Housing Commission strives to keep options open on affordable housing

ASHLEY ARCHIBALD
Daily Press Staff Writer

DOWNTOWN City Hall is one step closer to opening up new low-income rental units at the Mountain View Mobile Home Park after a unanimous vote by the Housing Commission Thursday recommended to move ahead with a plan to purchase new units at the site.

The decision came over protestations of some residents of the privately-owned Village Trailer Park, for whom the presence of city-owned Mountain View has become a threat because it is one of the potential places they will be relocated should the owners of Village Trailer Park succeed in closing the facility as planned.

Though current residents of Village Trailer Park are shortlisted as potential renters for the new units, the vote was more about preserving an ever-dwindling number of resources to expand the amount of affordable housing in Santa Monica, said Chloe Edwards Bird, vice chair of the Housing Commission.

The City Council set aside over $9 million from its now-defunct Redevelopment Agency in 2010 as part of a three-prong plan to finance sustainable units at Mountain View. Much of that money is wrapped up in a contract with Golden Homes West, the company that builds and installs the units.

If City Hall doesn't move to use it before the contract expires, the cash reverts back to state coffers under the byzantine rules that the Legislature developed when it dissolved redevelopment agencies statewide in February, and Santa Monica loses 44 potential very low- and low-income housing units.

Those are units City Hall can ill-afford to pass up.

A recent report to the City Council on Santa Monica's affordable housing needs indicated that the city will have to create

Surviving 120 days of rest

BY SAMANTHA MASUNAGA
Special to the Daily Press

MID-CITY On a late December day, Jessica Fisher was rushed to the Santa Monica-UCLA Medical Center in a panic.

Her doctor had discovered cervical incompetency during a routine ultrasound, a find that could have endangered the lives of her twins, if left untreated.

She was only 19 weeks pregnant.

Fisher underwent a cerclage procedure to stitch up her prematurely opening cervix and was placed on bed rest for the remainder of her pregnancy.

She delivered two healthy babies, Ella Madison and Ethan Tate, via Caesarian section surgery Saturday.

But it is the 120 days in between that set her story apart.

Over the course of four months, her bland hospital room was transformed into a den for all seasons. In one corner, gold metallic streamers spelled out "Happy New Year's!" while red heart decorations marked Valentine's Day.

Orchids in the windowsills and a large canvas portrait of her wedding day added a home-y taste. A rack of baby clothes — one side pink and the other blue — gave her hope to continue her time in the hospital, Fisher said.

"It was such a shock to the system," she said of the cervical discovery. "Bed rest is really hard to do because it's just very isolating."

The extended stay was made even more difficult because of its clash with her previous lifestyle. Fisher and her husband, Brett, were constantly active and the couple loved to run outdoors or go to see theater plays.

They had even planned a trip to Las Vegas and a Mexican cruise to celebrate Fisher's 30th birthday, which came five days after she was admitted to the hospital. Fisher urged her husband to take his mother on the cruise instead, to prevent the tickets from going to waste.

To deal with the stress of being constantly cooped up inside, her husband suggested she start a blog to chronicle the experience and keep family in the know about her

'Think Like a Man' muscles in at No. 1 with $33M

DAVID GERMAIN
AP Movie Writer

LOS ANGELES The date-night movies "Think Like a Man" and "The Lucky One" finally have knocked "The Hunger Games" off its No. 1 box-office perch.

"Think Like a Man," based on Steve Harvey's dating-advice best-seller, debuted as the top weekend draw with $33 million, according to studio estimates Sunday. That's almost double what studio executives had expected for the Sony Screen Gems ensemble movie, which features Michael Ealy, Taraji P. Henson and Gabrielle Union.

The Warner Bros. drama "The Lucky One," starring Zac Efron in an adaptation of Nicholas Sparks' romance novel, opened at No. 2 with $22.8 million. It also came in a bit above studio expectations going into the weekend.

"Think Like a Man" was produced for about $13 million and took in nearly that much on opening day Friday alone, with business getting even better on Saturday. Sony executives had figured the movie might pull in about $17 million for the whole weekend.

"It was a wild ride. It just got better and better as the night went on Friday. Then to be up so much on Saturday," said Rory Bruer, head of distribution at Sony.

Lionsgate's blockbuster "The Hunger Games" took in $14.5 million, slipping to third-place after four weekends at No. 1. The film raised its domestic total to $356.9 million.

"The Hunger Games" added $13 million overseas, where its total now stands at $215.8 million, for a worldwide haul of $573 million.

Disney's nature documentary "Chimpanzee" opened at No. 4 with $10.2 million.

Despite some healthy newcomers, Hollywood's overall revenues dipped for the second weekend in a row. Domestic receipts totaled $129 million, down 5 percent from the same weekend last year, when "Rio" led with $26.3 million, according to box-office tracker Hollywood.com.

Revenues likely will decline again next weekend, with no huge newcomers expected to come close to the $86.2 million debut of "Fast Five" over that same weekend last year.

But business should shoot back up after that as the superhero ensemble "The Avengers" launches one of Hollywood's biggest summer lineups ever over the first weekend of May.

"'Fast Five' basically performed to summer box-office numbers in pre-summer last year," said Hollywood.com analyst Paul Dergarabedian. "We're not going to have a 'Fast Five' in late April this year, but that's

Popular rail line delays blamed on maintenance

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES Commuters are increasingly left waiting for Blue Line trains, a problem transit officials blame on a backlog of maintenance issues on Los Angeles County's oldest and most-used light-rail system.

In January and February, breakdowns caused Blue Line trips to be late or canceled 858 times — about 14 times a day — compared with 428 times during the first two months of 2011, according to a Los Angeles Times report published Saturday.

The 22-year-old Blue Line, which runs from Long Beach to downtown L.A., has seen at least $239 million in maintenance put off over the last decade — mostly on critical elements such as tracks, signals and passenger cars.

That amount represents only part of $1.3 billion in deferred maintenance required on the entire rail and bus network run by the L.A. County Metropolitan Transportation Authority, the Times said.

Some officials told the newspaper that in its rush to build new rail lines, Metro has not assigned sufficient resources to maintenance of the old ones.

"The Metro Board and staff who were in charge weren't paying close enough attention to the ongoing day-to-day," said board member Richard Katz. "Routine maintenance is not as interesting as a new shiny object, and maintenance gets overlooked."

Metro officials said the agency is trying to address the maintenance problems. By 2020, they plan to put $558 million into improving the system's reliability, including $203 million for new replacement cars.

The agency-wide backlog has yet to cause significant service disruptions across the rest of the transit system, officials said.

The average travel time from Long Beach to L.A. is about 55 minutes. But MTA statistics show that the average daily delay in January was 34 minutes, in February 37 minutes and at the beginning of March 22 minutes. In December 2011 the average delay was 13 minutes.

Officials told the Times that the January and February numbers were aberrations.

The Blue Line carries 26 million riders per year.

Design matters

Editor:

I was very disappointed and sad to see the designs of the proposed Marriott & Hampton Inns recently published in one of the community papers. Shouldn't design be a required "community benefit?" The city deserves and should demand much better. Quality design is not only good for the community, but also for the developer! It can be a win-win, but not so in this case.

City Council, Planning Commission and the Review Board: please wake up or we're going to have our commercial streets lined with three-, four- and five-story block buildings with offsets here and there which are supposed to represent quality design, but in fact are simply block buildings with acne. Rather than simply an elegant glass front door, why not a courtyard that engages the sidewalk and really says "welcome" and invites you in.

Spare Venice?

Editor:

I read with a deep sadness, and then dread, your article on the end of surf camps in Santa Monica. ("City surf camps caught in undertow," April 13)

The sadness was for all the children, of varied ages and backgrounds, who spend a few weeks in the summer (sometimes out in the fog for a week), exercising, running, acquiring social skills, and learning about water safety.

Sadness for the young counselors who may not find another summer job where they learn to be nurturing and to be responsible for something other than their Internet profile.

The dread I felt was that the end of regulated surf camps in Ocean Park will mean another invasion of unregulated beach abuse in North Beach Venice.

When Santa Monica upped the ticketing of dog owners on the beach, Venice got more free-running dogs with arrogant sponsors who leave the dog stuff in the sand.

When Santa Monica acted against vagrants, Venice got them.

When Santa Monica herded out the RVs and large vehicles, Venice got them.

Who is to say the North Beach of Venice won't see an infestation of unregulated surf instruction by those filling the vacuum created by Santa Monica's end of well run surf camps?

Fairmont-Miramar project: Good outweighs the bad

THE REDEVELOPMENT OF THE Fairmont-Miramar hotel is on the agenda for tomorrow's City Council meeting. A "standing room only" crowd generated plenty of heated comment at a Feb. 8 Planning Commission meeting. Expect a repeat of that action.

Fairmont-Miramar owner 1133 Ocean Avenue, LLC (a subsidiary of Michael Dell's business empire) is requesting a development agreement to rebuild most of the hotel.

The 4.5 acre hotel property, bounded by Ocean Avenue, Wilshire Boulevard, California Avenue and Second Street, consists of 262,284 square feet of hotel facilities including the 10-floor Ocean Tower building. Currently, there's 296 guest rooms, cafes, shops, meeting rooms and other public areas plus 160 parking spaces.

The development agreement calls for replacing everything except for the historic six-floor Palisades Building at Second and California and the landmark Moreton Bay fig tree in the center of the property.

The result will be 550,000 square feet of new hotel space with 265 guest rooms, hotel amenities, retail space along Wilshire, 484 underground parking spaces and 120 market rate condominiums. A new, one acre park at the corner of Ocean Avenue and Wilshire will provide a clear view of the Moreton Bay fig tree.

Two proposed towers — one 12 stories and the other 11 stories — have generated the most heated opposition from neighbors, including the owners of the Huntley House hotel directly across Second Street who claim their views will be obstructed.

While view may be a concern, I've heard from multiple sources that Huntley House owners are most unhappy about the 40 units of low-income and workforce housing slated for the parking lot next door that's also part of the development agreement.

While the size of the renovation is an issue for detractors, there's been a 10-floor structure on the property for years. In addition to the 17-story Huntley House, there's a 21-story office tower across Wilshire and a nine-floor office building at Wilshire and Third Street. To me, the additional development is no big deal.

The argument of protected views is specious because many complaining neighbors reside in site-adjacent condo buildings between four- and 14-stories tall that also block views.

Fairmont-Miramar opponents say there will be an increase in traffic and more gridlock on the surrounding streets. This too, is a hollow argument.

What is much more likely to cause congestion and gridlock is Neal Payton's inane proposal to remove traffic lanes and narrow Wilshire Boulevard from Fourth Street to Ocean Avenue for wider sidewalks, greenscapes, bicycle and pedestrian right-of-ways. Payton is a principal in the high-priced, outside design firm that's consulting on the new Downtown Specific Plan — which I'll have a lot more to say about in a future column

Renderings of the new Fairmont-Miramar show a striking facade — a little unusual in Santa Monica, the home of bland, pseudo-industrial architecture.

The other controversial issue is community benefits as if the project itself is not a community benefit. The hotel is already unionized with a current contract so discussion of hotel worker "living" wages is off the table.

However, this is a great opportunity for the City Council to consider real community benefits including traffic and signal upgrades for the surrounding area, sponsorship of cultural and educational programs like AYSO soccer and Little League.

There's scholarships for our public school system or improvements to the Santa Monica Pier. And, how about requiring that retail store and coffee shop prices in the new hotel match the prevailing prices in the Downtown area?

SMC'S FOLLY

The Daily Press reported last week that the community college chancellor's office has been informed by the state Attorney General's office that a two-tiered tuition for Santa Monica College classes is not allowed under the state education code.

I raised the question of legality in last Monday's column after SMC's trustees approved providing a limited number of summer session courses at $180 (instead of the subsidized cost of $46) per unit on March 6.

According to news reports, 17 days later, former Santa Monica City Attorney and SMC Counsel Robert Meyers sent a 57 page brief to the general counsel in the chancellor's office explaining why he and administrators thought the pricier classes were legal. Inexplicably, there's been no "official" response from the state to Myers' argument.

Not knowing definitively the legal status of the higher priced classes before approving them was mistake number one. Number two: because the plan triggered sizable demonstrations and days of campus unrest, it appears that trustees and administrators underestimated opposition to the plan, although I still think the proposal could have helped hundreds of students who were willing to pay extra for the classes they wanted.

The third mistake was failing to deliver persuasive messaging explaining why the plan was a benefit to students of all economic backgrounds. Buckling under to mob rule and pulling the classes was mistake number four. Talk about screw ups!

That's what happens when those in charge — including trustees — are there because they're all Santa Monicans for Renters' Rights cronies. In fact, SMC is famous for mutual political back scratching and being a great resource for politically connected SMRRs looking for work — including Myers who is a SMRR favorite and whose wife is a SMC administrator.

In the meantime, money is wasted and bad decisions are made. Students and community college district taxpayers both lose. It's a major embarrassment on every level.

Work under way on Nevada's first wind energy facility

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS The settlement of a lawsuit filed by environmentalists is allowing turbines to go up at Nevada's first wind energy project.

The 7,500-acre Spring Valley Wind farm in White Pine County, just west of Great Basin National Park, is set to start providing power to northern Nevada this July, the Las Vegas Review-Journal reported ((http://bit.ly/HWvHAg).

San Francisco-based Pattern Energy plans to install 66 turbines to generate 150 megawatts of electricity, enough to supply about 45,000 homes.

NV Energy has agreed to buy power from the wind farm for the next 20 years.

The Western Watersheds Project and the Center for Biological Diversity sued last year in an effort to block the $225 million project, claiming the U.S. Bureau of Land Management skirted environmental regulations to fast-track it.

The National Park Service, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Nevada Department of Wildlife also expressed concerns over the project.

The conservation groups and company entered settlement talks last year after a federal judge refused to stop work at the site to allow more study of how the turbines would affect bats and sage grouse.

Under the settlement approved March 29 in U.S. District Court in Nevada, Pattern agreed to expand its program for tracking bird deaths associated with the project.

The company also will pay for a $50,000 study of nearby Rose Cave, where as many as 3 million Mexican free-tailed bats roost during their fall migration.

Rob Mrowka of the Center for Biological Diversity said conservationists were forced to settle and try to get as much mitigation as possible once the judge denied a motion to halt construction.

He said the site is riddled with problems, including its proximity to Rose Cave and to nesting and brood-raising areas for sage grouse.

The wind farm also abuts a sacred Western Shoshone swamp cedar site where Indians were massacred during the Goshute War of 1863.

"It's just a bad spot," Mrowka said.

Pattern officials defend the site, which has been the subject of wind and weather monitoring since 2005.

"We are starting to see that all renewable energy projects, no matter how well planned, are being questioned," Pattern CEO Mike Garland said in a statement. "The settlement should give more confidence to those concerned parties and the community that the project is well designed."

In 2010, planners said they expected fewer than 203 birds and 193 bats to die from turbine encounters each year.

Each 262-foot tower — roughly the height of a 30-story building — will hold a rotor with three blades the length of a football field.

Biologists say Mexican free-tailed bats roost in Rose Cave, about five miles from the wind farm, for one to three days while on their southern migration to Central America from July through October. At peak times as many as 2,000 bats per minute have been counted leaving the cave.

At first, the wind farm will serve only NV Energy customers in northern Nevada. The power eventually will find its way south to the Las Vegas area with the completion of a transmission line now under construction.

Lawsuit says wind energy industry hurts condors

ASSOCIATED PRESS

VENTURA, Calif. Environmentalists are hoping a court will curb Southern California's growing wind energy industry, which they believe poses a threat to the endangered condor.

The Ventura County Star reports that three environmental groups filed a federal lawsuit this month against the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to stop the proposed 100-turbine North Sky River wind project in Kern County.

The Center for Biological Diversity, Defenders of Wildlife and the Sierra Club say in the filing that a neighboring wind farm, Pine Tree, has killed at least eight golden eagles and that California condors are at risk as well.

Wind-power supporters stress the fact that no condors have been killed, and cite the new jobs, reduced greenhouse gas emissions and clean energy the turbines will bring.

The Q Line

To rent or not to rent?

There's a movement afoot to ease City Hall's restrictions on allowing residences to be rented out as vacation homes. City officials are actively trying to shut the practice down, but plenty of owners would like the chance to make some extra money.

So, this week's Q-Line question asks:
Do you think homeowners should be allowed to rent their properties out or should the practice remain illegal?

Contact qline@smdp.com before Friday at 5 p.m. and we'll print your answers in the weekend edition of the Daily Press. You can also call 310-573-8354.

Think before spraying

Dear EarthTalk:
I've heard that many air fresheners contain toxic chemicals. Are there any green-friendly, non-toxic air fresheners out there, or how can I make my own?

NOT NATURAL: Many air fresheners use harsh chemicals to eliminate or overpower odors or coat your nasal passages to temporarily block your sense of smell. But there are non-toxic alternatives, including make-your-own concoctions, indoor plants and simply opening the windows and letting fresh air in.

It is true that some air fresheners on the market today make use of harsh chemicals to eliminate or overpower odors. "Many air fresheners contain nerve-deadening chemicals that coat your nasal passages and temporarily block your sense of smell," reports National Geographic's The Green Guide. Some of the most offensive ingredients-volatile organic compounds (VOCs), benzene and formaldehyde-can cause headaches and nausea and aggravate asthma, and have been linked to neurological damage and cancer.

Perhaps even more worrisome, though, are dispersants known as phthalates that cause hormonal and reproductive issues, birth defects and developmental disorders. A 2007 review by the non-profit Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) found that 12 out of 14 widely available air fresheners contained phthalates. Some of the air fresheners that tested positive for phthalates were labeled as "all-natural" or "unscented." Two of the worst offenders analyzed by NRDC were sold at Walgreens stores under that company's own generic label. As a result, Walgreens removed the products from its shelves, and the manufacturer which made them reformulated their product line without phthalates.

Given such problems with air fresheners, many of us are looking for non-toxic alternatives. Of course, first and foremost would be opening a window or two, as nothing beats good old fresh air for shooing away offensive odors. But sometimes the weather doesn't cooperate for leaving windows and doors open. The website greenhome.com suggests filling a small spray bottle with a mixture of four teaspoons baking soda and four cups of water and then spraying the solution in a fine mist to neutralizer odors. Similarly, The Green Guide suggests mixing a few drops of an organic essential oil (lemon, orange and lavender are popular choices) with distilled or purified water and spraying with a mister.

Another all-natural way to get rid of nasty smells is by wrapping cloves and cinnamon in cheesecloth and boiling them in water. Yet another consists of leaving herbal bouquets standing in open dishes where the fragrance can dissipate throughout a room. And don't underestimate the air-cleansing power of houseplants, which can improve indoor air quality by filtering toxins out of the air. Mother Nature Network reports that aloe vera plants can filter benzene and formaldehyde out of the air, that spider plants are known for their ability to take xylene and carbon monoxide out of the indoor environment, and that gerber daisies excel at removing the trichloroethylene that may come home with your dry cleaning.

Greenhome.com also sells a variety of non-toxic air fresheners for those less inclined to making their own. EcoDiscoveries AirZyme makes use of natural enzymes to eliminate smoke, pet or other smells with a few sprays. Other options include The Natural's Air Freshener & Deodorizer and Tru Melange's Beeswax and Soy candles.

Romney on spending: Guns triumph over butter

ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON Reducing government deficits Mitt Romney's way would mean less money for health care for the poor and disabled and big cuts to nuts-and-bolts functions such as food inspection, border security and education.

Romney also promises budget increases for the Pentagon, above those sought by some GOP defense hawks, meaning that the rest of the government would have to shrink even more. Nonmilitary programs would incur still larger cuts than those called for in the tightfisted GOP budget that the House passed last month.

Differences over the government's budget and spiraling deficits are among the starkest that separate Republican Romney and Democratic President Barack Obama. Obama's budget generally avoids risk, with minimal cuts to rapidly growing health care programs such as Medicare and Medicaid while socking wealthier people with tax increases. It's all part of an effort to close trillion-dollar-plus deficits.

Romney, by contrast, proposes broad cuts in government spending, possibly overpromising on reductions that even a Congress stuffed with conservatives might find hard to deliver.

His campaign materials give relatively few specifics, other than a pledge to bring total government spending down to 20 percent of the U.S. economy by the end of a first term in 2016. That is roughly in line with where it was during Republican George W. Bush's presidency.

Estimates by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office put current government spending at $3.6 trillion, or about 23.5 percent of the gross domestic product this year, slipping to 21.8 percent by 2016.

The math can get fuzzy. But the Romney campaign says it needs to come up with $500 billion in cuts in 2016, the target year. Overall, Romney promises to shrink the government by about one-seventh when compared against the size of the economy.

The GOP front-runner suggests raising the Social Security retirement age and reducing cost-of-living increases for better-off retirees.

He generally endorses a plan by House Budget Committee Chairman Paul Ryan, R-Wis., to gradually transform Medicare from a program that directly pays hospital and doctor bills into vouchers for subsidizing future beneficiaries in buying health insurance.

Because Romney promises to protect current Social Security and Medicare recipients from cuts, he cannot get much savings from those programs by 2016. Combined, they are projected to make up about 44 percent of the budget that year. Interest costs, which cannot be touched, would make up an additional 9 percent of the budget, while Romney promises to add almost $100 billion to the Pentagon budget that year, based on his pledge that military spending reach 4 percent of GDP.

So what's left to cut?

—MEDICAID: The program now provides health care for about 50 million mostly poor and disabled people, including nursing home care for 7 of 10 patients nationwide. Obama's health care law sharply would sharply boost Medicaid enrollment to cover more people above the poverty line, a move that Romney promises to repeal.

Like House Republicans, Romney promises to transform Medicaid into block grants for states and shed federal supervision of it. He would cap the program's annual growth to inflation plus a percentage point. His campaign says the approach would unshackle states to innovate and, by the end of a decade, cut costs by more than $200 billion a year.

Advocates for the poor say the inevitable result will be that millions of people will be bounced from the program. An Urban Institute study last year estimated that Ryan's cuts would force between 14 million and 27 million people off of Medicaid by 2021. Romney's budget would make deeper cuts.

—DOMESTIC AGENCY BUDGETS: If Social Security is mostly off the table and current Medicare beneficiaries are protected, domestic Cabinet agency budgets would take a major hit in ways that could fundamentally alter government. The future growth of those discretionary programs funded through annual appropriations bills was already cut greatly in last year's deal to raise the government's borrowing limit.

At issue are these programs, just to name a few: health research; NASA; transportation; homeland security; education; food inspection; housing and heating subsidies for the poor; food aid for pregnant women; the FBI; grants to local governments; national parks; and veterans' health care.

Romney promises to immediately cut them by 5 percent. But they would have to be cut more than 20 percent to meet his overall budget goals, assuming veterans' health care is exempted. It's almost unthinkable that lawmakers would go along with cuts of such magnitude for air traffic control and food inspection or to agencies like NASA, the FBI, Border Patrol and the Centers for Disease Control.

"It's just not sustainable," said GOP lobbyist Jim Dyer, a former staff director for the House Appropriations Committee. "What do you want to do with the national parks? Which ones do you want to close? ...The only way it adds up is if you go after the big, popular stuff, and nobody talks about that now."

Among the few specific cuts listed in Romney's campaign literature are proposals to cut the federal workforce by 10 percent through attrition, eliminate federal family planning money, privatize the money-losing Amtrak system and trim foreign aid.

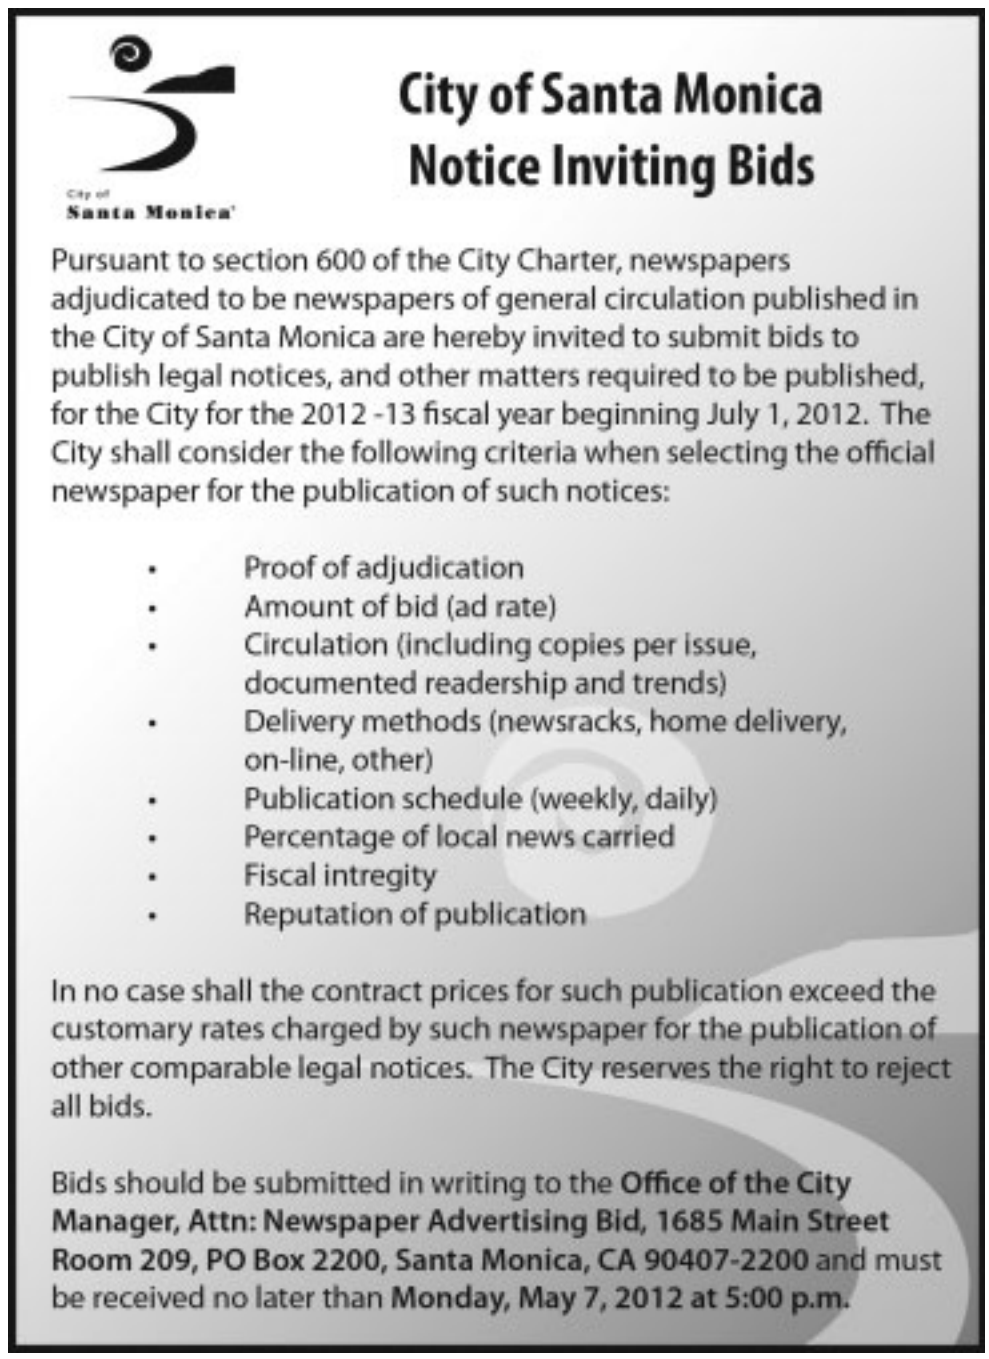

—OTHER BENEFIT PROGRAMS: Like Ryan's budget, the Romney plan would also cut benefit programs other than Social Security and Medicare. They include food stamps, school lunches, crop subsidies, Supplemental Security Income for very poor seniors and disabled people, unemployment insurance, veterans' pensions and refundable tax credits to the working poor.

Based on the Romney materials, it's impossible to project the size of the cuts to such programs. Suffice it to say, they would be controversial.

"There's good reason why Ryan's budget and the Romney budget don't have details," said Jim Horney, a budget analyst with the liberal-leaning Center on Budget and Policy priorities think tank. "If people knew what it would actually have to be done to accomplish what they're saying should be done, it's hard to imagine there would be widespread support for it."

nearly 700 low- and very low-income units by 2021 to keep up with demand in Southern California.

That report is still in draft form, but it gives an idea of the need even as Santa Monica officials struggle to cope with the loss of redevelopment money, which funded 75 percent of affordable housing efforts in the city.

Add to that the fact that there are approximately 3,300 people waiting to snag an affordable housing spot in Santa Monica, and the picture only worsens.

"There are ungodly few options," Bird said.

Possible City Council approval of the new units could not come at a worse time for a group of residents of the Village Trailer Park who have been fighting since 2006 to block a proposed development that would replace the park with a mixed-use condominium project replete with 109 affordable units.

The development agreement for the project will come before the Planning Commission in May, and owners have continued to create plans for the relocation of existing residents.

Though Thursday's vote was not part of the relocation effort that City Hall has helped broker, Mountain View has long been expected to play a role, and the installation of the new, sustainable units is being done with the Village Trailer Park closure in mind.

The City Council requested that spots remain open at Mountain View to make sure those living at the Village Trailer Park have a place to go that would approximate their current living situation if and when the park closes.

While much-needed infrastructure improvements were taking place at Mountain View, officials deliberately allowed spots to open and be kept open throughout the park for that purpose, said Barbara Collins, housing manager with City Hall.

If current tenants from the Village Trailer Park did choose to move to Mountain View, however, they would not be allowed to bring the trailers in which they currently live. That is a problem for many who see those units not just as home, but as investments.

It's part of the complicated situation that comes from the mixed ownership and rental scenario that exists in many trailer parks, something that would be difficult to recreate under the rental or rent-to-own schemes available for the sustainable units built at Mountain View.

The effort may be imperfect, but it's the best City Hall can do now that affordable housing production has become an uphill battle, Bird said.

"This is a rare opportunity to serve the extremely low-income population and it offers aspects of a way of life that aren't available in other kinds of housing situations," Bird said. "We're trying to preserve something. We can't preserve everything about it, but we're really trying to fill a niche. We'll never be able to do that perfectly."

progress.

In line with the couple's love of musical theater, Fisher titled the website Broadway Babies and coordinated each entry with a relevant show tune.

What began as a personal undertaking soon became an Internet hit, garnering page views from 33 countries.

But she didn't stop there. Fisher passed her contact information to hospital nurses in hopes of connecting with other women in her same predicament.

Several women responded and the soon-to-be mothers started a Facebook group to facilitate interaction. Though conversation was initially limited to Facebook chat, the women were able to meet face-to-face on New Year's Eve in a small gathering in Fisher's room. With party hats, Martinelli's apple cider and one hour away from contraction monitors, the group felt more like a sisterhood than isolated individuals, Fisher said.

"It started out of necessity and now everyone just gets a lot of support out of it," she said, adding that plans are in the works to have a play date with all of their babies. "We've formed some really great friendships. It made it really nice to have their camaraderie."

She found other ways to bring normalcy into her extraordinary circumstances.

Fisher attended two separate baby showers, one thrown by close friends and family and another by her co-workers, in the hospital's dining room.

She got the maternity photo shoot she dreamed of, with photos that didn't betray the hospital location.

Most of all, support from friends, family and especially her husband made the stay bearable.

Though the couple lives in Agoura Hills, Brett Fisher commuted to the hospital almost every day and stayed in Fisher's room about three to four times a week. He rented a workspace in Santa Monica and did his consultation work remotely.

Despite the miles between them, husband and wife worked together to furnish the nursery — she picking from color swatches and furniture catalogs and he putting it all together.

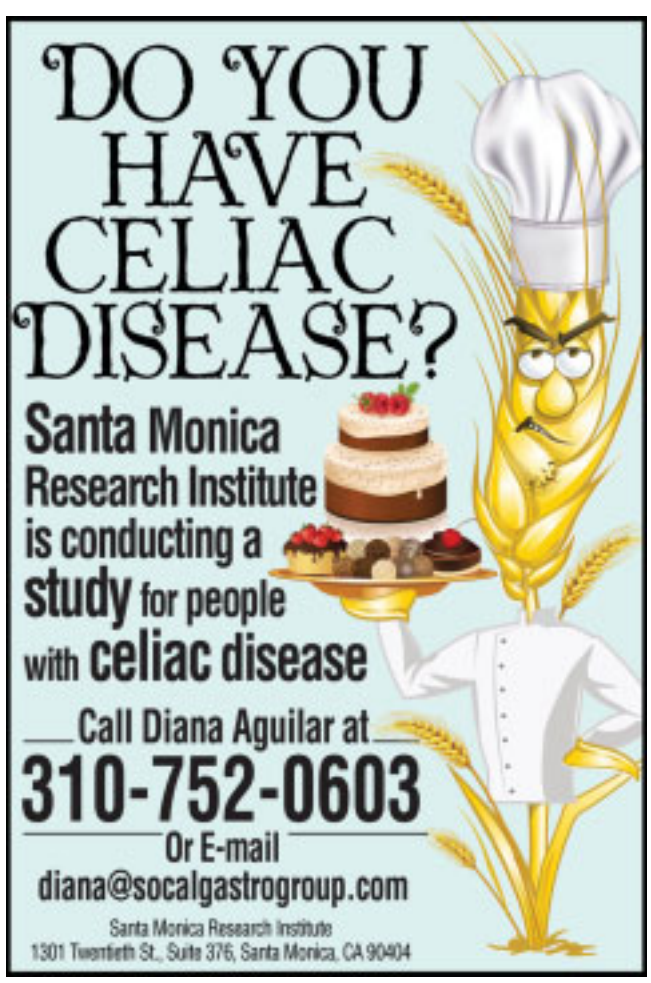

"He's been amazing," Fisher said, with a look at her husband.

"It's short-term," Brett Fisher said, with a smile. "It's been an extraordinary amount of teamwork, but it's great because it's preparing us to be parents — it's made us stronger as a couple."

TABLE TENNIS

Americans Zhang, Wang claim Olympic berths

JOEDY MCCREARY
AP Sports Writer

CARY, N.C. Americans Timothy Wang and Lily Zhang made the final day of the North American table tennis qualifier a good one for their country.

Wang and Zhang claimed the last two singles spots in the Olympics with victories Sunday.

Wang earned the final men's berth in this summer's games by beating countryman Barney Reed in five games in the semifinals of the third men's tournament. Zhang then beat Canada's Anqi Luo in a five-game women's final for a spot in London.

"It feels like I've been waiting for this opportunity for so long. It's been my dream ever since I was a little kid," Zhang said. "And now that it's finally here, I just feel like it's still a dream."

The 15-year-old Zhang joined Ariel Hsing — her teammate and friend from the San Francisco Bay area who earned her spot Friday — as American women qualifying for the Olympics. Zhang said her first competitive match was against Hsing when they were the only two girls entered in the under-10 class of a tournament.

"So I lost to her, but I got second and I got a trophy, which was pretty nice," Zhang said with a laugh.

Zhang, who's from Palo Alto, Calif., and San Jose's Hsing both train at the ICC Table Tennis Club in Milpitas.

"We're a really good team, too, especially since we go to the same club," Zhang said. "The whole U.S. team, we're really good friends, so it's a great friendship thing and we really support each other."

Olympic berths for three men and two women were on the line during three days this weekend at the community center in this Raleigh suburb. The other women's berth had been claimed by Canada's Zhang Mo, who won last year's Pan-American Games.

The third men's spot had to go to an American because each national Olympic committee is limited to two players per gender in singles and the first two qualifiers — Andre Ho and Pierre-Luc Hinse — were Canadians.

Since the other semifinal consisted of two players from Canada, the Wang-Reed semifinal became a play-in match for a spot in London.

"I'm kind of in shock right now, actually," Wang said. "I couldn't believe it. ... This kind of pressure, this kind of environment, I really feel like I stepped up my level and now I feel like I'm playing really well."

A match marked by an impressive volley of high-arcing returns from Reed and hard, high-bouncing smashes from Wang ended when Reed's final return failed to strike the table. Wang celebrated his first career win over Reed by calmly hugging his coaches.

"Today was Tim's day," Reed said.

Wang, the 2010 U.S. national champion, almost didn't make it to this stage of qualifying.

He went 3-0 in his final three matches at the U.S. qualifier two months ago — and received some help from the rest of the field — to wind up on the right side of a tiebreaker and claim one of the four berths for Americans.

Hinse beat Wang Friday in the opening match of the first single-elimination tournament at the North American trials, then topped him again Saturday in the final of the second tournament before the start of the third phase of qualifying — round-robin pool play.

"I just went outside (after the second loss to Hinse), went to the park across the street, and I just took a walk for a little bit," Wang said. "Just tried to recover, and I just started playing really well."

Heal the Bay is a non-profit environmental organization dedicated to making Santa Monica Bay and Southern California coastal waters safe and healthy for people and marine life.

Heal the Bay

Heal the Bay's Beach Report Card™ is based on weekly water quality monitoring data provided by the City of Los Angeles' Environmental Monitoring Division and the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services. Data is analyzed as soon as it is made available to us by the public agencies. Beaches are graded on an A–F scale based on the risk of ocean users becoming ill. Samples are analyzed for bacteria—enterococcus, total and fecal coliforms—that indicate biological pollution. A fact sheet detailing the exact methodology used in determining grades for each location is available from the office or on our web site. The report is not designed to measure the amount of trash or toxins found at local beaches.

The Beach Report Card is an indication of past water quality and is not a warranty of the current safety of those areas surveyed. Our lawyers are happy.

Exercise tonight, Cappy

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Keep conversations moving, and don't get hung up on the details. Your fiery spirit makes a difference and lets others know you are absolutely serious. Honor a sense of frustration by stopping and looking at a situation differently. Tonight: Hang out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Use the early morning as much as you can to accomplish your goals today. Express your determination and emotional commitment. Listen to a loved one who seems to be upset. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ You have gone through many changes. Impulsiveness marks your behavior, and you could spout a statement that you'll later regret. Listen to others' news. Your imagination will funnel into a situation where you have enormous responsibility. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Listen to your instincts with an important colleague. That voice is there for a reason. You often pick up what is not obvious. Take your time when making a decision. You have a lot to mull over in your mind. Think positively. Tonight: Talk is cheap.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Indulge yourself and make the most out of a situation. You will gather the support of others in a meeting when you choose to express your ideas. The well-known Leo charisma comes out no matter what; don't try to soft-pedal this trait. Tonight: Where the action is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ You are full of fun and energy, and want to take the lead. Your need for recognition should not run you to the point of making bad decisions or being rebellious. Your imagination will take you far if you are able to use it in your day-to-day living. Tonight: Others observe.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Seek out experts and their opinions -- only then can you make a good decision. Detach, and pretend you are one of your advisers looking in from an outside perspective. Listen to that voice. Tonight: Where your mind can be entertained yet you can relax.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Togetherness or working as a team will help you achieve success, though perhaps not on a conventional level. You could find a friend unusually irate at what might be going down. Tonight: Do something intense and memorable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You need to understand what is motivating someone's actions. The less you say, the more information he or she will give you. A family member or domestic situation could be close to intolerable. Tonight: Mosey on home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Toss yourself 110 percent into whatever you are doing. You could be delighted with the results. Schedule a long-overdue doctor's or dentist's appointment. Good health will allow you to live much better. Tonight: Squeeze in some exercise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your imagination could take hold of a situation, and you could have difficulty letting go. Relax -- you might be taken aback by what happens. Go with the flow during the next few days. Tonight: Brainstorm with a friend. Look at what comes up.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Tension builds in an unprecedented manner. You could wonder what might be best to do. Center yourself before making any decisions. Let go of judgments about what you should do, then reflect on the situation. Tonight: Opt for dinner at home.

Happy birthday

This year you find that your words can make or break situations. You make it a point to develop better communication skills, which will empower you even more. Combine your intelligence and charisma, and you'll succeed beyond anyone's expectations. Honor your priorities. If you are single, your love life has some intense moments. Take your time, especially if you seek a happy, long-term bond. If you are attached, curb a tendency to make impulsive statements. You will experience fewer misunderstandings. Express your hurt or anger before you erupt like a volcano. GEMINI might seem flaky but has solid reasoning behind their ideas.

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD
BY CHUCK SHEPARD

■ (1) Maureen Reed, 41, was charged with DWI in March in Lockport, N.Y., after arriving at a police station inebriated. She had gotten into an altercation with two others at the Niagara Hotel and left to go press charges. The police station is about 200 feet from the hotel, but Reed unwisely decided to drive her car there instead of walking. (2) Two men were robbed in a motel room in Bradenton, Fla., in February by Cedrick Mitchell, 39, who pulled a handgun on them, but lost it in a struggle when the men started to fight back. One of the men pepper-sprayed Mitchell, sending him fleeing. He returned a few minutes later and begged to buy the gun back for $40, but all he got was another pepper-spraying. Police arrested Mitchell nearby.

■ Fast-Food Culture Shock: Since December, the White Castle restaurant in Lafayette, Ind., has provided diners with a stylish experience that includes table service and a wine selection to go with its iconic "slider" hamburgers. A state wine industry expert told The Wall Street Journal in February, after a tasting, that she would recommend the Merlot, although the Moscato was "fun" and the Chardonnay passable (though all wines come in $4.50, screw-off-top bottles and is served in clear plastic glasses). (As for the sliders, said the wine expert, eyeing the burgers on her plate, "At some point, that was a cow, I guess.")
