Council seeks to regulate Airbnb, VRBO

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

CITY HALL City Council will consider regulating short-term rentals, like those offered by companies like Airbnb and VRBO.

Near midnight on Wednesday, as council discussed the updated Zoning Ordinance, Mayor Kevin McKeown made a request for city attorneys to draw up an ordinance to deal with what he called "a crisis for housing."

"For a seaside tourist magnet like Santa Monica, vacation rental of our scarce housing stock, displacing real residents and creating problems for neighbors, is particularly threatening," he said in an e-mail after the meeting.

Sites like Airbnb and VRBO (Vacation Rental By Owner) connect travelers with residents who are willing to sublet their spaces. City officials have said in the past that these sublets likely violate a slew of city codes, from rent control laws to zoning to business license requirements, but enforcement has been near impossible. Landlords have resorted to stinging their tenants — renting their own properties on Airbnb and showing up to a shocked host.

McKeown suggested that there are as many as 1,700 housing units in the city being used as short-term vacation rentals.

"What this would prevent is the conversion of existing housing stock in our city to de facto hotel rooms," he said.

The ordinance, as McKeown proposed it, would require residents to license their homes as commercial properties. They would regulate the practice, he said, through the rental facilities — whether they be web-based or land-based.

"It would prohibit both the offerers and the short-term rental facility from offering or accepting money or anything of value from advertising or providing a facility for such vacation rentals unless they're licensed," he said.

Hosts would have to give a city agency their addresses and report the lengths of stay for every rental.

Exemptions would include home swaps, roommates, and rentals of a residence when the owner is absent due to a job assignment.

"Enforcement of this could be both by the city and by the neighbors," he said, "with the remedy being fines that are at least equal to the gross amount paid by the renter so that we get equitable relief and we get attorney's fees."

Councilmember Pam O'Connor was skeptical but seemed opened to some type of regulation.

"It's something, frankly, that is not going to go away," she said, "that younger people do expect and use and, I think, has a place. I agree, though, that when there are those abuses — when people are, in effect, going into business where they're acquiring units, acting like hotels — that that's a problematic side of it. I want to make sure we're not outright banning it — that we find some way so that people who are doing real peer-to-peer sharing have that opportunity to do it."

Council voted unanimously to have city attorneys draft the ordinance and McKeown asked that they return with it next week.

"I anticipate robust debate when this comes back," he said.

Starbucks opening 21st location in Santa Monica

BY DAVID MARK SIMPSON
Daily Press Staff Writer

PICO BLVD Soon, Santa Monica will have more Starbucks than post offices (three), fire stations (five), libraries (five), and City Council members (seven) combined.

The 21st Starbucks coffee in Santa Monica is slated to replace a Kentucky Fried Chicken on Pico Boulevard at Stewart Street, according to documents filed with the Architecture Review Board.

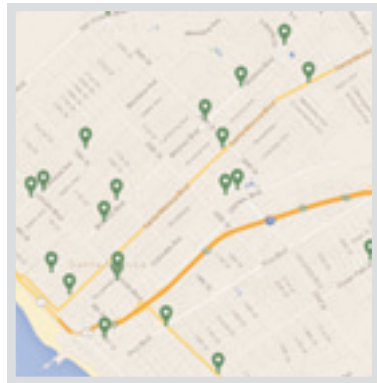

The Seattle-based coffee giants want to replace the drive-thru KFC with a drive-thru Starbucks, the second drive-thru Starbucks in the city. They're seeking approval of the building design, colors, materials, and landscape plans for the project.

Last year, a Starbucks replaced the Tommy's Burger on Lincoln Boulevard at Pico Boulevard. Starbucks also sought an alcohol license for its new location across the street from City Hall. It got an initial approval, drawing ire from some residents, but ultimately the request for a license was retracted.

Santa Monica has a long history with Starbucks. Earlier this month, the Frappuccino, which was invented at a Starbucks on the Third Street Promenade according to an article by the food blog Eater LA, celebrated its 20th birthday.

According to Starbucks' website, there are already 20 locations throughout the Less bacon, more broccoli for city staff in March

BY MATTHEW HALL
Editor-in-Chief

CITYWIDE The City of Santa Monica offered a Meatless March promotion to employees last month that aimed to reduce meat consumption while promoting a healthy lifestyle.

The 2015 challenge was the first for the city and staff said 128 employees participated, skipping an average of four meat lunches per week that equated to 369 lbs of meat or about 382 animals. About 80 percent of the participants were not vegetarian prior to the challenge and the challenge prevented 3,043 lbs of carbon dioxide from being released.

"One thing we were trying to do was do our best in the challenge to reach out to people that eat meat all the time and have never considered eating vegan or vegetation," said Karl Bruskotter, an analyst with the Office of Sustainability and the Environment

He said the program began with the year-round "meatless Monday" and the Meatless March built on that program. Employees that went beyond the once-a-week vegetarian diet were rewarded with a point-based system. Those points were redeemed for prizes as a means of incentivzing the plant based diet.

There was an online tracking option that allowed employees to log their meals via computer but Bruskotter said given the goal of reaching as many people as possible, the program also included a paper-tracking option for employees that spend their days in the field.

The City provided recommendations regarding restaurants and recipes to kick-start the program and helped broadcast meatless options recommended by participants.

"Santa Monica is not a tough place to go vegetarian or vegan, there's so much good vegetarian/vegan food in this city," he said. "We were trying to catch all the different employees, whether they eat meat or not and we were sensitive to the idea that some places may be more expensive, but a vegetarian burrito is cheaper than a meat burrito."

Bruskotter said the city took a multi-faceted approach to its promotions including citing the historic precedent set during WWII, listing recommendations from the American Heart Association to reduce meat consumption as a means of preventing heart disease, explaining cost savings from a reduced meat diet and explaining the environmental benefits of a vegetarian diet.

"This wasn't just coming from us," he said. "The 2015 dietary guidelines are coming from the federal government and one of the primary recommendations in the newest guidelines is to reduce meat consumption, both for personal health and the planet. This is the first time it's mentioned the environmental link to what we eat when it had always been a personal health issue before."

James F. Conway, Senior Sustainability Analyst said the meatless march program was one of several sustainability efforts underway in the city.

"This is part of a broader set of employee engagement programs supporting the Sustainable City Plan. Other notable programs that were launched include the Green Office Certification program and Bike@Work program."

Those efforts payoff for employees and the city itself.

"When employees eat a little healthier, its good for them but it's also good for the city's health care costs," Bruskotter said. "There are a lot of good things that could come out of it."

Bruskotter said the response was mostly, but not universally, positive.

"There were a couple who said 'the city is trying to make us be vegan' but few people were offended by it. We got tons of positive feedback. We're just trying to nudge them to eat less (meat), we're not trying to make anyone vegan or vegetarian," he said.

Access is needed

Editor:

Santa Monicans for Safe Access (SAMOSA) would like to comment on your article Council Spars over Density, Housing in Zoning Ordinance Update published April 17. In that article, you noted that Council may consider dropping Wilshire as an area where dispensaries might locate. Council may also consider adding a buffer between the two allowed dispensaries.

SAMOSA DOES support adding a buffer between the two dispensaries. We suggest a distance of 1,000'. However, if Wilshire were dropped, adding this buffer would make it impossible for two dispensaries to locate on Santa Monica Blvd. – the sole remaining area. Indeed, adding this buffer and keeping Wilshire is a measured, reasonable approach resulting in the smartest balance between access versus location appropriateness.

We noticed that on the same day that your article was published CNN's Chief Medical Correspondent Dr. Sanjay Gupta again wrote an article strongly supporting safe access to medical marijuana. He noted "It can be tricky to be on the right side of science, but on the wrong side of ideology." Beyond this, SAMOSA should like to mention a few additional reasons why keeping Wilshire makes logical sense, as follows:

· Sensitive Uses Already Exclude Much of Wilshire: With the 600' proximity exclusion (about two blocks) from sensitive uses, significant stretches of Wilshire are already excluded. Just looking at Reed Park, Lincoln Middle School and Douglas Park effectively excludes Lincoln to 10th St., Euclid to 17th St. and 22nd St. to 26th St. Citywide, it is extremely difficult to situate a dispensary anywhere because of the density of sensitive uses.

· Wilshire is a Major Transit Street: Because it has excellent public transit, Wilshire is a thoughtful spot for reasonable access. It means that having to drive to a dispensary is made far less likely. This goes towards the City's goal of creating a sustainable city.

· Access is Better Spread for Residents: Allowing dispensaries along both Wilshire and Santa Monica Boulevards gives residents better access. To concentrate them only along Santa Monica Boulevard poorly achieves reasonable access.

· It Follows What West Hollywood Has Done: As Chief Seabrooks stated to the Council, having a dispensary along major boulevards adds to public safety because it allows better "eyes-on" by the Police. This is among the reasons why West Hollywood permits dispensaries only along its major boulevards (e.g., Fairfax, Sunset and Santa Monica Blvds.). Santa Monica is modeling its ordinance on West Hollywood, so it makes sense to follow their reasoned approach too.

Finally, the Planning Commission and City Staff have rigorously studied the balance between safe access versus location appropriateness. Their long and hard work strikes a measured, reasonable and balanced approach. After all, any dispensary must go through a conditional use permitting process; so the City is maintaining control over the process anyway. Moreover, medical uses abound along Wilshire. It is, therefore, fitting and logical that dispensaries be allowed there too. Our many resident-members agree with the near unanimity of Commissioners and the City Staff that Wilshire ought to be allowed as a potential area for a dispensary.

Code updates, appeals fuel planning nuttiness

LAST TUESDAY, CITY COUNCIL LISTENED to some 140 passionate citizens express their opinions about modifications to zoning codes required by the city's updated master plan. The following night, council members deliberated on the many issues and made recommendations to staff for final tweaks and revisions.

As I expected, council pulled back on larger Tier 3 size developments thus eliminating 55-foot and taller buildings on Wilshire Boulevard — with exceptions for developments offering 100 percent affordable housing and properties with landmarks or structures of merit. Council also opposed massive Wilshire's "activity centers."

However, council stayed with its commitment to early childhood education and day care centers in R1 residential neighborhoods. The recommendation to not prohibit these businesses outright as city staff had proposed in the code revisions will therefore carry forward older codes that require persons wanting to operate these facilities to go through a lengthy public review process and obtain a Conditional Use Permit (CUP).

Persons opposing such a facility in their single-family neighborhood will have to fight the CUP application and take a chance that the early childhood/day care advocates on Planning Commission and City Council will deny it which is highly unlikely.

Council voted to reduce staff's proposal that allowed developers to not require on-site parking for every tenant in new developments within half a mile of transit hubs. The current codes require that developers provide parking to every tenant (or unit) whether or not they own a car. Council suggested that unbundling parking as a mandatory amenity be allowed in new projects up to one quarter mile from transit hubs if a parking study shows it's feasible.

The truth is that tenants, lots of 'em, are going to be parking on already jammed streets, if for nothing else, to save paying expensive on-site parking fees. Terry O'Day, who opposed the changes (along with Pam O'Connor), called bundled parking a tax for tenants who don't own a car and claimed it was a good policy. Unfortunately, it seems that O'Day and O'Connor still believe in flying unicorns and planning fairy tales like "people who live near transit won't own or drive cars."

Council changed the zoning on most A lots. The 115 residential (A lot) parcels on or adjacent to major boulevards, citywide were misidentified as "commercial" in zoning update documents. Residents wanted the unexplained designation corrected to insure that commercial developments will not encroach directly on adjacent homes and apartments near major boulevards.

112 were switched back to residential while three were left for review as part of Downtown's specific zoning rules.

In other actions, council recommended a special zoning district for the Pico Neighborhood to help preserve its unique character. And, holy smokes! Council approved, in principal, to allow two medical marijuana dispensaries somewhere in the city!

Neighborhood leaders felt betrayed and said leaving the activity center elements in the code, while removing some of the specific centers, did little good as future councils can still assemble the kind of development residents opposed.

Council's recommendations will go to staff for review and then return on May 5 for a final, binding vote making them the law of the land for the next 30 years or so.

APPEALING DEVELOPMENTS? NOT!

One of my favorite proposed developments is on appeal Wednesday night before the Planning Commission. It's a ten-apartment project shoehorned onto an irregular shaped parcel at 2919 Lincoln/802 Ashland Avenue. Current zoning allows four units on the site, but with "preferred permitted project" bonuses because of one low-income apartment and sustainable construction, the project has more than doubled in size.

It consists of the four, two-story residential structures over a 20 vehicle subterranean garage. Neighbors filed their appeal based on massing, density, close proximity to private homes that surround the essentially "landlocked" hillside, lack of California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) review, loss of on-street parking and other issues.

This project is a poster child for our dysfunctional planning and community development process. Overly large, a steep hillside parcel, high density, nearly complete lot coverage, badly conceived street access, unimaginative design and negative affect on neighbors — mostly because of one "low income" apartment.

Because this is an Architectural Review Board (ARB) appeal, Planning Commissioners can only deal with ARB-related issues like cosmetics and appearance. They have no authority to reduce the project's size, mass or make substantial structural changes. Too bad.

One other item is before Planning Commission Wednesday night on appeal and that's architect Ron Goldman's appeal of ARB approval for Millennium East Village, 2930 Colorado Avenue (Village Trailer Park). Here's another case where the Planning Commission can only act on those elements that were under ARB purview.

This is and always has been a massive and hideous project designed to squeeze as much revenue generating space onto a parcel as possible. Goldman's appeal would provide improvement. However, with Planning Commission's limited authority, chalk up one more bad development in a city that's becoming filled with them.

More Than Ponies

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN HUMANS and other animals is fundamental — we live deeply intertwined lives and have for millennia — but it's often unquestioned and arguably inconsistent. Discussing this can be disconcerting at times, because most people are comfortable where they've drawn the line, where ever it is they've drawn it.

But those lines can change. One such Exhibit A is our own State Assembly member Richard Bloom's AB 2140 - the Orca Safety & Protection Act, inspired by CNN's film Blackfish, about how whales are treated at SeaWorld in San Diego.

There was a time when people felt that such whale 'shows' were entertaining and brought humans and giant mammals closer. Now conditions of their captivity are increasingly seen as less than humane.

"After seeing the film at the request of my staff, then consulting with marine biology experts and traveling to SeaWorld to hear their point of view," Bloom told me after contacting him about AB 2140, "it is quite clear to me that the confined environment offered by marine parks like SeaWorld is damaging the health and well-being of these mammals, who have extraordinary intelligence and whose natural habitat is the wide open spaces of the ocean, where they freely feed and dive in marine habitats and travel up to 100 miles per day I am confident that Orca captivity will soon become a thing of the past, either through legislation or by internal corporate policy changes."

Which brings us to changes in attitudes about the pony rides at the Main St. Farmers Market.

Last September after a five month long campaign/petition drive led by Ocean Park resident Marcy Winograd, highlighting what she argued were abusive conditions for the ponies (following a similarly-themed campaign in 2005), the City Council instructed City Staff to give preference to non-animal vendors when the current pony ride contract expires in May.

However, in Angels and Nester vs. Winograd, Charney, et. al., the pony ride vendors sued Winograd and fellow Santa Monica resident Danielle Charney in Santa Monica Superior Court over the campaign. Judge Lisa Hart Cole dismissed the lawsuit against Charney in January, labeling it a Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation (SLAPP) and ruling Charney was entitled to collect attorney fees from the vendors, which Charney informed me the parties agreed to at $20,000.

In addition, Cole dismissed half of the suit against Winograd, while denying the pony ride vendors' request for prior restraint. However, the judge did not dismiss the other half, which included defamation/libel per se and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage charges. Cole said the plaintiffs had a probability of prevailing, because Winograd did not heed the view of Santa Monica Animal Control, which maintained there was nothing abusive about the pony rides.

Winograd is appealing this decision to the California Court of Appeal (Mark Goldowitz, an attorney who helped write California's anti-SLAPP law, is representing her.) Winograd argues its her first amendment right to assert that conditions were abusive regardless of others' evaluations, and that the U.S. Constitution protects her right to protest and petition her government in this manner.

Mammals are sentient and intelligent beings. What one thinks is abusive or not in these situations is partly a measurable function of how 'humanely' the ponies are treated — from the condition of their hooves, to the amount of fecal material in the transport trailer. But it's partly a measure of how one responds to the suggestion that we humans may be making a choice for another species that we don't have the right to make.

Winograd's free speech actions compel us to at least consider the basic question of what we get to decide for another species — and that question leads to others.

We love 'our' pet mammal dogs and cats. (How would people feel if their pet dog was tethered to a metal turnstile and compelled to circle barefoot on concrete in the same direction in the sun for 3.5 hours like the ponies?)

But our dietary choices and purchasing power — exacerbated by monopolistic corporate food industry practices - fund a cruel daily holocaust of other fellow mammals known as the factory farm "industry."

Of course the pony ride is a fundamentally different issue in kind and scale, and I don't doubt there have been many touching moments between children and ponies. But that's from a human perspective. How do we know the ponies like the deal? What is the context that we are teaching our children about humans deciding for animals?

Does this "subject over object" acceptance ultimately justify disregarding animal welfare in factory farming? Does the mindset that the Earth and its species are there for our unrestrained use, ultimately lead to a reckless and wasteful relationship with natural resources, that brings us climate change and ecological systems collapse? By vastly overshooting our ecological footprint, we've already brought about the greatest mass extinction of plants and animals in 65 million years — and now we threaten our very own existence as a widespread species, as we undermine the ecology and climate that sustains us.

Here in Santa Monica where we value sustainability, how can we interact more closely and sanely with other animals? When we eventually build our 160+ acre Great Park (on our public land where Santa Monica airport currently sits), an animal farm sanctuary/adoption center there could provide a transformative setting in which to relate to our fellow living beings.

We also need to think globally and question whether we are leaving enough space and habitat for other species in general across the planet. If our concepts of sustainability are based upon taking most everything for ourselves, is that really sustainable on a planet like our own, where all life forms are part of an ecologically-interdependent greater whole?

When Winograd and others raise questions about our relationship to other animals, it is a fair issue for society to re-examine. Our values, mores and practices change over time, in part exactly because people ask uncomfortable questions. That's one of the blessings of our free speech laws — and a pillar of our democracy.

city. Seven are located inside other stores, like Vons, Ralphs, or Barnes & Noble, while the other 13 (soon to be 14) are freestanding locations.

According to City Hall's list of the city's principal employers, Starbucks employed 194 people throughout the city in 2012, the most readily available statistic. That was good enough to place them among the top 50 largest employers in the city, just ahead of companies like Apple and the Viceroy Hotel.

And it's not just Starbucks. Santa Monica is loaded with coffee shops.

On top of the 20 Starbucks, there are eight Coffee Bean & Tea Leaf locations throughout the Bay City, according to that company's website.

Last year, when Dunkin' Donuts opened its first West Coast location in years, people camped out overnight to be first in line when the chain, which is blandly ubiquitous on the East Coast, served its first cup of coffee.

Philz, the Bay Area coffee franchise with a cult follow, brought its first Southern California location to Santa Monica last year to much fanfare. Bulletproof Coffee, which enjoys a similar cult-like adoration from its fans, will open on Main Street later this month.

Funnel Mill, on Broadway, is the go-to Los Angeles-area coffee shop for people who like paying $90 for a cup of coffee made from civet (a ferret-like rodent) excrement.

Bulletproof Coffee will soon open on Main Street offering "recipes, products and unique performance and biohacking technology together in a single, bricks and mortar location unlike any other," according to its opening statement.

Bob Dylan is rumored to own the 18th Street Coffee House on Broadway, though no one has been able to confirm that.

Dogtown Coffee, on Main Street, occupies the space that formerly housed Jeff Ho Surfboards and Zephyr Productions, which is widely cited as the gathering place for the Z-Boys, a group that popularized aerial skateboarding in the 1970s.

The Architectural Review Board will consider approving Starbucks' design requests at its meeting tonight.

You can use the app to issue a challenge to private or public friends, strangers. It can be a one day challenge, 12 hour challenge, 30 day challenge. We're trying to build a global challenge and contest platform that connects people and allows our users to have fun.

E: How are you changing the world?

J: I think we're changing the world to build off something like the ALS Ice Bucket Challenge. We want to do a similar process of having fun but also giving back. We're looking to partner with some nonprofits and create a platform that challenges people to become better and have fun.

E: Why Santa Monica?

J: I grew up in Orange County and when I was deciding where to move, I thought about the tech scene in LA and how it centers around Santa Monica. I think it's just a great city to live in. It's the hub.

E: Do you have one piece of advice for an entrepreneur starting their own business?

J: I think the biggest thing is simplicity of your product. Focus on your product being as simple as possible. So you can explain it to your user. Stay consistent in whatever you're trying to do, it will pay off.

E: Is there anything you'd like to share with the Santa Monica community?

J: I'll challenge the city of Santa Monica to get the app and set up challenges of things we can achieve as a city: improving health, improving the environment. Think of the city as a whole what we want to achieve as a whole. Let's continue to be the city everyone wants to live in.

Support Earth Day

Dear EarthTalk:

How can I find Earth Day events near me or are there other ways to show my support for the green movement on Earth Day?

Jessica Monteleone
Bridgeport, CT

APRIL 22, 2015 IS THE 45TH ANNUAL celebration of the first Earth Day in 1970, when 20 million Americans took to the streets, parks and auditoriums to demonstrate for a healthy, sustainable environment in massive coast-to-coast rallies. Back then, thousands of colleges and universities organized protests against the deterioration of the environment, while grassroots groups that had been fighting against oil spills, polluting factories and power plants, raw sewage, toxic dumps, pesticides, freeways, the loss of wilderness, and the extinction of wildlife realized they shared common values - and a unified environmental movement was born.

The spirit of that first Earth Day lives on every year when April 22 rolls around, but nowadays hundreds of millions of people around the world honor the planet and pledge to do their part to protect it. The non-profit Earth Day Network (EDN), founded by the organizers of the first Earth Day in 1970, helps organize events and rallies around the world by providing information and resources and serving as a central clearinghouse for local listings. EDN's international network tops 22,000 organizations in 192 countries, while its U.S. program assists more than 30,000 educators and helps activists coordinate thousands of community development and environmental protection activities throughout the year.

If you're looking to participate in an Earth Day event or rally near you, EDN's "Find an Earth Day Event" database has you covered. Browse by country, state/province and city. And if you can't find something near you, Earth Day Network can provide the resources to start your own. Even if it's last minute, it still counts.

Even if you can't attend an event in person, you can help the cause by "pledging an act of green" - committing to do something on behalf conservation and the environment (even simply reducing home energy consumption) and posting accordingly to the EDN website - or by signing onto one or several of the group's petitions. The Climate Petition tells leaders to phase out fossil fuels, while the "Support Environmental Education" drive calls on Congress to reinstate funding to schools for sustainability topics.

Another way to help spread awareness on April 22 is posting about your commitment to the environment via social media. Tell your Facebook friends or Twitter followers why protecting the planet is so important to you and to all of us. Start a Reddit discussion on green initiatives in your town or neighborhood. Post your favorite nature images to your Pinterest board or Flickr account.

Anyone near Washington DC might want to head for the National Mall on Saturday April 18 for the Global Citizen 2015 Earth Day Rally, a joint project of the Global Poverty Project and Earth Day Network, which will feature live musical performances by My Morning Jacket, Train, Fall Out Boy, Mary J. Blige, Usher and No Doubt, while Don Cheadle, Coldplay's Chris Martin, United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon and World Bank Group President Jim Yong Kim will address the crowd as well. If you can't make it to the Mall in person, Youtube is providing a free livestream of the day's festivities and should run the clips indefinitely.

LEGEND

DRY -- each location is graded on an A - F scale based on bacterial pollution levels present in the surf zone
WET -- grades for days of recorded rainfall and the following 3 days
ns -- no sample taken

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A-F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Heal the Bay is a nonprofit environmental organization making Southern California coastal waters and watersheds, including Santa Monica Bay, safe, healthy and clean. We use science, education, community action and advocacy to pursue our mission.

CRIME WATCH

BY DAILY PRESS STAFF

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON APRIL 4 AT 4:50 A.M.

Officers received a call of a burglary in progress in the 1000 block of 2nd St. Upon arrival, the officers saw the suspect attempting to force his way into one of the apartments. The officers detained the suspect who said he was released early from prison and there to visit a girl. Further investigation revealed nobody in the apartment complex knew who the suspect was. The suspect was arrested for attempted burglary and probation violation. Marc Shakar, 42, of Santa Monica was denied bail.

Sudoku

Fill in the blank cells using numbers 1 to 9. Each number can appear only once in each row, column, and 3x3 block. Use logic and process of elimination to solve the puzzle. The difficulty level ranges from (easiest) to (hardest).

Difficulty Level ★

		8	6	4			7
	5					3		9
6			7		9		4

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) Burger King Japan commenced an April rollout -- limited in duration and only in Japan -- of Burger King-branded cologne (mimicking the Whopper's savory "flame-grilled scent"). Early reviews were favorable, even though the launch date, suspiciously, was April 1. (2) A small Virginia defense contractor won a $7 million job recently to help Pentagon analysts sift through supercomputer research, and according to the industry watchdog Defense One, the firm has decided to stick with its long-ago- selected original name. Even though events have overtaken that name, the company will still be known as Isis Defense.

■ Didn't Go As Planned: (1) Surveillance cameras revealed a man with a gun inside the Circle K in Palm Bay, Florida, on Jan. 31. Since the clerk was in the back, with the cash register locked, the man decided to wait for him -- for 17 seconds, according to the video -- but then, impatient, fled empty-handed. (2) According to a February Ormond Beach, Florida, police report, Matthew Semione, 26, handed a holdup note (implying that he was armed) to a Sun Trust bank teller, who walked away to get money. Semione grew weary of waiting and left empty-handed, but was arrested minutes later.

Find a good excuse to celebrate, Leo

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Your instincts serve you well. Be aware of your limitations in a situation, and don't push boundaries. By the midafternoon, you could become more inquisitive. Allow your imagination to fill any gaps and come up with ideas. Tonight: Have a long-overdue chat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Use the morning to the max. You know what you want, and others will respond once you decide to go for it. A matter surrounding your home life will take a turn, most likely for the better. Open up to possibilities that someone else offers. Tonight: Put your best foot forward.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You could feel a bit off in the morning, but by late afternoon, your energy surges. Keep negativity on the back burner, and you will be able to accomplish a lot more. Pressure could build in a relationship, which will force to head in a new direction. Tonight: Demand the stage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ You might believe that you are on the right path and could become a little careless. You could get tripped up over a detail you have overlooked. Avoid being too exacting in what you do. You might feel as if you are being confronted over nothing. Tonight: Get some extra zzz's.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You might decide to change your focus and head in a new direction. Complete what you have started, and by the end of the day, good news will greet you. Whether you are in a meeting or at a planned get-together, you end up with friends. Tonight: Find a good excuse to celebrate.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Encourage yourself to take in the big picture, especially if you feel triggered. You might want to approach a situation differently. Others look to you for guidance and suggestions. Know the importance of being a role model. Tonight: Pressure builds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Let your sensitive and caring side emerge. You might be more tired than you realize, which will affect your words and actions. Go for a walk and/or recharge your batteries by going to the gym. You will feel much better as a result. Tonight: Detach and relax, then decide.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Step back and acknowledge what is happening around you. Defer to someone else, and make sure that he or she is willing to carry the ball. Clearly, you feel as if you have your hands full. You need to be more dominant in other areas for now. Tonight: Handle money with care.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You might be very put off by someone's words, and your expression will say it all. Be willing to approach a matter differently for your sake, and try to resolve a hassle. Accept the fact that you can't change other people. Tonight: Try not to shut down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might want to have a discussion about what you expect from someone. Otherwise, this person most likely will let you down because of your high expectations, which he or she is unaware of. Use your creativity for solutions. Tonight: Clear out an errand first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ You might be more reluctant than you realize. Deal with a personal matter first. A partner or loved one could be challenging, and it might force you to rethink your stance. Your childlike side emerges when dealing with a heavy matter. Tonight: Act as if it's not Monday night.

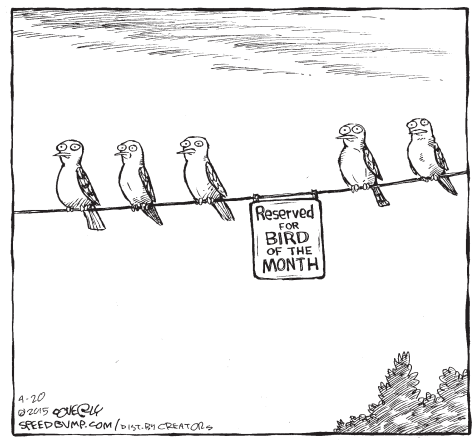

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Express your thoughts with the expectation of being heard. Your attitude most likely will provoke the response you desire. Honor a change, and be willing to move away from a loved one who could be too challenging at the moment. Tonight: Head home. Keep it calm.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you encourage yourself to take risks. Your creativity and ability to understand helps you get past problems far more easily than in the recent past. Others often note this ability and will seek you out to brainstorm with you. You'll discover what a fun and meaningful year this could be. If you are single, someone of interest could enter your life sometime after mid-August. If you are attached, accept your sweetie as he or she is, and things will go smoothly. Make the most of the good moments. GEMINI knows how to encourage you to shop. Be careful!

It's Earth's big day, you dig?

By Katharine Romefelt

It's Kira Pena's earth too.

Happy birthday, Earth! Well, it's hard to pinpoint exactly when our own little rock in the galaxy was born, but Earth Day events worldwide demonstrate support for environmental protection. Wednesday is also a time to reflect on ways to reduce your carbon footprint.

"Besides the drought, California is doing a great job of protecting the environment," said Kira Peña, as she strolled through the Pacific Palisades. "I still think we can find ways to improve, like adding more recycling spots in busy areas."

Whether you're already mindful of protecting your environment or you take hour-long showers without a second thought, think about ways in which you can conserve natural resources and reduce waste; simple changes like donating used clothes, reusing bottles and avoiding excessive water use. It's really not that hard. Unless you're over this whole earth or something.

Same-day appointments now available

When you, or a loved one, need to see your doctor, the last thing you want to do is wait around. At UCLA Health, we want to ensure all of our patients receive the best care in the timeliest manner possible. That's why we now offer same-day appointments in 27 specialties.

Call us before noon and we'll schedule you for that day. Call us in the afternoon and we'll schedule you for the next day. At UCLA, it begins with you. And now it begins today.
