Barbecue bon viveur Kevin Bludso set to open outlet in central Santa Monica

Bludo's BBQ

BBQ: The party platter from Bludso's Bar & Que on North La Brea Avenue.

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

Arguably Southern California's most celebrated local pitmaster, Kevin Bludso, is set to once again expand his scope of operations and open an outlet on Santa Monica Blvd. This will mark the first time that the celebrated chef from Compton has opened a new, full-scale restaurant in a decade.

Located at 1329 Santa Monica Blvd, the new branch of Bludo's BBQ will have a minimum of 80 covers and include a full bar. The restaurant will occupy the space formerly held by Truxton's bistro and is next door to the popular Chestnut Club, with parking spaces offered behind the building.

"For us, it was all about finding the right location and making the right choice. And all you need is patience to do that. Sometimes it takes longer than you wish," Bludso says. "But we're glad we found the right space and we're excited to be coming to Santa Monica."

The menu will be very similar to the La Brea restaurant, which opened in 2013, but it will also offer some Santa Monica-exclusive items.

"We've been exploring things like smoked turkey, instead of the heavier options like the brisket, the ribs. We're building the kitchen a little bit differently, so we have the ability to bring in some specials, for example, and then do like a fried fish on Fridays," Bludso says. "We're working with our culinary director to include more unique menu items and that will continue to evolve as we learn more about what the community wants."

The restaurant will also feature some televisions screens to show sporting events, but not an overwhelming number. Bludso stresses that this won't be a "sports bar" in the traditional sense.

"The focus is that this is a neighborhood restaurant and the focus will be the barbecue that will always precede any other type of entertainment that we have in the restaurant," he says.

There's no fixed opening date, but Bludso says it will be sometime in June, but absolutely positively

Senior SETI scientist to give talk at Amateur Astronomy Club

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

The Santa Monica Amateur Astronomy Club will host renowned Dr. Seth Shostak for an in-person talk on Saturday, May 13, 2023. Shostak is a senior astronomer at the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI) Institute, a non-profit research organization established in 1984 that aims to explore and explain the origin and nature of life in the universe.

While part of the Institute's mission is to look into the cosmos to understand how life began here, it could be said that its bigger purpose is to actively search for evidence of life beyond our own planet. And it's not just random radio signals that scientists are looking for.

"One of my favorite ways to look for the aliens, which isn't necessarily looking for signals, because they may or may not be sending signals our way, is to look for artifacts," Shostak says. He's not talking about ancient Stargate-style portals that might be buried under the sands of ancient Giza, he's talking about detectable signs of advanced alien civilizations.

"Well, I don't know about that [finding an ancient Stargate] that sounds extremely unlikely, but I'm talking about things like Dyson Spheres. And artifacts are something that we don't really emphasize enough in the SETI field."

A Dyson Sphere isn't the latest vacuum cleaner or hand dryer, it is a hypothetical concept where a singular, solar system-sized megastructure encompasses a star and captures a large percentage

Council eases requirements to close streets for neighborhood events or block parties

SCOTT SNOWDEN
SMDP Staff Writer

Council pulled out the stops last week to push through an introduction and adoption of an urgent ordinance to allow for "open street" community events as early as this summer.

In the past, requests received from event organizers required Council action via the adoption of a resolution to authorize a road closure, which is allowed under the California Vehicle Code. Staff recommended changes to the Community Events Law to allow "open street" events without requiring a license agreement and Council intervention for each individual event.

The proposed changes would not only allow for more "open street" events to take place in support of the City's economic recovery, but they would also reduce the burden on staff and Council and set in place a policy for when these events can take place.

"This is considered an urgent ordinance to allow for open street events to take place this summer," Jeanette Gant, Community Recreation Manager, said.

As per the Council's definition, a "open street event" is a "community

SMC Creates Opportunities & Helps Create a Sustainable World with New Sustainability Noncredit Certificates

SMC: The school offers free certificates in several sustainability fields.

Reducing climate change to avoid catastrophe for our planet and to save lives is not only key to safeguarding our future—the UN's Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) released a report earlier this year stating the planet faces an increasingly dire situation—but this also opens up possibilities for institutions which care about creating a sustainable future and training up individuals for careers in emerging fields. Santa Monica College is at the forefront of recognizing both the need and opportunity, and has created three noncredit certificates—that can be pursued online by California residents at no cost—to train students for jobs through its Sustainability Systems and Technology program, housed in the college's Earth Sciences department.

The free, noncredit certificates currently offered at SMC are: Sustainability Assistant, instilling the skills to work in outreach and policy; Sustainability in Organics Aide, covering recycling practices to stop food waste; and Sustainability Services Technician, grounding students in the principles of environmental assessments and clean technologies.

"SMC is the only community college offering free sustainability certificates," said Victoria Charles, SMC sustainable technologies instructor, who designed the certificates in collaboration with fellow SMC instructor Jon Huls. Both Charles and Huls bring environmental expertise and entrepreneurial experience to the table; Charles co-founded BlueSphere Partners while Huls started the Sustainable Environmental Management Company, both consulting firms that help public and private organizations reduce their carbon footprints.

When SMC's Noncredit Program—the college has 19-plus short term, career-competency driven noncredit certificates, with more under development—approached Charles and Huls about developing sustainability courses, Charles's response was: "How many?" Upon hearing the response, "As many as you want!" she went "on this rampage" of identifying topics and instructors who could help meet industry needs and prepare students for in-demand jobs. In addition to Charles and Huls, anthropologist Gillian Grebler and water conservation expert Kim O'Cain share their sustainability knowledge with students.

Getting the Word Out

Madison Eichberg pursued both the Sustainability Services Technician and the Sustainability in Organics Aide certificates. "The sustainability certificates I earned have been a wealth of knowledge," she stated. "These courses helped me incorporate zero-waste processes at home, transition to a career in environmentalism and inspire others to pick up sustainable habits . . . this program changed my life."

"California has been very progressive in passing environmental laws over the past several years," Charles noted. The most sweeping of these is Senate Bill 1383, aimed at cutting the landfill disposal of organic waste by 75 percent by 2025. This includes substances such as food scraps, yard trimmings and paper products, which account for half of what ends up in dumps — and which causes 20 percent of the state's methane, a pollutant 84 times more potent than carbon dioxide.

"A lot of people think we don't have to worry because organic materials biodegrade and dissolve," she said. "But that process generates methane."

It also creates opportunity as waste companies strive to fulfill the new mandates. "Waste haulers must now add organics to their other recycling services, so they need to find qualified professionals who can go out to businesses and into communities, raising awareness about the law and showing them how to sort their organics."

Increasing awareness is also important, Charles added, because "in the very near future, businesses will be fined tremendous amounts if they're not separating their organics from other waste."

SUCCESS IN THE CIRCULAR ECONOMY

SMC's sustainability courses are meeting the needs of a new, circular economy that works to eliminate waste and pollution

CRIME WATCH

Crime Watch is culled from reports provided by the Santa Monica Police Department. These are arrests only. All parties are innocent until proven guilty in a court of law.

ON APRIL 15 AT APPROXIMATELY 4 A.M.

53-year-old Jason Steinfled was arrested for burglary. Officers responded to the 1400 block of Ashland Ave for a "Prowler Now" call. The homeowner contacted the Santa Monica Emergency Dispatch Center and reported they heard noises downstairs and discovered someone standing on their front porch and the front entry door to their home wide open. The suspect was on the porch in possession of paperwork and a handbag that had previously been left on the couch inside the home. The homeowner was able to lock the front door before Steinfled could make entry in the home again. Officers located multiple unlocked rear doors to the home. Steinfled was booked for burglary and also possession of methamphetamines. Steinfled was also found to have a "no bail" warrant and remains in police custody.

by reusing products so they are kept in circulation for as long as possible. And an innovative industry is being created in the process, one that needs skilled individuals versed in new technologies and infrastructure.

Each of SMC's sustainability noncredit certificates begins with the same course: Fundamentals in Sustainability, which takes six weeks to complete. The first two weeks focus on the environmental part of sustainability, the next two on the social aspects, and the last two address business and sustainability. Since each certificate requires three courses, sharing the fundamentals class makes it easier for students to earn more than one. But the accelerated nature of the certificates does not mean they are any less rigorous than for-credit courses offered at SMC.

In addition to learning from their instructors, students also gain knowledge from a varied roster of guest lecturers—including experts in food foraging and corporate as well as nonprofit leaders—such as Natalie Flores, an SMC sustainability graduate who used what she learned in SMC's Recycling and Resource Management Program to launch Nourish LA, which has diverted millions of pounds of healthy food from landfills to people in need.

In launching her own business, Flores is one of a number of alums using their SMC-instilled knowledge to address another goal of SB 1383 — helping ease food insecurity by rescuing at least 20 percent of the edible food that currently gets wasted and thrown out.

SUSTAINABLE FUTURES

"SMC is deliberate about welcoming students from diverse backgrounds and professions into the program, and all of them share the goal of helping to create a more sustainable future for our planet," said Ferris Kawar, SMC's sustainability project manager. "And they are poised to take advantage of opportunities in an industry that will continue to grow as more communities everywhere understand the urgency of effective climate policies."

Charles said that sustainability is "ultimately about efficiency." "I like to compare it to computers," she said. "When I was in college, we didn't have them, but now they've infiltrated every part of our lives. Today, if you're in business without a computer system, you're probably going to be obsolete. Sustainability is the same thing. It has to be embedded in every aspect of business and our society. We're not going to be able to thrive without it."

Madison Eichberg concurs: "One of my favorite takeaways from the program was when I learned that every job has an environmental impact. Whether or not you are pursuing a career in sustainability, these courses will teach you how you can make your workplace more socially and environmentally conscious. I was amazed to learn how much of an impact I can make as a single individual."

A Fishy Story: Wild-Caught vs. Farm-Raised Salmon

In March, a study came out that found a correlation between lower levels of dementia and the Mediterranean diet. Time and time again, it seems to come back to the regime featuring foods filled with antioxidants, nutrients and good fats like our healthy omega-3s. These are found primarily in fish, nuts, seeds and olive oil, all of which are heartily featured in the Mediterranean Diet. As a result, we seem to live long, healthy, lean lives full of vitality, good health, good moods and now good memory.

Salmon is famous for its tender, antioxidant-rich flesh that takes on the flavor of whatever it's cooked in. Though some salmon populations have suffered as a result of overfishing, climate change and human influence on their environments, increased demand has driven fish farming or pisciculture, also referred to as aquaculture, into one of the fastest growing areas of animal cultivation to date. In 2020, nearly half of the world's supply of fish, crustaceans and mollusks was farmed rather than caught, a 23 percent increase over two decades.

Like factory farming, it seems a world away. We think about breakfast, lunch or dinner and how tasty our meals will be. We don't think about the way in which meat is raised if we can help it, myself included. If we haven't raised it ourselves, we buy it, cook it and don't even think twice. When it comes to fish farming (and harvested meat in general), what implications do the conditions in which these animals are kept affect the flesh that we eat?

FISH: Salmon can be used in a variety of ways.

SOMETHING'S FISHY.

As an actor in New York, I took most jobs I could get, as long as they were above board. One morning, I sat in the audience of a now forgotten talk show where the twins from "Everybody Loves Raymond" were interviewed. I was paid a whopping $65 and was told when to laugh, clap or cry. During one commercial break, they ran a contest among the audience. As part of the game, a bagged goldfish was tossed into the crowd of waving, grabbing hands and was gifted to one lucky and very unassuming winner as a prize. Although the fish was initially caught, it was tossed from one person to another, no one wanting to assume responsibility for it. Just as the bag with its hostage inside could take no more, it came toward me. I yelled for someone to pass it to me and they did, with relief. It was final. I had unwittingly adopted a goldfish.

I wasn't in the market for a fish. I was 23. My application to adopt a cat had already been denied. The friend that my roommate and I had listed on the form didn't know she was a reference. "A cat? Kat and Taz?" She hooted and hollered and may have hung up on the inquiring party. No cat for us. But now I had a fish! I named him Ferdinand.

On the way home from the West Side studios, my friend and I stopped at a pet store. We got Ferdinand a large fish tank so he'd have room to roam. He needed a filtration system with charcoal, rocks and a sunken pirate ship. He needed food, of course, and I figured he needed a friend or two to keep him company. I spent much more than I had made that morning and two hours later, I was back in my fifth-floor walk-up, erecting my tank and settling my fish into their new home.

What a disaster. Ferdinand ate all of his friends and over time turned upside down because of some virus or bacterial condition. He wasn't dead....he was just upside down. I gave him antibiotics. I gave him fancy food. I stopped buying him friends and gave him another course of antibiotics. Finally, I was over it. I needed to re-home him. I approached my new found friend at the pet store, who loved fish, and asked him to take Ferdinand off my hands. He said he would, but because of store policy, I had to pay for him.... (what?)...so I handed him ANOTHER $15, bid farewell to Ferdinand and was on my way to adopt a cat. The whole time I was a fish mom, I was astounded at how dirty the tank got and how often I had to clean it. With one tiny fish! Now just imagine the over-packed fisheries.

FACTORY FISH FARMS.

It's impossible not to run into farmed fish. Stores, fish markets or restaurants – farmed fish make up most of our choices. But just how healthy are these options?

LITTLE FATTY.

Farmed salmon are much fattier than wild caught salmon simply because they of its solar power output. The idea was explored 1960 by the physicist Freeman Dyson and it's an attempt to theorize how an advanced civilization would meet its energy requirements once those requirements exceed what can be generated from the planet's resources alone. Since only the smallest fraction of a star's energy emissions reaches the surface of any orbiting planet, with the rest disappearing off into space, a structure that completely surrounds a star would enable a civilization to collect massive amounts of energy.

"It's something that a society that might be a million years more advanced than ours might do, they might try to rearrange their local corner of the universe and we might be able to see that," Shostak says.

To put all of this into some sort of context, anatomically modern humans emerged around 300,000 years ago and the Earth has been around for 4.5 billion years, that's 15,000 times longer. However, the universe has been in existence for 13.7 billion years, three times as long as the Earth and 46,000 times longer than humans. Add the fact that there are 100 billion stars in our galaxy alone — each with the potential to have orbiting planets — and it is thought that the universe contains two trillion galaxies, it's entirely possible that an alien race far more advanced than ours has evolved. Somewhere.

"Planets are not in short supply, but we haven't found any conclusive proof that there's intelligent life out there. We haven't found any clear evidence that there's somebody there. And we don't even know whether life is a commonplace or not. We think it is, but we haven't even found evidence on Mars yet," Shostak says.

"So these are all active areas of research and, you know, it could happen tomorrow that we find some sort of remnant of biology on one of the nearby planets or moons of our solar system. And that would be very important, because that will tell us that indeed, what's happened on Earth has happened to other planets."

"It's a curiosity to know that there's somebody out there and I think that's worth all the research and experimentation right there, just to know that you're not the only kid on the block," says Shostak.

Founded in 1981, the Santa Monica Amateur Astronomy Club (SMAAC) is open to absolutely everyone. The club holds monthly talks on a variety of topics usually on the second Friday of every month at the Wildwood School, 11811 Olympic Blvd. To attend the meeting via Zoom, or for any other inquiries, send an email to samoastronomy@gmail.com.

"We've had an embarrassment of riches, 30 years of luminary speakers from JPL, NASA and the Carnegie Observatories, but Dr. Shostak is a special thrill for us," says Adam Wolman, SMAAC Communications. "Not only is he a brilliant scientist, but he's done so much to popularize the serious work behind the search for extraterrestrial intelligence."

Shostak has been the senior astronomer at the SETI Institute since 2001 and he was the chair of the International Academy of Astronautics SETI Permanent Committee from 2003-2012. Frequently interviewed for radio and TV, Shostak has been on Discovery Channel, History Channel, the BBC, Good Morning America, NPR, CNN and National Geographic. He is also the host of a one-hour weekly radio program on astrobiology entitled Big Picture Science. In 2015, he won the Carl Sagan Prize for Science Popularization.

Born and raised in south Los Angeles, Bludso opened his first restaurant in 2008 as a small, walk-up eatery. Refining his own techniques and flavors, which originated from years of cooking with his Texan family, he quickly became a hit and a critical success, ultimately opening Bludso's Bar & Que on North La Brea Avenue.

Since then, he has opened a small outlet at the Proud Bird Food Bazaar near LAX, a concession stand at BMO Stadium, home to Los Angeles FC and even a standalone restaurant San Antone by Bludso's BBQ in the Crown Casino on the Southbank in Melbourne, Australia.

His successes haven't stopped there. Bludso has also appeared as a judge on the Netflix competition cooking series American Barbecue Showdown and his first book, The Bludso Family Cookbook: BBQ Soul Food and Family, From Compton to Corsicana, has been nominated for a James Beard Award.

event" requiring the closure of the street, or a portion thereof, to vehicular traffic, and the use of the closed street for the event, including, but not limited to, celebrations, street fairs, charitable events, ceremonies and events where a group of persons convene to promote walking, biking, or rolling and other similar events, but excluding parades, athletic events and block parties.

A "block party" means a festive gathering primarily intended for the residents and businesses located on a street and their invitees, on a street classified as a "neighborhood street", "avenue industrial," or "shared street" in the City's Land Use and Circulation Element, which requires the closure of a street, or a portion thereof, to vehicular traffic and the use of the street for the festivity.

Staff proposed the reduction of the number of signatures required to approve a block party from the current 67 percent requirement to 51 percent. This change will make it easier for residents in multi-family neighborhoods to hold block parties, increasing community connectedness and wellbeing. Further, the street typologies eligible for block parties are proposed to be expanded from "neighborhood streets" exclusively to also include the "shared street" and "avenue: industrial" typologies.

The amount of open street events allowed per year shall be determined annually by the City Manager. For the remainder of calendar year 2023 and all of calendar year 2024, staff are recommending no more than four open streets be allowed to occur. To hold an open street event, among other applications, the event organizer must provide proof that they own, lease or rent property within the proposed closure area, or provide a signed letter of co-sponsorship from someone who meets that criteria.

Additionally, they must provide a petition indicating the occupants of a least 51 percent of the residents and businesses within the closure area have no objection to and support the closure — or they must produce a letter of support for the event by the Business Improvement District or neighborhood organization in that area. If the latter is chosen, then all notifications to residents and businesses regarding the closure must be completed a minimum of 14 days in advance whereas if they chose the 15 percent option, only 10 days advance notice is required.

With regards to block parties, City recommended where the majority of the parcels in the area of the requested closure are zoned R-1 single unit residential, the applicant must include a petition in favor of the event signed by 51 percent of residents and/or businesses on the street to be closed.

Where the majority of the parcels in the area of the requested closure are zoned other than R-1 single unit residential, the applicant must include a petition in favor of the event signed by 25 percent of the residents and/or businesses on the street to be closed and must provide at least five days advance notice of the closure to all residents and businesses located on the street to be closed.

Only a street classified by the City in its Land Use and Circulation Element as a "neighborhood street," "shared street," or "avenue: industrial" may be utilized for a block party and a Community Event Permit is not required.

Since the motion was considered "urgent," a minimum of five votes was required and it was passed by a vote of five to one, with Councilmember Brock voting "no" and Mayor Pro Tempore Lana Negrete being absent. Brocks opposed the measure citing a belief that all block party applications, regardless of zoning, should require 51 percent of the neighborhood to support the idea.

don't have much room to move around in. They don't migrate, they don't swim up-stream to spawn and eventually die. This higher level of fat may sound like a good thing since we seek salmon out for their omega-3 content, but not all salmon is created equal. Farm-raised salmon has 15g of fat per portion whereas wild caught only has five grams. Their omega-3 and six ratio differ from salmon in the wild as well.

FISH FOOD.

Farmed salmon are just like Ferdinand. They are fed grain pellets derived from things like corn, wheat and soy, none of which are natural foods for fish. They aren't treated to delicacies like krill and shrimp like they would be in the wild, so do not have that pink hue wild salmon do. Instead, they're supplemented with a compound called astaxanthin (found naturally in shrimp and krill) or fed dye pellets. Without these color treatments, the fish in these farms would be an unrecognizable shade of grey. Yuk.

FISH MEDS.

Unfortunately, when a vast number of animals are incarcerated in any pen, be it in water or on land, they breed disease and have pest issues. For that reason, farmed fish are often treated with pesticides and antibiotics. This could potentially increase not only our exposure to pesticides, but our resistance to antibiotics as well.

PLASTICS.

Plastic is everywhere. You'll find it in both wild and farmed fish, though it's in higher levels in the latter.

When in doubt, buy wild caught. Salmon can be very expensive, but wild canned salmon is a great option. Sockeye salmon is not farmed, so it's a safe option as well, even if it's not labeled 'wild-caught'. This salmon burger recipe conveniently uses wild-caught canned salmon!

INGREDIENTS

(Recipe courtesy of Dr. Drew Ramsey)

2 large eggs

3 (5-ounce) cans wild salmon, drained

1/2 cup finely ground almond meal

1 organic lemon, zested and juiced

1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh dill

2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh chives

Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper

1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

1/3 cup plain whole-fat Greek yogurt

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided

Whisk the eggs in a large bowl. Add the salmon and use a fork to smash it until no large chunks remain.

Add the almond meal, lemon zest, 1/4 cup of the dill, the chives, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, and the garlic powder and mix to combine.

Form four 1/2-inch-thick patties. Refrigerate if not cooking right away.

In a separate bowl, combine the yogurt, lemon juice, remaining 2 tablespoons dill, 1 tablespoon olive oil, 1/4 teaspoon salt, and a pinch of pepper.

Warm the remaining tablespoon of oil in a medium skillet over medium-high heat.

Fry patties until golden brown all over, about 4 minutes per side.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 1)

Since you'll live in the world you know is possible, new lifestyles involve expanding the known possibilities. The year unleashes your wild creativity, and you'll jump from an old paradigm to a new one inspired by your imagination. More highlights include heaps of love, the admiration of children or students and three significant financial bonuses. Libra and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 7, 3, 9 and 15.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Ideally, you live in a way to offer continual evidence that the world is better because you're in it. If you aren't improving things, you'll be learning ways or watching for the opportunity to do so.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). While you wouldn't dream of giving up on what you really want, you also realize that humans do not always want what is in their best interest. You are wise to keep an open mind in determining which pursuits are worthy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Since you never know what another person has experienced or is dealing with right now, you err on the side of tenderness. With a kind word, dark moments can be stirred in such a way to bring in the light.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). How can you tell you're choosing the right thing to work on? If it has the potential for significant and meaningful impact, it's worth doing. Is it also easy? Do it right away. Is it difficult? Do it little by little.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When you believe in something, your conviction is often enough to pull you forward. But if something shakes the belief, momentum dies. This is part of the reason you are so driven to know the truth, which is, by definition, unchanging.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You run toward the challenge because you know that no matter how far into the endeavor you get, it's better to have the experience than not. Setbacks are inevitable, but you have the strength and resilience to keep going.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Keep at it. Tenacity will bring the result. That said, the art is in making it look easy. Today's aim will be best accomplished without sweat. If people think you're trying too hard, you'll be less influential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You've a gift for knowing when to blend in and how to assert yourself when it's your turn. Your work weaves in with that of others and patterns emerge. It will seem you were always headed toward unmistakable beauty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're in a mood to skip the plan and get right into action, but run this through your head a few times before you launch. It will keep you from forgetting anything essential to your success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). In the movies, big changes happen in an instant. Reality more often involves small changes that, over time, create a new circumstance. You continue with little acts of grace and watch a better world slowly take shape.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Reciprocal relationships thrive. Even so, the currency reciprocated may not be the same for each person. For instance, Person A may give undivided attention to Person B, who offers in return the sense of purpose that comes from being needed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You won't have to worry about networking or outreach because doing what you love will draw the like-minded to you. Your enthusiasm has magnetism. Revel in what you find exciting about the endeavor and share your enjoyment.

SURF REPORT

WATER TEMP: 58.3

MONDAY FAIR	SURF: 2-3ft+ Thigh to stomach	Smaller SSW swell leftovers on tap with the potential for a bit of shorter-period NW energy to pick up. Keeping an eye on winds, could see elevated SE flow that would make for junky surf at the points in the morning.
TUESDAY POOR TO FAIR	SURF: 2-3ft Thigh to waist	If the wind cooperates you may need to break out the small wave gear. Mix of shorter-period NW energy and SSW swell leftovers on tap but elevated S/SE wind could play spoiler and create bumpy conditions.

WEATHER

Monday: Patchy fog before 11am. Otherwise, partly sunny, with a high near 63.
Monday Night: Mostly cloudy, with a low around 53.
Tuesday: A slight chance of rain. Partly sunny, with a high near 60.
Tuesday Night: A slight chance of rain. Mostly cloudy, with a low around 52.
