica negotiating team members," Lieberman said. "The full seven-member Board of Education acted in good faith to further the investigation of the feasibility of a separate Malibu Unified School District and this legal action could jeopardize our ability to move forward in a productive manner. We are extremely disappointed that our efforts in the past few months to address the interest of the Malibu community to create its own district have been interrupted by this new development." Superintendent Lyon shares Lieberman's concerns over AMPS' participation in this lawsuit and supports the request to pause the process of negotiations until the board may consider this development and its impact at a future board meeting. "We have been working collaboratively with the Malibu negotiating team through an interest based negotiating process to establish a basis of trust for consensus decision making," Silvern said. "A carefully detailed facilitator process has been established and agreed upon by all six members. This surprise action involving two negotiating partners requires us to take some time to discuss the impact of this decision with the board." The board will hear a report by the three members of the Santa Monica negotiations team to discuss the continuation of the Malibu unification negotiations process at a regular board meeting on May 5. The meeting will be at Malibu City Hall. The Malibu Unification Negotiations Committee was established in an effort to reach an agreement concerning terms associated with a potential reorganization of the District that would create a new Malibu Unified School District while also ensuring that the resulting Santa Monica Unified School District remains financially neutral, pursuant to a resolution of the board adopted in December. The resolution calls upon members of the committee to work collaboratively in an effort to meet certain financial objectives set forth by the board. Four meetings have been held since March 7, with the fifth meeting scheduled for this evening. Additional information regarding the Committee, purpose and progress to date is available online: <http://www.smmusd.org/superintendent/MalibuUnification/index.html> SMMUSD is unable to comment on the lawsuit at this time.

Take two aspirin and call me in the morning

most influential American comedian of the 20th century, jokingly advised his audience one night, "Never get hot with the phone company." He explained and I'm paraphrasing, "If you get out of line with Macy's you can always go to Gimbel's, but the phone company is like the Soviet Union, it's a dictatorship. If you're not careful you'll wind up with a Dixie-cup and thread." With that in mind, I proceed with caution.

You see, as I write this, for four days now I've been without phone service thanks to Verizon. Actually, I should say Frontier Communications, which, as of April 1, took over Verizon's landline phone, TV and Internet services in California. With all Frontier's transition "glitches" it's been a very auspicious two weeks.

It's a little ironic but it appears that after all these years of hating on Verizon, since the takeover by Frontier, I now long for the good old days when I was only miserable. And yet, because many of my neighbors at the Shores are without TV, phone and Internet since last Friday, I almost feel lucky.

Let's go back to when I first called Verizon to report my phone being out. I can't fully describe the dread I always feel about calling Verizon. But this time I immediately had a sense it was going to be worse when I learned that I had to call another number for Frontier. In fact, it took a few calls to even get to speak to a human being. What a world it's become when it's almost a privilege to talk to a human.

The human was a seemingly very nice female tech support in the Philippines. That is, until she kept repeating, "Not to worry." She did it so often it got on my nerves. Over the years, experience has taught me that when tech support says, "Not to worry," it's time to start worrying.

Poor woman, she kept having to put me on hold to ask questions of her supervisor. Poor me, I kept being put on hold. Finally, she accepted the reality that there was no freakin' way she could fix the problem, something I had sensed an hour ago. Now she connected me with someone to make an appointment for a repair person to come to my apartment. And yes, once again I was put on hold! (In a modern day Dante's Inferno, one level of Hell would have to be "On Hold.")

Oh but dear friends, it got worse. When the next human came on the phone I was told the soonest anyone can come out wasn't for three days. And I was also told that my appointment time would be between noon and 5 p.m. (God forbid I should have a life.)

As I was resigned to my fate, a friend in the South Tower called who had lots of nightmare experiences with Verizon. So much so he said, "I have the number of a guy who'll get someone out there almost immediately." It sounded like a mafia connection. "Psst, you, see I know a guy who knows a guy. Interested?" Guess what? I called his "guy" and sure enough, though he shall remain nameless, the gentleman (notice he's gone from "guy" to "gentleman") had a repair person out to me within the hour. I was thrilled.

The repair person, let's call him Bob, seemed terrific. Unfortunately, to get to my cable connections we had to move furniture. Don't ask how or why it was set up that way originally, it didn't matter now. It was worth moving the furniture until two hours later, when Bob informed me nothing's working. He added, however, "I have one more thing I could try... but you could also lose your Internet and phone." Some offer, huh? I said, "Gee, Bob, when you put it that way, no thanks!"

"So what are we going to do?" I asked in desperation. Folks, I swear I'm not making this up but he responded, "Often, these things take care of themselves, it's just going to take time." I couldn't believe my ears! "Bob, that's like the doctor saying take two aspirin and call me in the morning." (He didn't get it, I only hope you did.)

All of the above was written on Tuesday. It's now Thursday morning and, as I'm about to send this column in, I'm relieved to tell you that my TV connection is back. I even got to see Kobe's amazing final game against Utah in which he scored 60 points!

Now that you've allowed me to vent my frustration, I only hope no big-shot from Frontier happens to read this. If by chance they do, I should probably go out now and buy a Dixie-cup and some thread.

The danger of modifying the noise ordinance

Editor:

I am writing regarding your article that described the efforts of City Council to modify the noise ordinance to remove restrictions on the amount of noise that can be made between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m., in commercial areas, in order to promote the efforts of the hotel union, to pressure non-union hotels, to unionize.

I did not think it was possible for me to ever agree with Councilwoman O'Connor, but she is absolutely right in accusing the rest of City Council of taking a complete leave of its senses in an effort to win the favor of the hotel union.

The police, and other members of city staff, tried to warn City Council of unattended consequences, but were not specific on the harm that the proposed ordinance could have. Perhaps their warning would have been given more regard if they had if they had been more specific on the danger. There are a large number of residents who live in apartments in the commercially zoned areas of Santa Monica. The owners of the Shore Hotel, and other non-union hotels, have the same first amendment rights as union members. The highest level of first amendment rights is the right to protest against government entities, such as Santa Monica's city council. If the city creates an ordinance granting the hotel union the right to prevent hotel guests from being able to get a good night's sleep, they will also be granting hotel owners the right to prevent the residents of commercial area apartments from getting a good night's sleep.

traditional fares across the country and locally.

Amodeo said Uber views itself as a new mode of transportation that complements and improves existing systems beyond just a taxi competitor.

"A recent study by the American Public Transportation Association (APTA) found that people who use ridesharing services like Uber are more likely to use public transit frequently, own fewer cars and spend less on transportation," he said. "We believe Uber can contribute to a transportation system with fewer cars and greater access, where people spend less time stuck in traffic or looking for a parking space. The opening of the Expo Line in Santa Monica is a big step in that direction, and we look forward to playing a part in creating a more robust network of mobility options for people across the city."

Kawar said the service might prompt more SMC users to rethink their transportation options and even if they don't use it, any efforts to reduce car trips is valuable.

"Really my pitch to students and faculty and staff is that there's never been a better time to cut the umbilical cord to your car and leave it at home," he said.

time as parents and our work in our children's schools, and put that together to run a school," Tama Taub said.

In the fall of 1982 they established the Early Years School in Santa Monica, where Tama Taub was already living. They rented out space at a synagogue near California Avenue and 19th Street, starting with just half a dozen children. They moved to their current location on Montana Avenue, which previously housed a different preschool, a few years later.

Children from the former preschool grew up and sent their own kids to Early Years School. And former students at Taub and Siegler's learning center have done the same thing.

The preschool has seen many changes over the years. It earned accreditation through the National Association for the Education of Young Children in 1989. It brought on Lisa Taub as one of its first teachers. And it has since grown to serving some 50 children each year.

"There weren't many preschools around when we started," Tama Taub said. "We've learned a lot more about the brain and how it develops and that impact on our journey as human beings. The brain is at a very growing place."

Lisa Taub said she plans to stay true to the preschool's philosophy of offering a developmental, experiential, play-based early childhood learning program.

But there are a few changes coming down the pike. In addition to the current tuition-based preschool sessions and 10-week parent-toddler groups, which are offered to families before preschool, Early Years School will add a pre-kindergarten class in the coming fall.

"I'm not going to wander far from our roots," Lisa Taub said. "The school's not going anywhere."

How urban research center in Los Angeles will track bugs

JOHN ROGERS
Associated Press

Scientists at the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County unveiled an ambitious plan Thursday to find and catalog every species of bug, reptile and squirrel that flies, crawls, slithers or hops across Southern California.

The project - the largest of its kind ever undertaken, according to the museum - is enlisting thousands of volunteer "citizen scientists" to scour backyards and parks, look under rocks, and poke into cracks in concrete-lined waterways.

Their goal is to uncover unnoticed species and determine where they came from and how they got to Southern California.

HOW THE RESEARCH WILL WORK

Last spring the museum's Urban Nature Research Center gave 400 volunteers a crash course in entomology and even sent some home with backyard bug traps. More than a thousand other citizen scientists are taking cellphone photos of interesting looking bugs, reptiles and other fauna and sending them to the center for study. The museum eventually hopes to enlist tens of thousands of cellphone-toting volunteers in a region where 22 million people live.

WHAT THEY FOUND SO FAR:

Forty-three species of flies that scientists didn't know existed in Southern California have been cataloged, nearly doubling the known number. At that rate, says entomologist and center co-director Brian Brown, there could be as many as 20,000 species of insects in the region, not just the 2,000 to 3,000 that scientists currently estimate. Also discovered was a species of gecko from Australia and huge numbers of a species of fruit fly that flew in (most likely on a plane) from El Salvador.

WHY FOCUS ON SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

It's more than just a crowded, smoggy region of freeways with a concrete-bottomed waterway called the Los Angeles River. The mild subtropical climate is attractive to people as well as almost every kind of insect, reptile, plant and animal imaginable. "We're in a biodiversity hot spot, one of 35 in the world. We're on par, in California - here in LA right now - with the island of Madagascar and the tropical Andes," says Lila Higgins who directs the center's citizen science program.

WHY IS THE WORK IMPORTANT:

The program is expected to create a massive database for scientists, providing information on how species get introduced to an area, how they migrate across a region and how they become endangered. Citizen scientists have already authored or co-authored five research papers. But beyond that, understanding and protecting a region's biodiversity is key to protecting its human population. A better world for bugs, plants, reptiles and other creatures, Brown says, makes a better place for people as the food chain is maintained, the soil is improved and thriving plants clean the air.

HOW DID THE PROJECT COME ABOUT:

The announcement came 14 years after the Natural History Museum asked for the public's help in finding specimens for its study of Southern California spiders. When it got more than 5,000 responses it began reaching out to volunteers for help with other studies. In 2013 it opened the Urban Nature Research Center in a first-floor wing of the museum. "In some ways we had a head start," Brown says.

went towards scholarships.

"It was not that successful because I had no time or money," she said. "But I love the idea of having an idea and turning it into something tangible."

By the time she graduated UCLA with a psychology degree in 2011, her entrepreneurial spirit hadn't gone away. She thought about her many trips to the beach and how she wished she had a multipurpose towel that could improve comfort and protect valuables.

While working full-time in marketing for NBCUniversal, Everds spent her nights brainstorming, prototyping and working with a designer to create a towel with a removable foam pillow, headphones-friendly touchscreen pocket and water-resistant storage pouch.

She raised $30,000 in 30 days through a Kickstarter campaign as she learned the ins and outs of insurance, production, distribution and shipping. She spent three months trying to figure out how to source the product in the U.S., but it wasn't feasible because doing so would have cost 10 times more than it did to manufacture the towels overseas.

"You never really know what you're doing," Everds said. "It's not like I took a class at UCLA that taught me how to develop a business and bring a product to market. It's learning as you go."

Everds went online in June of last year to launch Tillow, a portmanteau for "towel" and "pillow." And although she's had success with her Web business, including on Amazon.com, she was curious to test her product in the physical market.

"I didn't want to pigeonhole myself," she said.

Everds had been successful selling her towels from a booth at area beach volleyball tournaments, so decided to seek out a retail space with a similar demographic. And she wanted her spot to be tourist-friendly and close to the ocean, which led her to apply for a spot on Third Street Promenade.

"There's a long wait list, but I finally got called," she said. "It feels really good to have some sort of physical thing to represent the work I've done."

"It's a huge project, and honestly I'm a little terrified. But I'm hopeful. I've done everything I can. If everything goes as projected, it should be really awesome."

Negligence and Auto Accidents

To have a valid car accident claim, you must first determine the negligent party or parties that caused the car crash. You may suspect that another driver, pedestrian, motorcyclist etc. acted carelessly, but cannot identify what traffic laws they violated. A skilled car accident attorney, however, can examine police reports and state traffic laws and speak to witnesses to determine who was at fault for your motor vehicle accident.

Tip: Act Quickly

If you seek legal advice, it's important that you do so as soon as possible after an accident. You're more likely to get the compensation due to you if your attorney is able to act quickly. Our state attorney's are available 24/7 to discuss your claim.

FILM REVIEW
DEMOLITION

Rated R
100 Minutes
Released April 8th

We are all familiar with the sensation of being emotionally numb at one time or another, usually when our mental state is seriously overloaded. “Demolition” is a journey into a man’s feelings, his ability to react, which has become buried in the far reaches of his psyche. This man on the surface appears successful and comfortable by our society’s standards. However, our protagonist has been devoid of emotion for a while, until a horrific instant in his life sets off forces around him and inside his mind that slowly unlock pieces of his long hidden emotive abilities. The framework of the story is unusual. A letter of complaint to a vending machine company sets off a chain of interactions with random people that this man never would have met had it not been for that piece of written communication.

Broken mentally from a totally unexpected catastrophic incident, Davis Mitchell, played by Jake Gyllenhaal, immerses himself into a letter writing campaign blown out of proportion, simply to obtain a refund for a candy bar that became lodged in a vending machine. Yet this overreaction becomes a pathway to his blocked senses. Soon he proceeds to take apart, literally and figuratively, all facets of his life. Jarring scenes of destruction ensue. Items large and small - items that we consider of great value in our society, are joyfully wrecked. Things that we amass to prove our worth, even a sleekly designed home, are smashed with great glee. Unlikely assistance comes in the form of a teenage boy who is going through his own similar growing pains trying to realize his place in the world. He joins Davis in the dramatic catharsis.

While the plot and storyline have some major spinouts, the performances make watching this film worthwhile. Gyllenhaal is never over dramatic as the broken protagonist. Naomi Watts is also subtle as a harried customer service rep, and Chris Cooper is great as a patient, tragic and ultimately fed-up father-in-law. Newcomer Judah Lewis steals scenes as the teen, even though his character seems to spread in all directions at once (well, life in your teens can be that way). All the characters come alive with great realism.

Director Jean-Marc Vallee brought with him to this project his cinematographer, Yves Belanger, and production designer, John Paino, from his two previous excellent films, “Dallas Buyers Club” and “Wild.” It is interesting to note that editor Jay M. Glen has no prior credits. Perhaps this name is a pseudonym for the director acting as his own editor: “Jay M” as Vallee’s first two initials and “Glen,” the English meaning for the French “Vallee” (just a guess). “Wild” and “Dallas Buyers Club” were stories with specific beginnings, clear trails and endings. “Demolition” is more of a dramatic philosophical commentary on how our society dictates the outward personalities that we present to the world, and how tragedy can cause these personas to implode and then regroup, perhaps to create a more truthful presentation in the end. This movie is a tale of destruction and of rising from the ashes.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

IN EARLY 2016

It was brought to the attention of SMPD detectives that a local homeless man, Danny Dolan, was making threats against the police department and government via his Facebook and Instagram pages. The tip came from an out of state relative of Dolan who was concerned for the safety of the officers. An investigation ensued and Dolan was found to have numerous postings on social media, which included his desire to shoot and kill Santa Monica Police officers as well as photographs of himself holding firearms. Search warrants into Dolan's social media accounts showed he was making these postings by cell phone through Wi-Fi in a public place like a library or coffee shop. Investigators conducted surveillance at the locations where Dolan recently made such postings. On April 5 at 5:30 p.m., officers from the Joint Terrorism Task Force (JTTF) found Dolan near the Chinese Theatre on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood and placed him under arrest. Dolan admitted to the threats but was not armed at the time of arrest. Bail was set at $50,000.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★★★★★

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

TODAY IN HISTORY

- 1955 - McDonald's restaurant dates its founding to the opening of a franchised restaurant by Ray Kroc, in Des Plaines, Illinois
- 1960 - At Shaw University in Raleigh, North Carolina, Ella Baker leads a conference that results in the creation of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, one of the principal organizations of the African-American Civil Rights Movement in the 1960s.
- 1964 - The first Ford Mustang rolls off the show room floor, two days before it is set to go on sale nationwide.
- 1969 - The EC-121 shootdown incident: North Korea

- shoots down a United States Navy aircraft over the Sea of Japan, killing all 31 on board.
- 1970 - During the Cambodian Civil War, massacres of the Vietnamese minority results in 800 bodies flowing down the Mekong river into South Vietnam.
- 1983 - Tokyo Disneyland opens to the public.
- 1984 - The inaugural World Youth Day is held in St. Peter's Square, Vatican City.
- 1986 - The United States launches Operation El Dorado Canyon, its bombing raids against Libyan targets in response to a bombing in West Germany that killed two U.S. servicemen.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

- (1) Yet Another Way to Tell If You're DUI: Maryann Christy, 54, was arrested in Roselle, Illinois, in January when police spotted her driving through town with a 15-foot-tall tree firmly lodged in the grille of her car, sticking straight up. She was apparently too intoxicated to recall where she "acquired" the tree or how many minutes earlier that was.
- (2) Peak Truck-Spill Karma: On March 23 on Interstate 95 near Melbourne, Florida, two tractor-trailers collided, spilling their contents on the road. One truck was carrying Busch beer and the other various Frito-Lay products.
- Anti-Theft ID Breakthrough:

For people who become stressed when asked to prove their identities by biometric scans of fingerprints, hand prints or eyeballs, Japan's Advanced Institute of Industrial Technology has developed a chair frame that authenticates merely by sitting down: a butt-scanner. Professor Shigeomi Koshimizu's device produces a map of the user's unique derriere shape, featuring 256 degrees of pressure at 360 different points and could be used not only to protect vehicles from theft, but also, when connected to a computer, to prevent log-ons by those with unauthorized posteriors.

ENTERTAIN AT HOME, TAURUS

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ You have get-up-and-go, especially in the morning. You might be thinking of your weekend plans. A misunderstanding looms in the background. Be careful to recognize what is happening as it occurs. You could prevent a big problem for yourself if you do. Tonight: Opt for what you know and avoid new experiences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ You could be a lot happier if you relax and don't worry so much about a personal situation. Clearly you cannot change someone's reaction; however, you can control yours. Don't let a difficult situation evolve. Cut it off immediately. Tonight: Entertain at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Keep the conversation moving. Someone might be abnormally flirtatious at the moment. Enjoy it, but don't read anything into this person's behavior. A misunderstanding could happen sometime during the day. Tonight: Flirt away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You could have a problem before you know it. Be very careful when dealing with a friend or a group of friends. No one means to cause a problem, yet it could happen. Clarify meetings and times. Be forgiving if there is a flub-up. Tonight: Your treat.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You might feel like a ray of sunshine to another person. This person's mood lightens up, and you feel more connected and in touch with your feelings. Confusion surrounds a higher-up, supervisor or someone you need to look up to. Tonight: A star wherever you go.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You might need to pull back and not get into the middle of someone's views and a potential change of plans. The less said by you, the better. You could be far more serious than you realize. Tonight: Feel free to do whatever your heart desires.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You could be involved with a meeting or networking event that draws many friends to you. A comment from someone you respect or who is at a distance needs to be questioned. Be careful with others' information and "facts." Tonight: The more people, the merrier.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Pressure builds, and you seem to be unable to get a situation that involves others under control. You cannot control anyone. Consider kicking back and seeing what happens. At times you can be very controlling. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might want to make a point, but because of others' mood and lack of concentration, you will have difficulty even getting anyone's attention. Recognize that it is Friday and people are tired. Some people might be exhausted because of a last-minute push to get their taxes done. Tonight: What would TGIF be without you there?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You could be saturated by a situation that keeps recurring. You wonder why you cannot get the other person involved to stop a pattern. This person recognizes it and sees it as a problem. Tonight: Have a serious conversation if you believe the timing is right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Defer to others and be ready to take a stand only if need be. Another person might be better suited to carry the cause and explain it. A friendship or interaction could be developing into more. Be more flexible and upbeat than you normally are in this type of situation. Tonight: Say yes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might want to focus on clearing your desk and eliminating many of the details and other sundries that make your days longer. You could be surprised by how much you do accomplish. Tonight: TGIF.

Friday, April 15, 2016

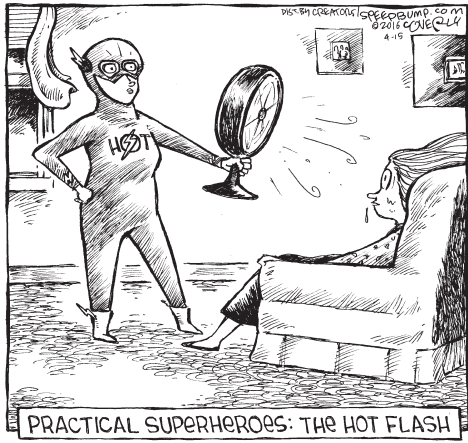

This year you are more gregarious and caring than in the past. Actually, you feel more secure, thus willing to express your feelings. Others delight in your openness. Do not allow someone who is at a distance or whose intellect you believe is better than yours to rain on your parade. You have a lot to offer. If you are single, you meet someone with ease, but is it someone you want to keep in your life? From the fall on, you are more likely to acquire a long-term friend or loved one. If you are attached, the two of you enjoy each other's company more and more. Be impulsive. Be spontaneous. LEO knows how to get you going.
