Openings and remodels for the city's grocery markets in April

NOW OPEN: Erewhon is the latest grocery store to open in Santa Monica.

TORRIE KRANTZ
Special to the Daily Press

Spring is the season of renewal and new grocery options are sprouting up this month.

At the south-east corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Harvard Street, Erewhon grocery store has planted new roots in a 10,500-square-foot space.

The company, founded in 1968, is an independent, family-owned grocer with locations in Los Angeles, Calabasas, Venice and now Santa Monica. They offer a 100 percent organic produce section and are known for stocking their shelves with products from smaller suppliers. According to the company, its product recommendations are made from the store level, not a corporate office.

"I work with a lot of small companies, that aren't in Gelson's, Bristol Farms, or Whole Foods; they wouldn't waste their time on them because they are more expensive," said Erewhon Vice President, Jason Widener. "The practices that are behind some of these small companies are necessary and important and there's a lot of awareness

City review finds compliance with development contracts

KATE CAGLE
Daily Press Staff Writer

An annual review of the city's Development Agreements found all 33 properties in good faith compliance with their contracts.

A real estate Development Agreement, or DA, allows developers to build beyond zoning restrictions in return for community benefits like fees or open space. Because they are individually negotiated, each agreement contains unique time frames, obligations and requirements - including fees, physical improvements and ongoing services.

"The standard is not black and white but it is based on the whole of the activity the developer is engaging in and our review of that," said Principal Planner Roxanne Tanemori at the April 10 City Council meeting. Tanemori's report looked at the individual contracts for each property and whether the projects held up their end of the deal.

During the Tuesday night meeting, Council member Sue Himmelrich raised concerns about a provision in the DA for Colorado Center that requires public access to a park and meeting room. A neighborhood group trying to organize an event at the site was told they needed liability insurance in order to use the space. The group complained the requirement was costly and a burden.

"I am aware of the issue and we have been discussing it," Tanemori said. She said the DA allows Colorado Center to impose reasonable restrictions that the city

New Roads grad a trans Trailblazer that continues advocacy

ANGEL CARRERAS
Daily Press Staff Writer

Jake Hofheimer hasn't changed much since his days at New Roads School. Even after appearing in media outlets such as the LA Times and ESPN for being a trans baseball player, he's still the same affable, fun-loving, athletic student. Although he's in Colorado at CU Boulder, the New Roads grad continues to advocate in Southern California for trans rights and inclusion, and will be rewarded for his efforts with JQ International's Trailblazer 2018 award, making Hofheimer both the youngest person and first transgender person to be recognized.

"It means a lot," Hofheimer said in a phone call, on receiving the award. "I was pretty surprised they asked me to be an honoree. There are so many people in the queer community who have been activists and I'm so new to this. It's pretty shocking, but I'm incredibly honored and excited to be receiving this." JQ International is a Jewish LGBT international outreach program that educates the public on issues and inclusion and provides support for LGBT Jews.

Before New Roads, before JQ awards, and before Jake, Hofheimer was a girl, Emma. When Jake was Emma, he never felt comfortable as a girl, being bullied at previous schools for the way he'd portrayed his identity.

"Life before New Roads School wasn't a good fit for me," Hofheimer said, "No one was very accepting of queer identity for the most part, and people weren't very nice to me."

After gender therapy, Jake eventu-

Music Guild presents "Four Seasons Of The Americas"

St. Matthew's Music Guild continues its 2017 – 2018 season on Friday, April 20, at 8 p.m., with a program featuring the "Four Seasons" – not by Italy's "Red Priest," Antonio Vivaldi, but by two living American composers Mark O'Connor (U.S.) and Astor Piazzolla (Argentina). The Chamber Orchestra at St. Matthew's will be conducted by Tomasz Golka. The program will also include Tchaikovsky's Serenade for Strings and the world premiere of a Music Guild commissioned work by Nathan Wang, one of the hottest composers for American and Asian cinema. Violinists Yi-Huan Zhao and Kevin Kumar will be the featured soloists in the "Four Seasons."

O'Connor is an American bluegrass, jazz and country violinist/fiddler and composer and frequent collaborator with classical, jazz and pop artists such as Yo-Yo Ma, Stephane Grappelli, and James Taylor. His The American Seasons takes its inspiration from Vivaldi's set of concertos by featuring a solo violinist/fiddler against a larger string orchestra. O'Connor creates a blend of authentic southern bluegrass feel with a more classical style to create a distinctive sound-world that has won high praise from critics, performers and audience alike. O'Connor has won three Grammy Awards, including one in 2000 for Best Classical Crossover Album, for his Appalachian Journey, with Yo-Yo Ma and bassist Edgar Meyer.

Like O'Connor, Argentinian composer Astor Piazzolla pays tribute to Vivaldi in his Cuatro Estaciones Porteñas or Four Seasons of Buenos Aires – four tangos originally scored for a quintet of violin, piano, electric guitar, bass and bandoneón. In 1998 the work was arranged for violin solo, strings and acoustic guitar by Russian composer Leonid Desyatnikov who, with Piazzolla's permission, included occasional quotes from Vivaldi's original.

O'Connor's Spring and Autumn will alternate with Piazzolla's Summer and Winter.

Violinist Yi-Huan Zhao is in demand throughout Southern California as an orchestral player, chamber musician, and soloist. He has served as Concertmaster of The Chamber Orchestra at St. Matthew's since 1999. Kumar, Co-Founder/Director of Salastina Chamber Music Society, has been hailed for his "dynamic and joyous performances" (Music-Web Int'l) and has appeared as a soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and other orchestras around the world.

The concert will include a new work, commissioned by St. Matthew's Music Guild, by Emmy winning composer Nathan Wang. Wang is one of the most prolific and versatile composers working in the film industry, with credits ranging from scores for Steven Spielberg's Dreamworks Animation and the Walt Disney Company to Asian classics such as "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon" (scoring) and a documentary featured at the 2004 National Democratic Convention. His compositions have been performed by the Los Angeles Philharmonic, San Franciso Symphony, Los Angeles Opera, and Chicago Symphony.

The concert will conclude with Peter Tchaikovsky's beloved Serenade for Strings. Composed in 1880, the piece was originally intended as an tribute to Mozart, with overt references to the Classical style of the late 18th century. As Tchaikovsky continued to work on the piece, it became a four-movement serenade, thoroughly Romantic and thoroughly Russian in style, although the first movement retained a hint of its origins with the title "Piece in the form of a sonatina." A waltz, reminiscent of the more famous Sleeping Beauty Waltz, follows, along with a heart-wrenching Elegy. The finale is called "Russian Theme" and is a spirited allegro that suggest a Russian sailor's dance.

All Music Guild concerts take place at St. Matthew's Church, 1031 Bienveneda Avenue, Pacific Palisades. Tickets and information are available through the Music Guild website, MusicGuildOnline.org. Further information: (310) 573-7422.

Santa Monica College (SMC) is pleased to present the 39th Annual SMC Student Photography Exhibit April 17-28 in two locations: the SMC Photography Gallery and SMC's Pete & Susan Barrett Art Gallery. The free exhibition showcases outstanding imagery by students in the SMC Photography Department.

Gallery receptions will be held in both locations from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, April 21.

On display will be 214 prints created by 104 SMC student photographers. The works range from fine art to portraiture to still life and beyond. A 106-image looping slide show highlighting work from 65 students in the Photo 1 class will also be featured.

"This annual exhibition is an exciting time for us," said SMC Photography and Fashion Department Chair Josh Sanseri. "We had 15 photo faculty members come in on a Saturday to jury this year's submitted work – approximately 1,200 print and 350 Photo 1 entries – which took several hours. Our gallery reception is always a fun event, with about 500 people visiting both galleries."

Selected images have been awarded special recognition by SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn Jeffery and a variety of other jurors, including the full-time faculty of the SMC Photography Department. Each year, the award recipients are honored for their accomplishments at the June meeting of the SMC Board of Trustees.

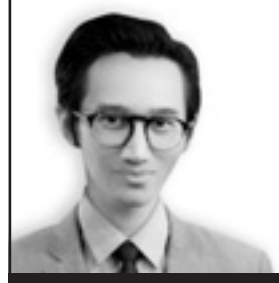

The SMC Photography Gallery is located on the second floor of Drescher Hall on the SMC main campus at 1900 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica. Photo gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

SMC's Pete & Susan Barrett Art Gallery is located at the SMC Performing Arts Center, 1310 11th Street (at Santa Monica Boulevard), Santa Monica. Art gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Toxic containers

Dear EarthTalk:

Why on earth would cans and other food storage containers contain toxic BPA that can make us sick? Is there any way to avoid it?

Melinda Billings
Hixson, TN

IF YOU LIKE THE OCCASIONAL CAN OF tomato soup or diced pears, chances are you're walking around with trace amounts of bisphenol A (BPA) in your bloodstream. According to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 90 percent of us are walking around with trace amounts of this toxic synthetic chemical—commonly used as a constituent component in the epoxy resins lining the inside of cans, boxes and other food storage containers to prevent corrosion and breakages—in our bloodstreams.

One of a class of so-called "hormone disrupting" or "endocrine mimicking" chemicals, BPA fools the body into thinking it's the naturally occurring hormone estrogen. The result can be negative effects on brain development, metabolism and the reproductive system. BPA exposure has also been linked to cancer, heart disease and other serious health disorders.

"Evidence suggests the developing fetus and young child are most at risk, but adolescents also appear uniquely vulnerable," reports the Environmental Working Group (EWG), a leading non-profit research and advocacy group. Of course, the harm isn't limited to children and teens; adults can suffer the ill effects of a lifetime of bio-accumulated BPA coursing through their veins as well.

According to EWG, we can cut down on the amount of BPA we ingest by steering clear of canned and processed foods and replacing them with fresh, frozen and dried options. Get your tomato soup from the hot prepared foods section of your local natural foods market or, better yet, make it yourself from scratch from organic ingredients. And instead of buying diced pears in a can, buy a real pear and dice it up yourself.

"For those who cannot avoid foods in BPA-lined cans, rinsing the food in water may help lower the level of BPA in the food," reports EWG, adding that rinsing cuts back on other unhealthy additives—such as sodium on beans or sweet syrup on fruit—as well. EWG also warns never to heat up food directly in a can: "Transfer it to a stainless-steel pot or pan for stovetop cooking, or microwave in glass – not plastic."

If you're not sure whether your favorite foods are at risk of containing BPA, you can search EWG's Food Scores database to find out, and also to look for safer alternatives that don't contain hormone disruptors.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) banned BPA in baby bottles, sippy cups and infant formula packaging, but the vast majority of us are still at risk. Environmental and health advocates are calling on the agency to ban BPA outright from any packaging materials that come into contact with foods, drinks or water, but so far officials don't seem inclined to take the now ubiquitous chemical off the market completely. In 2014 and again in 2016, Democrats in Congress floated legislation that would have banned BPA and other potentially dangerous food additives in all food storage containers, but neither bill ever made it out of committee.

Without any help from the government, then, it's up to us to wean ourselves off of BPA by making smart choices about what we buy and what we eat.

might make in its own parks. Since the city itself sometimes requires liability insurance for organized events at public parks, they found the imposition in line with the Development Agreement.

Mayor Ted Winterer said the public was benefiting from more follow up on DAs.

"Since about 2009 we've had these regular reports and it's provided a mechanism for people to voice their concerns on any DA they might feel is out of compliance so I think we're doing a better job than we may have in the past," Winterer said.

Tanemori faced criticism that her report focused too much on traffic reduction strategies and not enough on the fees developers are required to pay to fund public parks, childcare facilities, affordable housing and other community benefits.

"There is much more to a Development Agreement than those issues and there is no accountability for those issues," resident Nancy Coleman said, asking for more transparency on how the city collects fees and spends the money.

In response, Tanemori said the funds are a related but separate issue detailed in different report. She said in the future her report may focus more on other issues, but historically the community has been most concerned with how large developments increase traffic on already congested streets.

"We just know that in general, trip reduction is such an important and critical issue to the community we want to provide the detail on that," Tanemori said.

Three properties are in the process of implementing new strategies to get more employees to carpool or use public transportation to achieve their transportation goals. Colorado Center, Providence Saint John's Health Center and Saint Monica's Catholic Community have yet to meet their peak-hour Average Vehicle Ridership (AVR) targets, according to Tanemori's report.

Covered California's Special Enrollment Gets People Insured When Needed

Covered California's annual open-enrollment period may be over, but if you are still uninsured, you may be able to get financial assistance to help you purchase the health coverage you need.

That was the case for Josefina Meneses of Compton, who lost her insurance when her husband Mario Alberto lost his job – just six months after she was diagnosed with a rare form of blood cancer.

While open enrollment was over, the Meneses signed up for Covered California during its special-enrollment period in spring of 2017 and kept the coverage needed to treat the tumor on Josefina's right arm.

"At that time, I felt very sick, to tell you the truth," Josefina recalled. "I thought those were the last days of my life. I was very desperate. One of my grandchildren said to me, 'Grandma, I don't want you to die,' and I told him, 'I am not going to die. I'll fight for you.'"

The 54-year-old Josefina is still fighting, having undergone her third round of chemotherapy in February. It hasn't been easy, but not having to worry about any of the costs associated with the treatments has relieved her of one burden.

Like the Meneses, those who are eligible can sign up for coverage through Covered California's special-enrollment period, between now and Oct. 15, as long as they do so within 60 days of a qualifying life event occurring. The following circumstances are among the more common reasons individuals become eligible for special enrollment:

- They lose their health coverage because they have lost or changed jobs.
- They get married or enter a domestic partnership.
- They have a baby, adopt a child or place a child for adoption or in foster care.
- They move and gain access to new Covered California health insurance plans that were not available where they previously lived.
- They become a citizen, a U.S. national or a lawfully present individual.

If you qualify under any of these conditions, you are eligible to get health insurance coverage and join your fellow Californians in having one less thing to worry about.

Make sure you take advantage of the financial help available to you and your family. During the recently completed 2018 open-enrollment period, the 85 percent of Covered California enrollees who receive subsidies saw their cost of coverage dropping 11 percent in 2018 over the previous year. Nearly 60 percent of subsidy-eligible enrollees have access to Silver coverage for less than $100 per month, and 74 percent can purchase Bronze coverage for less than $10 per month. That's less than what some people pay for their cell phone bill.

"The best decision is to give yourself and your family the peace of mind of having health insurance," said Covered California Executive Director Peter V. Lee.

Lee said the exchange, which added 423,484 plan selections during the open-enrollment period that concluded on Jan. 31, is proud to be part of the effort that continues helping millions of people get the coverage and care they need – despite all of the political rhetoric coming out of Washington D.C.

For more information on special-enrollment rules, visit: http://www.CoveredCA.com/individuals-and-families/getting-covered/special-enrollment.

Those who qualify for Medi-Cal may enroll through Covered California year round.

Eligible consumers who are interested in signing up should go to www.CoveredCA.com where they can get help to enroll. They can explore their options and find out if they qualify for financial help by using the Shop and Compare Tool. They can also get free and confidential enrollment assistance by visiting www.coveredca.com/find-help/ and searching among 800 storefronts statewide, or more than 17,000 certified enrollers who can assist consumers in understanding their choices and enrolling, including individuals who can assist in other languages. In addition, consumers can reach the Covered California service center by calling (800) 300-1506.

SMC to Hold Community STEM Festival on April 21

Santa Monica College (SMC) will hold a STEM Festival in celebration of Earth Week, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, April 21. Entry to the festival is free. It will feature hands-on experiments, live demos, and interactive workshops for children of all ages. Participants will meet in the college cafeteria at 10 a.m. Parking on any college lot is free on the day of the STEM Festival.

"SMC's STEM faculty and students are so excited to invite community members, students, and families to come celebrate Earth Week with us on this day of learning," said SMC Associate Professor of Chemistry Jennifer Hsieh, one of the festival's organizers. "We promise it will be fun!"

Live demos and experiments will include learning about iron composition in iron-fortified cereals—and extracting iron using strong, rare earth magnets; extracting genomic DNA from strawberries; performing chromatography to separate the colored pigments in a permanent parker; learning principles of gravity and physics by launching water-soaked foam balls using a gigantic slingshot; and much more. Also featured is a coding workshop, an "Integral Bee" where participants can watch SMC students and professors battle it out on the whiteboard, solving calculus integrals for prizes, and a hydrogen fuel cell demo, where an SMC Chemistry professor will exhibit—and talk about—a fully functional cell that SMC students built.

To attend the SMC STEM Festival 2018, please RSVP at www.smc.edu/STEMFestival2018. The college cafeteria – on the ground floor of the Cayton Center – is located on SMC's main campus at 1900 Pico Boulevard and is accessed via the Pearl Street entrance (parking lots 1 and 5 are closest).

SMC to hold literary reading of war novel "The Chords Of War"

Santa Monica College (SMC) will host authors Christopher Meeks and Samuel Gonzalez, Jr, for a literary reading of their novel "The Chords of War." The reading—which is free and open to the public—will take place on Tuesday, April 17 at 11:15 a.m. in Art 214 on SMC's main campus, located at 1900 Pico Blvd. Seating is on a first-arrival basis.

"The Chords of War" is a war novel with drama and humor that takes place in Iraq during 2006-07. Based on Gonzalez's experiences there, the novel focuses on a young punk rocker from Florida who, after being kicked out of his band, joins the U.S. Army to get some "needed discipline." He's assigned to the front lines in Iraq. There, he witnesses things a person shouldn't have to experience, including seeing his friend die in a traumatic way. After creating a band for a memorial concert for his friend, the group then goes on to bigger things.

Gonzalez is now a film director whose first film, "Railway Spine," about three young soldiers in the Vietnam War, will be premiering soon on Netflix. Gonzalez teaches film directing at the University of North Carolina in Raleigh.

Meeks teaches English at Santa Monica College and creative writing at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, where Gonzalez had been his student. This is Meeks' fifth novel. He has also published two award-winning short story collections and a play, "Who Lives?" produced twice in Los Angeles. "The Chords of War" is a finalist for an INDIE at Foreword Reviews' Book of the Year Awards.

Street parking is restricted around the SMC main campus. Attendees are encouraged to arrive via the Expo line, the bus, or a ride-sharing service. For a map of SMC's main campus, see: smc.edu/MapsDirections.

This event is part of the Spring Literary Series at SMC's English Department. For more information, please call Hari Vishwanadha at (310) 434-4242.

Samohi Construction meeting

Parents of current and future Samohi students and staff are invited to attend: "The Future of Samohi - How our Campus is Evolving," hosted by Samohi PTSA on Tuesday, April 17, at 7 p.m. in the Samohi Cafeteria.

The event will include images of the proposed campus evolution, the immediate steps to move forward and how the construction impacts will be mitigated to ensure students are minimally impacted by the progress, summer building demolition plans and projects, insight into the upcoming phase (which includes an Olympic-size pool and brand new cafeteria, plus classrooms) and the big picture of the long-term plan for Samohi over the next 20 years.

No RSVP required. Simultaneous Spanish translation provided.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON MARCH 27, 2018 AT ABOUT 12:39 P.M.

Officers responded to a radio call for service at the public restrooms in the 1700 block of Ocean Front Walk regarding an assault with a deadly weapon that just occurred. The victim was reportedly hit by a rock as he was riding his bicycle along the bike path. The victim stated he was riding his bicycle along the bike path when unprovoked the suspect threw a rock striking the victim on the head. The victim did not require medical attention. The suspect was located in a parking lot of 1500 2nd Street. Keeyon Michael Jones, 39, from Los Angeles was arrested for assault with a deadly weapon, carrying a dirk/dagger, appropriation of lost property and a warrant. Bail was set at $35,000.

and heart that is put into [them]...they are what people are supporting."

On April 11 at 9 a.m., the doors opened at 2800 Wilshire Boulevard to a long line of anticipated shoppers.

Local business owner Winter Reign was among the eager shoppers.

"I am excited that Erewhon is here for its extensive selection in specialty health products and foods," she said.

Alison Wells, a nutritionist and avid Erewhon shopper, has experience with their other locations.

"I like the selection and that most of the foods are organic," she said. "It's a little different, you know it's not as generic as Whole Foods, it's more exclusive [where] you pay more, but you get better products and that's what I like".

Designed by Montalba Architects with over 70 staff members per shift, the new market space is equipped with opaque glass windows looking onto the street and an indoor-outdoor garden trellis of seating.

David Montalba, founding principal of Montalba Architects said, "… at Erewhon, the food is at the core of everything with vibrant produce, colorful ingredients and curated products. Ultimately, we wanted the design, architecture, and landscape to be a platform to showcase the food and foster engagement with guests."

Widener said the company chose Santa Monica for its fourth location because the City understands the company's priorities.

"We knew we wanted to be in Santa Monica because we felt like the Santa Monica community would understand us," he said. "The people here have integrity, and when you have [integrity], you look at the details of things and I think Santa Monica will be able to see through things that don't feel genuine, and we are such a genuine brand."

The grand opening comes at a time of change for the city's grocery economy. Whole Foods closed their store at Wilshire and 5th Street recently while opening a new location under their 365 brand at Pico and Cloverfield.

The former Albertson's store on Lincoln was sold and briefly reopened under the Haggen brand before turning into a Gelson's. That location has remodeled and will host a week of reopening celebrations between April 23 – 29.

"Bringing fresh experiences into each store and launching new concepts, like our meat-and-seafood grill station in Santa Monica, is a priority for us. We're always looking for new ways to increase the benefits and convenience for our customers, truly differentiating the Gelson's food and lifestyle experience," said Gelson's President & CEO Rob McDougall.

ally transferred to New Roads School, a school dedicated to inclusion and diversity, a school that effortlessly made Hofheimer feel at home.

"My whole experience at New Roads made me feel accepted," Hofheimer said. "Like I fit, like I had a place."

Within a week, Hofheimer says, he came out to his friends, and students at this new school were calling him by his name, using proper pronouns. It was solace for someone that couldn't express who they were in other school environments for years.

In addition to friends and students, teachers were helpful to Hofheimer as well. He notes that high school teacher Sean Brookes is someone that was critically important to his development as a person.

"He was influential in helping with accepting where I was in life and being able to understand the struggle my parents were going through and helped my parents understand what I was going through."

Being able to express his identity fully, Hofheimer says he wanted to get involved and help others who've faced similar issues to his. He joined an anti-bullying workshop at the school which allowed him to "brace opinions and share thoughts" on trans issues. From there he did an independent study project interviewing various people in the trans community, "and that's when my advocacy work took off."

Since the LA Times and ESPN coverage, advocacy opportunities have been piling up. JQ International was one of those opportunities, which gave Hofheimer another opportunity to increase his advocacy. Hofheimer has been on panels, participated in 2016's Trans Day of Remembrance, and has been contacted by teens and children via social media who saw his story and ask for advice.

"I appreciate the support when it comes, but it's not why I do it," Hofheimer said. "I do it because I see injustice and inequality, and I want something to change."

These days Hofheimer is in Colorado, attending CU Boulder where he majors in women and gender studies, hoping to eventually work in the nonprofit sector for his career. He's still being athletic, having recently joined the school's swim team; still advocating, having recently worked for an openly gay governor, giving Hofheimer political experience.

Hofheimer tells me he also just joined a frat that he's excited about, Theta Pi Sigma, the first gender neutral and queer fraternity.

"We're in the middle of pledging right now," Hofheimer begins, "but the pledge process isn't like, typical with hazing and stuff," Hofheimer says with a laugh. "More gender studies 101 kind of stuff."

He's still the fun-loving, affable guy he's always been.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 16)

A minimalist approach will turn complexities of your life into sources of elegance and efficiency. But don't think for a minute that making a few edits to your schedule, relationships and belongings will diminish your pleasure. You'll enjoy yourself more than ever, and something lucky will happen to you every month of this solar return year. Leo and Virgo adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 10, 6, 30 and 9.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You have the sneaking suspicion that like most people, you're letting a petty fear or belief keep you stuck in a situation. You won't know specifically what it is, though, until you break out and get a different perspective.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Emotions will involve labor today. It's a labor to feel them and a labor to express them, but the result of expressing them will be... you guessed it. All of this is worth it — and so much better than not feeling.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
People have different reactions to things they don't understand. Some get angry. Some get curious. Some get busy. And what about you? You'll find out today.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
Easy environments don't grow strong trees or strong people. It's as though the wind and weather (emotional, spiritual or actual) force out deeper roots.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Maybe it doesn't make sense to resent someone who is just being himself or herself. It's as silly as endeavoring to hold up the walls in your home, which have been standing on their own for years.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
It may seem counterintuitive, but one of the most important aspects of success is actually the part in which you do hardly anything. Without that rest and recovery party, you won't be as sharp and creative as you can be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
You change, and then your conversations change, and that makes you change — and then your relationships change, and that makes you change. On and on. There's no separating cause from effect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
It's weird when people seem to get edgy with you when all you're trying to do is help them. But it happens — mostly because people don't always want the help they need.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
When a magnet is heated up to a certain temperature, it loses its magnetism. The same is true of magnetic qualities in people. The same ones that draw you in can get so intense that they burn out your interest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
With your personality, you should find today's cautionary list rather easy to bypass. Avoid an excess of sugar, the tendency to moralize, giving an amateur diagnosis, over-helping and risks taken just to show off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Because mistakes made in communication can fundamentally impact a person's psyche, you'll try to understand and to be understandable. You'll hear past what people say and into what they mean.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
Though it will feel as if you are spending your entire day on the needs of others, some of your own core psychological needs (love, happiness and belonging) are well-served through your efforts.

Saturn Retrograde Countdown

The Mercury retrograde is over, but don't get too comfortable yet. Just when you think it's safe to go back to business as usual, Saturn will pose challenges you wouldn't have dreamed of. On the bright side, this is the stuff that makes life interesting. Anyway, there's still a full day of relatively smooth sailing. Enjoy it!
