THE WE CAN DO IT! ISSUE

‘Books’ and ‘readers’ swap stories

BY WILL WEISS
Special to the Daily Press

When you read a book, the experience is always uniquely your own. No matter the author, what you get is always your interpretation of the language on the page.

But at Santa Monica Public Library’s Living Library event, when an individual “checks out” a “book,” the circumstances are tremendously different.

Face-to-face with a human being who embodies and speaks proudly for a social category, one realizes quickly that the book has feelings too.

In these conditions, emotions and reactions are exchanged freely, but not impolitely.

And when discussing that which is seldom discussed, the topic that is on everybody’s lips is language itself.

“I prefer the term ‘short-statured,’” said Michael Gogin, president and producer at Mad Swede Records and president of the Los Angeles chapter of Little People of America.

Gogin, who has been a musician, actor and executive in the entertainment industry for decades, has been afflicted since birth by spondyloepiphyseal dysplasia.

“If you look up dwarf in the dictionary, you’ll find a description that includes ‘grotesque,’ ‘ugly,’ ‘misshapen.’ Some little people identify with that term; I don’t.”

Many of the speakers at Saturday’s event, which organizers expected would reach

PEROZZI

Perozzi helps spread the beer gospel to ‘chicks’

BY ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Special to the Daily Press

DOWNTOWN The last thing you want to say to Christina Perozzi is “Oh, I’m not a beer drinker.”

“That, to me, is like throwing down the gauntlet,” Perozzi said as she sipped her Allagash White, an unfiltered Belgian-style brew flavored with coriander and bitter orange peel. Or at least that’s how she described it as she held the glass up to the warm light of Father’s Office, Santa Monica’s premier craft beer bar, and inspected the cloudy white tinge.

How can you argue with one of the top beer sommeliers on the West Coast?

The term “sommelier” conjures images of wine experts in stuffy French restaurants that look down their nose at you when you mention the movie “Sideways.” But Perozzi sees beer as an equally sophisticated beverage without the pretension of white table cloths.

Accordingly, she calls herself the Beer Chick, complete with custom T-shirt and pink and white blog at www.beer-

Husband of accused USC hit-and-run driver arrested

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES A man suspected of pulling a badly injured college student off a car windshield after a deadly hit-and-run accident was arrested while trying to cross back into the United States from Mexico, police said Saturday.

Josue (HOH'-sway) Luna, 32, of Los Angeles, was detained by federal agents at the San Ysidro border crossing Friday after his name prompted a computer alert that he was wanted in Los Angeles, LAPD Officer April Harding said.

Luna was jailed on suspicion of being an accessory to the hit-and-run, she said. He was released Saturday on $50,000 bail.

Luna did not have a telephone listing in Los Angeles and police did not know whether he had retained a lawyer.

Police contend Luna was a passenger in a car that ran a red light and struck two students in a crosswalk near the University of Southern California on March 29.

The accident killed Adrianna Bachan, 18, of Santa Barbara, and injured Marcus

Republicans vote to oppose slate of upcoming ballot measures

BY SAMANTHA YOUNG
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO The California Republican Party on Saturday voted to oppose all six ballot proposals in next month's special election, saying voters must reject higher taxes.

The vote by the party's executive committee followed a lively, hour-long debate that focused on Proposition 1A. The measure would create a state spending cap and bolster California's rainy day fund, two concepts Republicans have long promoted.

But those provisions were overshadowed by triggers in the measure that would extend the sales and income taxes adopted by the state Legislature.

Party chairman Ron Nehring said the vote symbolized his members' dissatisfaction with the entire budget deal struck by the governor and lawmakers in February to close the state's budget deficit, then projected to be nearly $42 billion.

"The Republican Party in California remains strongly opposed to raising taxes," party chairman Ron Nehring said after the voice vote. "There was a sentiment all the measures in question are part of the same budget package."

The party also voted to oppose the other five measures before voters on the May 19th ballot.

Those measures would increase future education funding (Proposition 1B), raise $5 billion by selling bonds based on future state lottery revenue (Proposition 1C), take money from accounts for early childhood education (Proposition 1D) and mental health (Proposition 1E), and freeze lawmakers' salaries when the state runs a deficit (Proposition 1F).

In a statement released by the campaign supporting the measures, Los Angeles County Sheriff Lee Baca said he was disappointed "this small group of party insiders chose to oppose these reforms" that provide critical state funding.

"This measure will get to the heart of alleviating our budget problems both in the short and long term, and that is crucial for the future of public safety in this state," Baca said.

The party's position puts them at odds with Republican Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger who has said he will work day and night for the budget-related measures.

Ironically, the party has given Schwarzenegger $650,000 this year, which he could use to promote the slate of ballot measures.

Assembly Republican Mike Villines of Clovis, who helped broker the deal, urged party leaders Saturday to support the package. He said the proposed temporary taxes were far better than the permanent taxes Democrats sought to push through the Legislature.

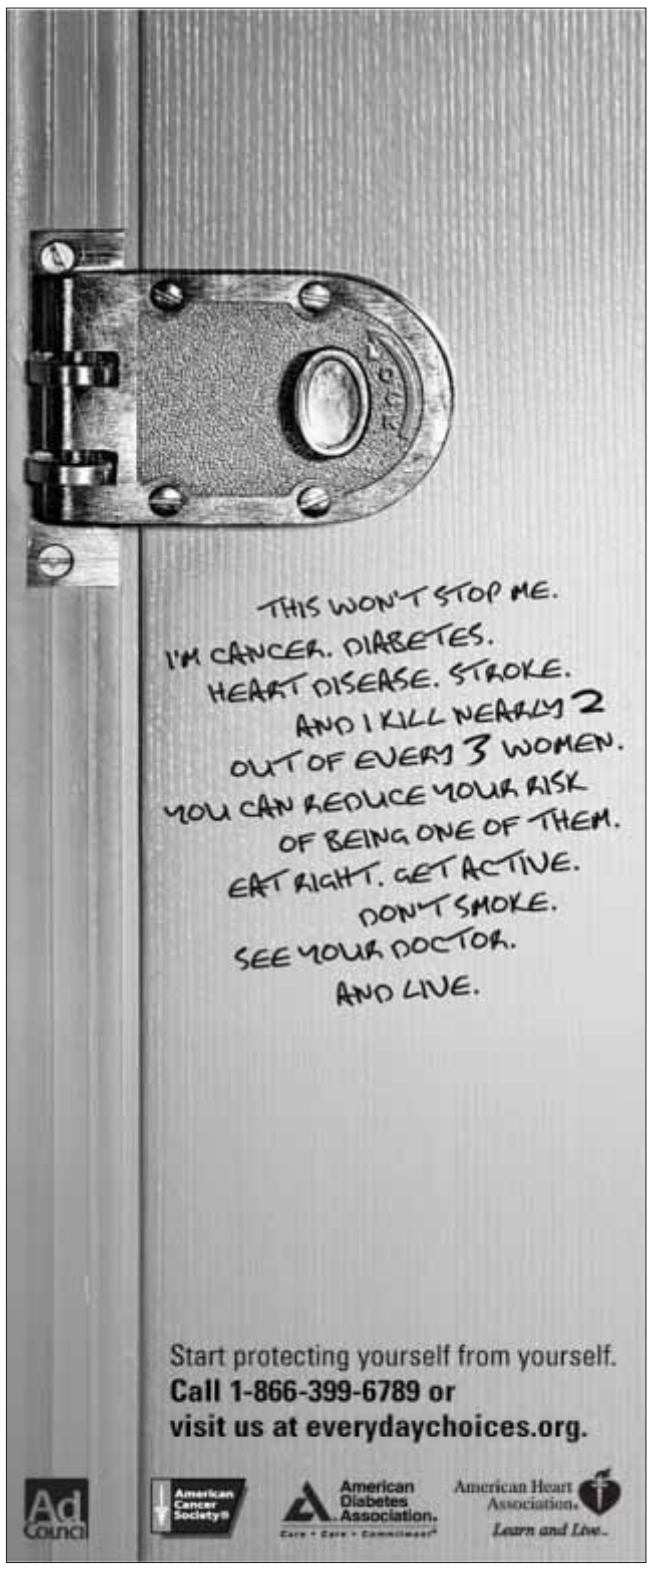

The party's three leading GOP candidates for governor next year have taken varying positions.

Insurance Commissioner Steve Poizner also opposes all of the measures, former eBay chief executive Meg Whitman opposes propositions 1A, 1B and 1C but supports 1D, 1E and 1F, and former Rep. Tom Campbell supports 1A, 1D and 1E, and opposes 1B and 1E. Campbell has not taken a position on 1F.

Survey says ...

THE RESULTS OF THE 2009 CITY OF Santa Monica Resident Survey are out. Commissioned by the city, it assesses levels of satisfaction with city programs and services and reveals attitudes about city issues.

City residents were interviewed by telephone in English and Spanish in January by Goodwin Simon Victoria Research. Homeless and traffic problems continue to top the list of most pressing issues for Santa Monicans. Scarce affordable housing, lack of parking and growth and development were also mentioned.

Traffic was the top issue according to 32 percent of the residents surveyed this year, up from 18 percent in 2002. I'm hoping the City Council takes note that more and more residents are fed up with the way they are handling traffic congestion. Reconfiguring streets and reducing their ability to carry traffic just exacerbates traffic congestion and fuels even more discontent and outrage.

Santa Monica has some of the worst traffic in California. It's the number one complaint. Survey says half the residents surveyed in Sunset and Ocean parks call congestion "very serious." There as elsewhere, City Hall has done as much as possible to turn everyday driving into a traffic nightmare. It's no surprise that dissatisfaction is highest in neighborhoods where the city's more egregious traffic jamming efforts have been perpetrated.

Concerns about a related subject — development — are creeping up with 13 percent of residents saying it's a problem in 2009 compared to just nine percent two years ago.

The survey listed six issues and asked respondents to rank them from "not serious" to "very serious." Traffic congestion was listed as a serious problem by 71 percent of the residents surveyed — up from 57 percent in 2002. Affordability of housing was ranked a serious problem by 68 percent of the survey respondents and the high number of homeless people in the city by 63 percent. Some 43 percent to 45 percent of those surveyed rated each of these issues as "very serious." Parking problems, crime and gangs rounded out the six "hot button" issues.

The lowest satisfaction ratings included enforcement of the city's building and zoning laws at 37 percent. Dealing with the homeless overall received a 31 percent satisfaction rating, down from 45 percent in 2007. The city's enforcement of homeless camping in parks and doorways and enforcement of aggressive begging and panhandling received a 35 percent and 32 percent approval rating respectively. Solving problems resulting from vagrants and transients living on our streets is clearly another area where elected politicians need to step it up.

City services received high marks. The public library had an 82 percent satisfaction rating, trash collection and recycling: 78 percent, tree trimming: 74 percent and the Fire Department received 71 percent.

I found it interesting that 71 percent of those surveyed said they have the opportunity to voice their concerns to the city on major community decisions even though the major complaint I hear from citizens is, "City Hall doesn't listen to us."

The 2009 survey said 27 percent of those surveyed used the city's Web site as a source of information and 27 percent mentioned the city's Seascape newsletter. Real news about city goings-on and politics from independent media sources ranks even lower.

Less than one out of five residents surveyed rely on the two major community newspapers for local news. Only 13 percent on City TV on cable. Nine percent use the Los Angeles Times for information — down from 20 percent four years ago. So, just a small percentage of residents are exposed to real city news, issue analysis and criticism — unavailable from the city's Web site or Seascape.

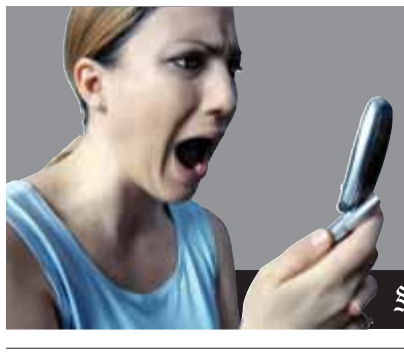

That may explain why only 49 percent of the residents were unaware of the city's many and costly services for the homeless — despite being widely featured in city publicity and our six independent newspaper and online news outlets.

I'll bet almost all the important issues are not on most residents' radar. When it comes to elections, with maybe half the electorate informed, it explains how certain politicians get re-elected to office time and time again despite years of flat out refusing to solve problems such as traffic or, as is the case with the school board, a lengthy history of poor oversight and incompetence.

Here, voters make decisions based on mailers and flyers. Those with the most money deliver the most colorful mailers into the mailboxes of voters and win. When a sizable percentage of citizens make decisions derived from advertising and propaganda, the real value of an initiative, cost of a tax or bond proposal or incumbent's record is misrepresented and obscured — and we all lose.

Santa Monicans need to wake up. An uninformed public is why we have over half-billion dollar city budgets, traffic gridlock, runaway development, high taxes and fees, armies of vagrants sleeping in parks and doorways and no parking.

Enemies of the state?

TWO YEARS AGO, I ALERTED PEOPLE to the fact that the groundwork was being laid for a new kind of government where virtually everyone is a suspect and it will no longer matter if you're innocent or guilty, whether you're a threat to the nation or even if you're a citizen. What will matter is what the president — or whoever happens to be occupying the Oval Office at the time — thinks.

At the time, I was voicing concerns about the liberties the Bush administration was taking in its application of the term "enemy combatant." Today, under the Obama administration, the perceived threat is coming from an altogether different direction: "rightwing extremists."

In a recent report issued by the Department of Homeland Security, "Rightwing Extremism: Current Economic and Political Climate Fueling Resurgence in Radicalization and Recruitment," an extremist is defined as anyone who subscribes to a particular political viewpoint. Rightwing extremists are broadly defined in the report as individuals and groups "that are mainly antigovernment, rejecting federal authority in favor of state or local authority, or rejecting government authority entirely."

The report is problematic on many levels, but several things in particular stand out.

First, the report is short on facts and long on generalizations. The DHS states that it has "no specific information that domestic rightwing terrorists are currently planning acts of violence." Nevertheless, it goes on to list a number of scenarios that could arise as a result of so-called rightwing extremists playing on the public's fears and discontent over various issues, including the economic downturn, real estate foreclosures and unemployment — all problems created by the government.

Second, it uses the words terrorist and extremist interchangeably. In other words, voicing what the government would consider to be extremist viewpoints is tantamount to being a terrorist. However, if you buy into the government's definition, I could very well be considered a terrorist. So too could John Lennon, Martin Luther King Jr., Roger Baldwin (founder of the ACLU), Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson and Samuel Adams — all of these men protested and passionately spoke out against government practices with which they disagreed and would be prime targets under this document.

Third, the 10-page document takes pains to describe the political views of those who would qualify as being a rightwing extremist. For example, you are labeled a rightwing extremist if you voice concerns about a myriad of issues including: policy changes under President Obama; the economic downturn and home foreclosures; the loss of U.S. jobs in manufacturing and construction sectors; and social issues such as abortion, interracial crimes, immigration and same-sex marriage.

DHS also issues a red-flag warning against anyone who promotes "conspiracy theories involving declarations of martial law, impending civil strife or racial conflict, suspension of the U.S. Constitution, and the creation of citizen detention camps."

If anyone seems to have a conspiratorial bent, it's the DHS under the Obama administration. Lacking any concrete facts, this document reeks of paranoia on the part of government officials about a possible populist uprising. The danger, however, is that the government has incredible resources to follow through on their fears — which means surveillance and intimidation of citizens who disagree with the government.

This is nothing less than the shot across the bow, a warning that the government will be targeting for surveillance those who disagree with the administration politically. They're going to monitor internet activity, phone calls, as well as what commentators and bloggers have to say. DHS will also be working with state and local agents to conduct surveillance. As the report states: "DHS will be working with its state and local partners over the next several months to ascertain with greater regional specificity the rise in rightwing extremist activity in the United States, with a particular emphasis on the political, economic, and social factors that drive rightwing extremist radicalization." In other words, they're going to nationalize their paranoia.

In taking such an overt stance against political rivals, the government is taking aim at a protected First Amendment right: the right to political speech and thought. Targeting people because of their political views is Nixonesque, a repeat of past tactics to preempt political opposition.

Americans have a right to be disgruntled.

Why should any American be treated like an enemy of the state just because we choose to exercise our constitutional rights?

Constitutional attorney and author John W. Whitehead is founder and president of The Rutherford Institute.

U.S. water tainted by drugs

BY JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writers

U.S. manufacturers, including major drugmakers, have legally released at least 271 million pounds of pharmaceuticals into waterways that often provide drinking water — contamination the federal government has consistently overlooked, according to an Associated Press investigation.

Hundreds of active pharmaceutical ingredients are used in a variety of manufacturing, including drugmaking: For example, lithium is used to make ceramics and treat bipolar disorder; nitroglycerin is a heart drug and also used in explosives; copper shows up in everything from pipes to contraceptives.

Federal and industry officials say they don't know the extent to which pharmaceuticals are released by U.S. manufacturers because no one tracks them — as drugs. But a close analysis of 20 years of federal records found that, in fact, the government unintentionally keeps data on a few, allowing a glimpse of the pharmaceuticals coming from factories.

As part of its ongoing PharmaWater investigation about trace concentrations of pharmaceuticals in drinking water, AP identified 22 compounds that show up on two lists: the EPA monitors them as industrial chemicals that are released into rivers, lakes and other bodies of water under federal pollution laws, while the Food and Drug Administration classifies them as active pharmaceutical ingredients.

The data don't show precisely how much of the 271 million pounds comes from drugmakers versus other manufacturers; also, the figure is a massive undercount because of the limited federal government tracking.

To date, drugmakers have dismissed the suggestion that their manufacturing contributes significantly to what's being found in water. Federal drug and water regulators agree.

But some researchers say the lack of required testing amounts to a 'don't ask, don't tell' policy about whether drugmakers are contributing to water pollution.

"It doesn't pass the straight-face test to say pharmaceutical manufacturers are not emitting any of the compounds they're creating," said Kyla Bennett, who spent 10 years as an EPA enforcement officer before becoming an ecologist and environmental attorney.

Pilot studies in the U.S. and abroad are now confirming those doubts.

Last year, the AP reported that trace amounts of a wide range of pharmaceuticals — including antibiotics, anti-convulsants, mood stabilizers and sex hormones — have been found in American drinking water supplies. Including recent findings in Dallas, Cleveland and Maryland's Prince George's and Montgomery counties, pharmaceuticals have been detected in the drinking water of at least 51 million Americans.

Most cities and water providers still do not test. Some scientists say that wherever researchers look, they will find pharma-tainted water.

Consumers are considered the biggest contributors to the contamination. We consume drugs, then excrete what our bodies don't absorb. Other times, we flush unused drugs down toilets. The AP also found that an estimated 250 million pounds of pharmaceuticals and contaminated packaging are thrown away each year by hospitals and long-term care facilities.

Researchers have found that even extremely diluted concentrations of drugs harm fish, frogs and other aquatic species. Also, researchers report that human cells fail to grow normally in the laboratory when exposed to trace concentrations of certain drugs. Some scientists say they are increasingly concerned that the consumption of combinations of many drugs, even in small amounts, could harm humans over decades.

Utilities say the water is safe. Scientists, doctors and the EPA say there are no confirmed human risks associated with consuming minute concentrations of drugs. But those experts also agree that dangers cannot be ruled out, especially given the emerging research.

COMMON CHEMICALS FOUND

Two common industrial chemicals that are also pharmaceuticals — the antiseptics phenol and hydrogen peroxide — account for 92 percent of the 271 million pounds identified as coming from drugmakers and other manufacturers. Both can be toxic and both are considered to be ubiquitous in the environment.

However, the list of 22 includes other troubling releases of chemicals that can be used to make drugs and other products: 8 million pounds of the skin bleaching cream hydroquinone, 3 million pounds of nicotine compounds that can be used in quit-smoking patches, 10,000 pounds of the antibiotic tetracycline hydrochloride. Others include treatments for head lice and worms.

Residues are often released into the environment when manufacturing equipment is cleaned.

A small fraction of pharmaceuticals also leach out of landfills where they are dumped. Pharmaceuticals released onto land include the chemo agent fluorouracil, the epilepsy medicine phenytoin and the sedative pentobarbital sodium. The overall amount may be considerable, given the volume of what has been buried — 572 million pounds of the 22 monitored drugs since 1988.

In one case, government data shows that in Columbus, Ohio, pharmaceutical maker Boehringer Ingelheim Roxane Inc. discharged an estimated 2,285 pounds of lithium carbonate — which is considered slightly toxic to aquatic invertebrates and freshwater fish — to a local wastewater treatment plant between 1995 and 2006. Company spokeswoman Marybeth C. McGuire said the pharmaceutical plant, which uses lithium to make drugs for bipolar disorder, has violated no laws or regulations. McGuire said all the lithium discharged, an annual average of 190 pounds, was lost when residues stuck to mixing equipment were washed down the drain.

DRUG MAKERS REACT

Pharmaceutical company officials point out that active ingredients represent profits, so there's a huge incentive not to let any escape. They also say extremely strict manufacturing regulations — albeit aimed at other chemicals — help prevent leakage, and that whatever traces may get away are handled by onsite wastewater treatment.

"Manufacturers have to be in compliance with all relevant environmental laws," said Alan Goldhammer, a scientist and vice president at the industry trade group Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America.

Goldhammer conceded some drug residues could be released in wastewater, but stressed "it would not cause any environmental issues because it was not a toxic substance at the level that it was being released at."

Several big drugmakers were asked this simple question: Have you tested wastewater from your plants to find out whether any active pharmaceuticals are escaping, and if so what have you found?

No drugmaker answered directly.

"Based on research that we have reviewed from the past 20 years, pharmaceutical manufacturing facilities are not a significant source of pharmaceuticals that contribute to environmental risk," GlaxoSmithKline said in a statement.

AstraZeneca spokeswoman Kate Klemas said the company's manufacturing processes "are designed to avoid, or otherwise minimize the loss of product to the environment" and thus "ensure that any residual losses of pharmaceuticals to the environment that do occur are at levels that would be unlikely to pose a threat to human health or the environment."

One major manufacturer, Pfizer Inc., acknowledged that it tested some of its wastewater — but outside the United States.

The company's director of hazard communication and environmental toxicology, Frank Mastrocco, said Pfizer has sampled effluent from some of its foreign drug factories. Without disclosing details, he said the results left Pfizer "confident that the current controls and processes in place at these facilities are adequately protective of human health and the environment."

It's not just the industry that isn't testing.

FDA spokesman Christopher Kelly noted that his agency is not responsible for what comes out on the waste end of drug factories. At the EPA, acting assistant administrator for water Mike Shapiro — whose agency's Web site says pharmaceutical releases from manufacturing are "well defined and controlled" — did not mention factories as a source of pharmaceutical pollution when asked by the AP how drugs get into drinking water.

"Pharmaceuticals get into water in many ways," he said in a written statement. "It's commonly believed the majority come from human and animal excretion. A portion also comes from flushing unused drugs down the toilet or drain; a practice EPA generally discourages."

His position echoes that of a line of federal drug and water regulators as well as drugmakers, who concluded in the 1990s — before highly sensitive tests now used had been developed — that manufacturing is not a meaningful source of pharmaceuticals in the environment.

Pharmaceutical makers typically are excused from having to submit an environmental review for new products, and the FDA has never rejected a drug application based on potential environmental impact. Also at play are pressures not to delay potentially lifesaving drugs. What's more, because the EPA hasn't concluded at what level, if any, pharmaceuticals are bad for the environment or harmful to people, drugmakers almost never have to report the release of pharmaceuticals they produce.

"The government could get a national snapshot of the water if they chose to," said Jennifer Sass, a senior scientist for the Natural Resources Defense Council, "and it seems logical that we would want to find out what's coming out of these plants."

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

"Know Before You Go" is a weekly update on construction projects throughout Santa Monica.

Annenberg Community Beach House (415 Pacific Coast Hwy.)

Traffic signal at PCH and Beach House Way has been activated. Beach Parking Lot 10 will remain closed for rehabilitation until project completion in mid April 2009. Beach users are advised to use the beach bike path or park in Beach Lot 9, just south of Lot 10. The self-pay machine in Lot 9 allows payment for either all-day or two-hour parking.

Annual Tree Trimming Project

City trees will be trimmed at various locations. For the address and location please visit the KBUG website (www.knowB4ugo.smgov.net). The annual tree trimming schedule is subject to change without notice due to inclement weather, emergencies, community events, budget conditions, street repairs or other public improvements. Residences and businesses will be notified in advance of tree trimming operations, blocks will also be posted with no parking signs.

Back On the Beach Café (445 Pacific Coast Highway)

Traffic signal at PCH and Beach House Way has been activated. Beach Parking Lot 10 will remain closed for rehabilitation until project completion in mid April 2009. Beach users are advised to use the beach bike path or park in Beach Lot 9, just south of Lot 10. The self-pay machine in Lot 9 allows payment for either all-day or two-hour parking.

Big Blue Bus Campus Expansion (1620 Sixth St.)

No public parking at the eastside of Sixth Street (South of Colorado Avenue). Construction is currently under way through Aug. 25, 2009: No parking along, and no pedestrian access to west sidewalk of Seventh Street, between Colorado and Olympic Boulevard. No parking along and no pedestrian access to south sidewalk of Colorado, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Bicknell Street Greening Project

Crews will be working on both sides of Bicknell from Ocean Avenue to Neilson Way. The work may temporarily block sidewalk travel, vehicular access and parking on one block of Bicknell Avenue between Neilson Way and Ocean Avenue. Only residential access on the block will be permitted. Please follow posted detour signs and flag men's direction. Driveway access will remain available to residents throughout most of the project. Residential access will be permitted from Ocean Avenue. On Tuesday, April 14, driveway access will be unavailable from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. so crews can pour concrete in the driveways.

Colorado Ocean Relief Sewer Project

Eastbound Colorado will not be allowed to turn left onto northbound Second Street and Ocean Court Alley will be blocked at Colorado.

Euclid Court Project

Grinding, concrete gutter and asphalt paving is underway in the 1800 and 1900 block of Euclid Court. Parking enforcement and other public safety agencies have been notified. Please follow posted detour signs and flag men's direction to ensure your safety.

Citywide Street Repair Project

There will be sidewalk repairs to the following streets: Sixth and Fifth streets from Montana to Wilshire, Euclid and 12th Street from Olympic to cul-de-sac. A construction notice will be passed out advising the residents and businesses of the work. Temporary parking permits are on the backside of the notice and you may use those to park within a two block radius. Please read the instructions. No Parking posters will also be placed. Please obey the dates and the times posted. Additionally, the intersection of Fourth and Olympic including the I-10 Freeway on-ramp will be completely closed starting Thursday April 16 and opening April 20. The Fourth Street I-10 exit will have two right turn lanes (northbound) open. Both southbound and northbound traffic on Fourth Street will be closed to through traffic between Colorado and Pico boulevards; local access to adjacent hotel, parking structures and Civic Center parking will be maintained. Signage and detour information will be posted at key locations in advance of the start of work. Traffic Safety personnel will be stationed at various locations to help direct the traffic.

Pico Area Resurfacing Project

The majority of the project is substantially completed. Striping at various locations in the Pico area will be completed by April 17.

Desert clash in West over solar potential and water

BY RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

OAKLAND A westward dash to power electricity-hungry cities by cashing in on the desert's most abundant resource — sunshine — is clashing with efforts to protect the tiny pupfish and desert tortoise and stinginess over the region's rarest resource: water.

Water is the cooling agent for what traditionally has been the most cost-efficient type of large-scale solar plants. To some solar companies answering Washington's push for renewable energy on vast government lands, it's also an environmental thorn. The unusual collision pits natural resources protections against President Barack Obama's plans to produce more environmentally friendly energy.

The solar hopefuls are encountering overtaxed aquifers and a legendary legacy of Western water wars and legal and regulatory scuffles. Some are moving to more costly air-cooled technology — which uses 90 percent less water — for solar plants that will employ miles of sun-reflecting mirrors across the Western deserts. Others see market advantages in solar dish or photovoltaic technologies that don't require steam engines and cooling water and that are becoming more economically competitive.

The National Park Service is worried about environmental consequences of solar proposals on government lands that are administered by the Bureau of Land Management. It says it supports the solar push but is warning against water drawdowns, especially in southern Nevada. In the Amargosa Valley, the endangered, electric-blue pupfish lives in a hot water, aquifer-fed limestone cavern called Devil's Hole.

"It is not in the public interest for BLM to approve plans of development for water-cooled solar energy projects in the arid basins of southern Nevada, some of which are already over-appropriated," Jon Jarvis, director of the Park Service's Pacific West Region, wrote to the BLM director in Nevada.

Jarvis' e-mail from February, obtained by The Associated Press, noted that the rare pupfish's dwindling numbers prompted Nevada to ban new groundwater allocations within 25 miles of the pool.

Jarvis urged the BLM to promote technologies that use less water and hold off on permits until it finishes its assessment of the solar program next year. The BLM tried suspending new applications last year but relented under pressure from industry and advocates of renewable energy.

"Water is a big concern and the desert tortoise is a major concern, and the amount of site preparation is a concern," said Linda Resseguie, a BLM project manager. The government in reviewing each project wants to make careful decisions over what it considers "a potentially irreversible commitment of lands," she said.

Water is among the complications in deserts where more than 150 solar applications have been submitted for hot spots in Nevada, California, and Arizona, plus a few in New Mexico.

Companies are wrestling with routes for long-distance transmission lines and habitat for the threatened desert tortoise. They also are worried about a proposal being developed by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., for a Mojave national monument, which could put up to 600,000 acres off-limits alongside already protected park and military lands. It could affect at least 14 solar and five wind energy proposals.

The Spanish-owned energy company, Iberdrola, has submitted 12 applications in four states. Its solar managing director, Kim Fiske, said her company is planning to use photovoltaic technology in Amargosa Valley but elsewhere will evaluate each site's feasibility for water. Photovoltaic systems use conducting material to convert sunlight directly to electricity and need only nominal amounts of water to wash their solar panels, compared with the traditional steam-turbine solar that uses much larger volumes of water for cooling towers.

"Water usage is becoming the larger issue. Some companies still want wet cooling and say it's less efficient to do dry cooling, and they need 10 percent more land to get the same output," said Peter Weiner, an attorney representing solar companies. Some are exploring hybrid systems that use water during the hottest part of the day.

The government won't say how much water would be needed by applicants because those proposals are still in flux. But National Park Service hydrologists last fall tallied more than 50,000 acre feet per year — nearly 16.3 billion gallons — proposed by applications in Amargosa Valley alone, or enough to supply more than 50,000 typical American homes. Nevada previously said the basin could support only half that. Since then, some companies have dropped out or switched to photovoltaics, making that estimate of 16.3 billion gallons outdated.

Nevada's policy and legal mandates restrict water in the driest areas. California regulators warn that wet-cooled projects face an uphill climb. The two under review there so far on government land use minimal water. First up is Oakland, Calif.-based BrightSource Energy's five-square mile, air-cooled, mirror complex near the Mojave National Preserve.

In Arizona, most solar proposals are away from populous areas with the most water restrictions.

Water is "a hot button for everybody," said Fiske. "Everyone is concerned about water. It's probably one of the biggest issues."

FAIR FIGHT: Diesel car proponents would like to see the fuel taxation field leveled — so that gasoline and diesel (which is currently taxed higher) could compete fairly at the pump. But another hurdle still is the relative lack of filling stations across the U.S. with diesel pumps.

Parity at the pump

Dear EarthTalk

I don't understand why there are many European diesel cars with very high mileage ratings that are not available in the U.S. Can you enlighten?

John Healy
Fairfield, CT

DIFFERENT COUNTRIES DO HAVE differing standards in regard to how much pollution gasoline and diesel automobile engines are allowed to emit, but the reason you see so fewer diesel cars in the U.S. is more of a choice by automakers than the product of a decree by regulators on either side of the Atlantic.

Since the advent of the automobile age in the U.S., gasoline has been king of the road; today upwards of 95 percent of passenger cars and light trucks on American roads are gas-powered. And the federal government has done its part to keep it that way, taxing diesel at a rate about 25 percent higher than gasoline. A recent assessment by the American Petroleum Institute, an oil industry trade group, found that federal taxes accounted for 24.4 cents per gallon of diesel but only 18.4 cents per gallon of gasoline.

In Europe, where in many regions about half of the cars on the road run on diesel, these tax incentives are flip-flopped, with diesel drivers reaping the economic benefits accordingly.

But according to Jonathan Welsh, who writes the "Me and My Car" Q&A column for The Wall Street Journal, interest in diesels — which typically offer better fuel efficiency than gas-powered cars — has gained significant momentum in the U.S. in recent years given the uptick in gasoline prices. The popularity of diesels also surged, albeit briefly, in the mid-1970s after the U.S. suffered its first "oil shock" that sent gas prices through the roof. But gas prices settled down and so did American fervor for diesels at that point.

Today, though, with so much emphasis on going green, diesel cars — some of which boast similar fuel efficiency numbers as hybrids — are on the comeback trail in the U.S. Recently passed regulations require diesel fuel sold in the U.S. today to have ultra low emissions, which appeals to those concerned about their carbon footprints and other environmental impacts. Also, the increased availability of carbon-neutral biodiesel — a form of diesel fuel made from agricultural wastes that can be used in place of regular diesel fuel without any engine modifications — is convincing a whole new generation of American drivers to consider diesel-powered cars. Right now only Volkswagen, Mercedes and Jeep sell diesel-powered cars in the U.S., but Ford, Nissan and others plan to launch American versions of diesel models already successful in Europe within the next year.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Coalition for Advanced Diesel Cars, a trade group that represents several automakers as well as parts and fuel suppliers, would like to see the U.S. government increase incentives for American drivers to choose diesel-powered engines by leveling the fuel taxation field — so gasoline and diesel could be competing fairly at the pump — and by boosting tax breaks on the purchase of new, more fuel efficient diesel vehicles. One hurdle is the relative lack of filling stations across the U.S. with diesel pumps, but as such vehicles become more popular, filling stations that don't already offer them can relatively easily add a diesel pump or two.

Another round, Ms. Sommelier

forchicks.com. And this Beer Chick is on a mission, namely to proclaim the good news of craft beer to its most under-served population: women.

"There was a need amongst people, especially women," she said. "They didn't have a lot of knowledge, and when they did have that beer knowledge it was empowering and kind of made them cool, kind of made them unique."

Feminism in a pint glass, who would of thunk it.

The path to beer maven-hood was round about at best. Perozzi was raised in Edwardsville, Illinois, the heart of Anheuser-Busch country, an irony she now recognizes. Educated in journalism and communication at Indiana University, Perozzi promptly found employment in everything but.

"Actually, I was a musician," Perozzi said. "I decided I was going to be a singer songwriter, so I packed my bags and drove to Los Angeles where I became a waiter."

Her mother was so proud.

"I went back and forth from bartending to waitressing to thinking maybe I could make it in the corporate world. But every time I tried to get a nine-to-five job I wanted to throw myself through a plate glass window," Perozzi said.

Out of desperation, Perozzi approached a friend who managed Father's Office and begged for a job. It turned out to be a fateful decision.

Perozzi needed to make a living and clearing dishes at the bar was not the way to do it, but to get promoted to bartender, she needed to have an intimate knowledge of beers that most drinkers accustomed to Budweiser had never heard of.

"There are no mass-produced industrial beers here. You had to know what to give someone if they wanted a Newcastle and five beers from that in order of intensity that they would like, too," Perozzi said. "I started learning about it and totally nerded out on it."

When she first started at Father's Office, Perozzi refused to touch any beer but the lambic, a style flavored of overripe fruit and so brightly carbonated that it's almost soda. Her tastes broadened as did her responsibilities at Father's Office — she eventually took on the mantle of manager.

Perozzi has moved on from the retail scene to become a one-woman beer promoter. Restaurants getting hip to the cache of the beer scene hire her to put together beer lists that rival their already impressive assortment of wines.

Although she's busy improving the way the Westside drinks — Perozzi jokes that she needed to get her passport stamped to cross east of the I-405 — she continues to labor to make beer more accessible to the layperson.

Perozzi just put the finishing touches on her first book, "The Naked Pint: An Unadulterated Guide to Craft Beer," which hits streets on Nov. 3. In it are all the topics that fascinated Perozzi about beer when she first learned the difference between a lager and a hefeweizen, but in a fun, female voice that she hopes will be more entertaining than the dry, technical books she had to reference.

Though the book was originally pitched for women, that focus slowly morphed as Perozzi and her writing partner, Hallie Beaune, realized one critical fact.

"Men don't know anymore about beer than women do. They really don't," Perozzi said.

The book owes its genesis to Santa Monica's section of Montana Avenue and every coffee shop Perozzi stationed at in an attempt to get out of the solitary confinement zone of her apartment. There also might have been a visit or two to The Daily Pint, which she holds up with Father's Office as one of the best beer places in all of L.A.

"It's a nice place to do work, especially if you're writing about beer because it's really hard to write about beer without having a beer or knowing you will have a beer soon," Perozzi said with a laugh.

What better way to celebrate good beer than to drink it, after all, and that is what Perozzi is all about.

"I mean it's beer," she said. "Beer's supposed to bring people together, encourage conversation, loosen your tongue a little bit. It's social lubricant, basically. And it's a way to celebrate. It's supposed to be casual, it's supposed to be fun."

capacity at 120 or so attendees, were careful when selecting their words, and spoke openly about the impact of words and perceptions.

"I use the F-word because it lets people know that I feel politicized about my appearance," said Lesleigh Owen, a fat activist and president of the Los Angeles chapter of the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance. "Here in L.A. we are bombarded every day with anti-fat messages. Cutting out chunks of your body is advocated as a path to happiness."

Owen, who recently finished her doctorate in sociology at UC Santa Cruz with a dissertation titled "Fat Experiences and Forming Fat Identities," elaborated on the different types of spatial discrimination and verbal violence which she has experienced as a fat person.

"Fat people are paid less than their thinner counterparts and have higher rates of depression and suicide," she said, attributing the latter statistics to the way fat people are treated by others. "This world is discriminatory, but that's what we need to change; we don't need to change our bodies."

But as potentially painful and serious as the topics of discussion were, most said they found the meetings positive and mutually informative.

"It's been all positive," said Rachel Foyt, an administrative analyst for the library who helped organize the event. "We give our speakers a small amount of training on how to diffuse tensions and keep conversations going, but most people come with thoughtful questions and are polite."

Some attendees said that the concept of the living library seemed intimidating at first, but proved to be a gratifying experience.

"Coming in, I had some reservations," said Mike Rich, a Santa Monica resident who checked out four of the stations. "I thought it would be awkward and exploitational — like a freak show."

But as the afternoon progressed, moods shifted.

"Everyone who is here is defining themselves as something, so you don't have to define them yourself. You can speak to them about personal things without taking the time to have to get to know them; all their stats are on the table," he said, adding that "it's really nice to speak with someone from a group you're not a part of."

Saturday's event was the second installment of the Living Library Project, which held its first outing in October of last year.

Less than a decade old, the format was first utilized in Denmark in 2000 and was picked up in Santa Monica after colleagues e-mailed some news articles about similar events taking place in Europe.

Last October's living library was the first ever held in the United States.

Arrest is second made since March incident

Garfinkle, 19. The Scottsdale, Ariz., teen suffered two broken legs and other injuries. Garfinkle remained hospitalized Saturday in stable condition, Harding said.

Police said that after hitting the students, Luna got out of the car and pulled Garfinkle off the windshield. Garfinkle was left bleeding in the street, authorities said.

Garfinkle's father, Myron Garfinkle, issued a statement following Saturday's arrest saying, "We are happy to see justice being served for our family, the other family, and for everyone who lives in Los Angeles."

Luna's wife, Claudia Cabrera, 30, of Los Angeles, was arrested April 2. She has pleaded not guilty to felony hit-and-run and misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter, and remains jailed on $1 million bail.

Police have said that Cabrera was driving with a suspended license and that her 7-month-old son was in the car at the time.

She could face up to eight years in prison if convicted.

Lakers victorious in playoff opener

BY BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES Pardon Phil Jackson's lack of enthusiasm for how the Los Angeles Lakers played in the second half. They piled up 62 points on Utah in the first half, then got outscored over the final 24 minutes.

"It wasn't a coach's delight, that's for sure," he said.

But his players sure liked the outcome, a 113-100 victory over the Jazz in the teams' playoff opener Sunday.

Kobe Bryant scored 24 points, Trevor Ariza added 21 and Pau Gasol 20 as the Lakers pretty much had their way against the eighth-seeded Jazz. They led by 22 points at halftime and then answered resoundingly both times Utah got within nine in the second half.

"They kept knocking on the door and we just never let them in," Bryant said.

Allowing a Phil Jackson-coached team to win Game 1 of any series doesn't bode well for the opposition. Jackson's teams have never lost a playoff series after winning Game 1, going 41-for-41 with Chicago and the Lakers.

"We had a very difficult time," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said. "We gave up 62 points in the first half and it's virtually impossible to beat this team giving them an edge."

Carlos Boozer led the Jazz with 27 points and Deron Williams added 16 points and a career playoff-high 17 assists. Both were in foul trouble, with Boozer getting his third just before halftime when Williams already had two.

"I didn't shoot the ball too well," Williams said. "I did a good job getting in the lane and distributing the basketball, I just couldn't finish."

The Jazz sorely missed Mehmet Okur, who sat out with a mild right hamstring strain. He averages 17 points and 7.5 rebounds and gives Utah a much-needed inside presence against the Lakers' twin 7-footers, Andrew Bynum and Gasol.

Bynum had seven points and three rebounds playing in foul trouble most of the game.

"We were just a step slow," Sloan said. "They kicked our butt off the floor."

He questioned his young team's toughness, a trait Utah has rarely lacked during the Hall of Fame coach's tenure.

"We're not a nasty team," Sloan said. "Most of the teams that we've had here have been pretty nasty and they will get after you from daylight to dark. We're just learning how to get after it a little bit more as we go along with younger guys.

"Part of that's my fault. I probably haven't been nasty enough with them."

Bryant wasn't buying Sloan's assessment.

"I'm a game connoisseur, so I know how nasty Sloan was when he was playing," he said. "Pardon my French, but your (rear) would be kicked out of the league if you played that physical now. I'm sure he's using it as a motivational tool to get those guys to play even harder."

They'll need to at Staples Center.

The Jazz were 15-26 on the road during the regular season, and the Lakers have now beaten them 10 in a row at home, including playoff games.

Bryant spent the first quarter getting his teammates involved before putting his own mark on the game.

His total gave Bryant 3,710 career postseason points, moving him past Magic Johnson and into ninth on the NBA's list. He trails only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (4,070) and Jerry West (4,457) for most points in the playoffs with the Lakers.

The Jazz outscored the Lakers 33-24 in the third quarter to trail 86-73 going into the final 12 minutes. They opened the quarter on a 9-0 run, then a 9-2 burst got them to 72-63, their first single-digit deficit since late in the opening quarter.

But Bryant scored three in a row and Shannon Brown hit a 3-pointer that kept the Lakers ahead by 13.

The Jazz got to 98-89 on a 3-pointer by Andrei Kirilenko with 5:46 remaining in the game. Bryant answered with four points in a row and Gasol hit two free throws that pushed the lead back to 13 points.

The teams combined to make 67 trips to the free throw line.

"A lot of free throws. Anytime you get to the line it stops the momentum," Bryant said. "It doesn't enable us to get out on transition. It was a stop-and-go game, and that's exactly the style of basketball that they play."

That's what Jackson disliked, especially Utah's 20-7 edge on the offensive boards.

"Foul after foul after foul," he said. "Rebounds, offensive rebounds, those are the things we harped on all week about having to watch that particular aspect of our game."

Williams stole the ball from Bryant to start the game and the Jazz hit three quick shots to take their largest lead of four points.

It was all Lakers after that.

Bryant dished off to Ariza and Brown for 3-pointers, and the Lakers built a 30-10 lead while shooting 71 percent.

Bryant sat down to start the second quarter while Lamar Odom and Bynum combined to score the Lakers' first 12 points, stretching their lead to 42-29. Twice the Jazz got within 10 in that span, but the Lakers took off on a 20-8 scoring binge the second time.

Bryant contributed by reeling off nine consecutive points before Luke Walton's 3-pointer gave the Lakers a 62-40 halftime lead.

The Jazz struggled on 35 percent shooting from the floor, and hit just 1-of-7 from 3-point range in the half.

"We kind of looked like deer in the headlights to start," Sloan said. "I was kind of shocked."

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card® is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Fun and games tonight, Scorpio

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Take your time and understand what is going on behind the scenes. Research and quiet thought are the first steps. Tonight: Do what you want.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Zero in on what you need to do. Your clarity and style work. The end result will be that several people will rethink their decisions and transform their stances. As you know, a realization works better than forcing your opinion on others. Tonight: Where the action is.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Your leadership and intellect take you down a new path, opening doors and helping you grow. Investigate alternatives, even if you might be a bit hesitant. Tonight: Burning the candle at both ends.

CANCER (June 21-July 2)
★★★★ Look at the end results and do some research, especially if you would have preferred another outcome. People in general seem to be changing right before your very eyes. Tonight: Choose your favorite mind candy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Work with someone closely, and you'll see life through renewed eyes. Observe and get to the bottom of a problem with this perspective. Your ability to understand what is happening and then communicate the information helps. Tonight: A must appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others and listen. You might be surprised by everything that you see. How you let others know is your choice. Your creativity smolders. Follow another's lead. Realize your alternatives; seek out experts. Tonight: Sort through your choices.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Tune in to your needs and realize what is happening. Are you selling yourself short? A partner understands what is going on with someone you have to deal with. Get as much done as you can, professionally. Stick with the basics. Tonight: Happy at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Plug your imagination in where it counts. You might want to change your perspective about someone who is a stick in the mud. This person is changing right in front of you. Listen to what others are saying. Tonight: Fun and games.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ You can only do so much. Stay centered, but willingly say "enough." An investment is very important in your future. Listen to different suggestions with the knowledge that you are heading in the right direction. Tonight: Order in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Keep your communication active and flowing. How you want to proceed depends on how energized you are about a cause or topic. Tonight: Hang out with a friend or a loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Kick back and get to the bottom of a problem. Listen to news that heads in your direction with a touch of cynicism. Your hunch on a money matter could be right-on. Tonight: Pay bills.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You might be all smiles but handle a situation differently. The end result will be substantially different. Understand how many options you can open up with a little luck and time. Note a change within yourself about your friends. Tonight: As you like.

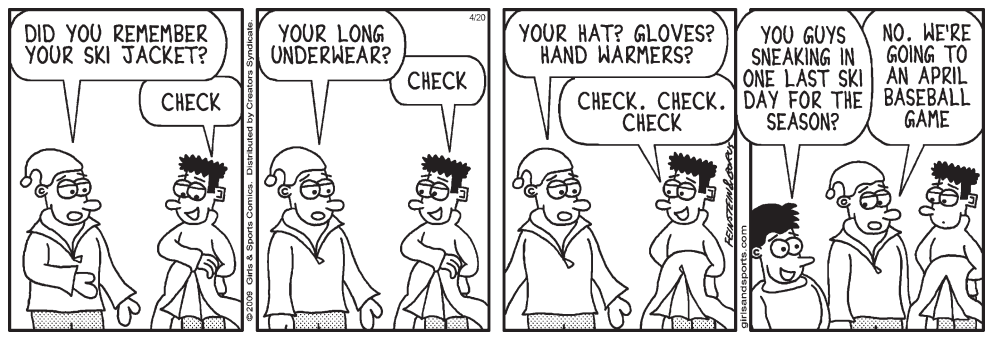

Happy birthday

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year, aim for precisely what you want. If you have a certain project, goal or desire, an opportunity could help make it a reality. The planets will root you on. You will be able to enlist support and get direction. You come from a basic point of view. Be smart -- broaden your horizons. You discover the power of travel, study and detachment in eliminating or dropping rigid thinking. If you are single and want to change your status, this year presents many options. Friends will play an even more dominant role. If you are attached, the two of you working as a team will realize one of your mutual dreams.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ Criminals Not Keeping Low Profiles: (1) Motorist Christopher Cadenhead, 39, was stopped in Osceola County, Fla., in January for having an expired tag. Inside his car, police found 200 pounds of marijuana. (2) Jose Melendez, 54, and his wife and daughter were stopped by Douglas County, Neb., deputies in January after their RV was driving on the shoulder of Interstate 80. Cover-story discrepancies among the three occupants as to where they were headed and which "relatives" they were "visiting" aroused a deputy's suspicion, and a search of the vehicle revealed $2.5 million worth of cocaine under a floorboard.

■ Karma: (1) A 25-year-old man who was a passenger in a car driven by a drunk friend was killed in Houston in February when he was thrown from the car in a crash. That incident came seven months after the victim had, himself, been charged with DUI in a crash that killed two people. (2) Two brothers driving a stolen car and being chased by police on Interstate 70 near St. Louis in November were killed when they accidentally crashed into another car. That car, also, had been stolen.
