Local AP scholar honored

Stanford-bound Samohi senior earned perfect score on Spanish exam

BY JEFFREY I. GOODMAN
Daily Press Staff Writer

It's not easy to be admitted into Stanford University, which this year accepted just 4.7 percent of applicants. It's even less likely to earn a perfect score on an Advanced Placement exam.

Carlos Bustos accomplished both feats.

The standout Santa Monica High School student was recognized by the local Board of Education during a meeting earlier this month, and the improbability of his achievements were not lost on district officials as they congratulated him.

"I don't know if you call that 'rare' — I don't know what the word is to describe it," said Ellen Edeburn, the district's director of secondary curriculum.

"Rare" would probably suffice. Bustos was one of just 55 students in the world to earn every point possible on the AP Spanish language exam this year, Edeburn said.

Of the roughly 4.5 million AP exams taken by U.S. public high school students last year, only 322 warranted perfect scores. (That's about 0.007 percent, in case you're wondering.)

Bustos, a product of the district's language immersion program, thanked the teachers and people along the way who have provided him with a good upbringing and a well-rounded education.

"It's not easy to get where I am without the love and support I've had," said Bustos, who will start at Stanford this fall. "I'm going to cry. ... To be in the immersion program for the past 12 years, it's been such an honor."

Bustos' accomplishment comes as SMMUSD considers ways to to improve its language immersion offerings. The district recently proposed creating a new language coordinator position.

Parents and other stakeholders have praised the dual-immersion pathway at Edison Language Academy but lamented the drop-off in programming at John Adams Middle School and Santa Monica High School.

"We haven't been able to give it the attention it deserves," Terry Deloria, the district's assistant superintendent for educational services, said last month. "Once you get to JAMS and Samohi, there isn't the same level of support and visibility."

Bustos, then, was seen as an example of success.

"This is a proud day not

St. Matthew's

St. Matthew's Music Guild Presents Music for the Great Outdoors

Music at St. Matthew's continues its 31st season of concerts in Pacific Palisades with a concert featuring the critically acclaimed Chamber Orchestra at St. Matthew's Friday, May 6, at 8 p.m.

"Music for the Great Outdoors" brings together works with associations of outdoor life or specific places. Included on the program will be Brahms's Serenade No. 1 in D major for small orchestra and Elgar's youthful String Serenade in C. The concert will also include two world premieres: John O'Reilly's "Chautauqua West" and Matthew Brown's "Afterimage," commissioned by St. Matthew's Music Guild with support from the Los Angeles County Arts Commission.

Brahms wrote the first Serenade in 1858 when he was completing work on his First Piano Concerto. The piece was originally scored for a wind and string octet and later reworked for small orchestras. It builds on the tradition of the many serenades by Mozart and Beethoven, intended for outdoor performance, and featuring a succession of larger and smaller movements, including several minuets, rondos and scherzi.

Elgar's Serenade for Strings was composed in 1892 and given its premiere by the Worcester Ladies' Orchestral Class, with Elgar conducting. The slow movement has been compared to the famous "Nimrod" from the "Enigma Variations."

Matthew Brown was born in Southern California and studied at USC with Donald Crockett, Morten Lauridsen and Randy Newman. He received the Salter Endowed Music Award in 2003 and has won numerous other prizes for his innovative musical style. His music has been performed by the LA Master Chorale, LA Chamber Singers, Gay Men's Chorus of Los Angeles and Antioch Chamber Ensemble. "Afterimage" was commissioned by the Music Guildin 2015 and is the latest in a series of works that explore the intersection between Western classical music and non-Western musical styles.

John O'Reilly is one of America's most published composers. He is a resident of Pacific Palisades and grew up in upstate New York where he attended the Crane School of Music at SUNY Potsdam. He is co-author of "Accent on Achievement," "Strictly Strings," and other instructional series designed for middle school and high school music education. His works have been performed by hundreds of ensembles throughout the world. John and his wife, Judy, maintain a vacation home in upstate New York and for many years have been interested in Chautauqua, an adult education movement that was prominent in the U.S. during the late 19th and early 20th century. "Chautauqua West" is a three-movement work scored for 15 winds and 2 percussionists. It traces the Chautauqua movement from its New York roots to its 1922 western expansion that ended in the Pacific Palisades.

All concerts in the Music Guild's series take place on Fridays at 8 p.m., in St. Matthew's Church, 1031 Bienveneda Ave., Pacific Palisades. Admission is $35. For more information, visit the Music Guild website: MusicGuildOnline.org or call (310) 573-7421.

Southland to celebrate second annual Bird LA Day May 7

On May 7, locals will celebrate the birds of Southern California and LA's Biodiversity at the second annual Bird LA Day, a series of decentralized bird- and nature-themed events throughout the greater Los Angeles area. Bird LA Day shines the spotlight on nature, and reminds the world that Los Angeles is a lot more than just film, fashion and celebrities.

"It's easy to forget that Los Angeles has deserts, mountains, beaches, rolling hills - an amazing diversity of habitats. And all this creates one of the most fascinating collections of birds you'll ever see," said Brigid McCormack, executive director of Audubon California. "Bird LA Day opens people's eyes to the natural world around them."

From Debs Park in downtown LA to The G2 Gallery in Venice; from the Natural History Museum to the Aquarium of the Pacific in Long Beach and many other locations - there will be more than 50 events for every level of birder, from the uninitiated to the expert.

"We've designed the day so that there's something for everyone - from bird walks and talks to photography classes and bird bars with bird-themed drinks," said Susan Gottlieb, Audubon California Board Member and one of the key organizers. "The good news is that nearly all the activities are free."

Highlights include birding tours through the gardens of the Museum of Natural History of Los Angeles County, explorations of the Ballona Wetlands, excursions in the Santa Monica Mountains, yoga classes to bird sounds at the G2 Gallery in Venice, urban birding in South Los Angeles, and getting to know the volunteers at International Bird Rescue in San Pedro. For a complete listing of events, visit: birdladay.org.

Historically, more than 500 different bird species have been spotted in Los Angeles County, which is more than half of all the species ever spotted in the United States. While that's a lot of birds, Los Angeles County also boasts an even larger number of birders - the county's Audubon membership is the highest in the state. Los Angeles County also recently led all U.S. counties in the number of checklists submitted to the Great Backyard Bird Count, a national event that encourages people to report the birds they have seen during the period of Feb. 14-17.

Angelenos are encouraged to share their sightings and photos on the Bird LA Facebook page, or on Twitter using the hashtag: #BirdLADay.

Derby Days supporting the Santa Monica community

THE REASON SANTA MONICA LIONS do what we do is because we want to support the Santa Monica/Westside community. This can be through service projects including tree planting (which we did this past week with the other Santa Monica service groups at Crescent Bay Park), providing eye screenings, stuffing diaper bags, or helping to deliver meals, to mention a few. We also hold fundraising events that allow us to provide financial assistance to local nonprofits.

On Saturday, May 7, we will be holding our first Kentucky Derby Day at St. Monica's Grand Pavilion from 1 - 5 p.m. Money raised from this event will help to fund projects at the SM Boys & Girls Club, the Westside Family Health Center, SM YMCA, No Limits Theatre for the Deaf, OPCC, Center for the Partially Sighted, SM High School Scholarships and Camp Teresita Pines, among others.

We hope you will join us in supporting these worthy organizations by attending this fun event that will include classic Kentucky Derby mint juleps, wine and southern-style hors d'oeuvres. For fun we have video-taped horseracing with a live-feed from the Kentucky Derby for your betting pleasure - your $75 registration even includes a $100 players club card to get you started. Final prizes will be awarded to the top three people that are the most successful with their horse selections.

Like to shop? Fear not, we have lots of themed baskets for you to bid on during the event. There is a wide variety such as a yoga basket, cigar connoisseurs basket or a special Namibia basket, just to mention a few. Want to show your creative side? We even have a Kentucky Derby hat contest with prizes for the most stylish or the craziest.

Please consider joining us to help support local nonprofits and vision services by having a fun afternoon "at the races." You can register online at http://bit.ly/derbyday16.

For more information about the event or to learn more about becoming a Lion, please contact Susan at (310) 442-9513 or santamonicalion@gmail.com.

An extreme misrepresentation

Editor:

By misrepresenting City Manager Rick Cole's comments on placemaking to be supportive of an initiative being circulated for signatures, Phil Brock and Ron Goldman ("City of LUVE," 4/30) do Mr. Cole, our community, and their own credibility a disservice.

City Managers don't endorse (or oppose) political measures. Mr. Cole's comments were made before the LUVE initiative was written.

The truth is that LUVE is an extreme no-growth proposal, one which would inhibit successful placemaking. By strongly discouraging anything over two stories tall anywhere in our city, LUVE would deprive us of needed housing, decrease affordability, and ultimately threaten current Santa Monica renters as price competition for existing apartments increased due to housing scarcity, leading to even worse tenant harassment.

Many people are rightfully concerned over traffic. I get that. So am I.

Over the 40 years that I've lived in Santa Monica, I have supported every slow-growth measure until this one. LUVE is just too extreme. And trying to twist Mr. Cole's placemaking comments to support LUVE is extreme misrepresentation.

Netflix documentaries

Dear EarthTalk:

I'm tired of binge-watching dramas on Netflix. What are some of the best environmental documentaries that have come out recently?

Scott Andersen
Joplin, MO

WHILE POTENT IN ITS DAY AS THE FILM that put climate change on the public radar, An Inconvenient Truth, now a decade old, is hardly the last word in green documentaries anymore. Perhaps that honor will go to Disobedience, a 35-minute paean to how grassroots activism can be the lever that finally topples the dominance of fossil fuels. The film's producers hope to spark new interest in fighting global warming.

Released on April 30 via hundreds of self-organized watch-parties and dozens of independent cinemas-while hundreds of thousands more viewers stream it for free online-Disobedience includes interviews with some of the most renowned voices in the global discourse around social movements and climate change. Conversations with environmental luminaries including author/activist Bill McKibben and filmmaker and globalization critic Naomi Klein are interwoven with riveting verité footage of everyday people organizing and fighting for a livable climate.

Another new climate-oriented doc is The Cross of the Moment, which producers describe as "a deep-green, deep-time discussion of the environmental crisis...that attempts to connect the dots between Fermi's Paradox, climate change, capitalism and collapse." The 80-minute film, available for free streaming on Vimeo, features interviews with top scientists and public intellectuals woven together into a narrative that critics praise as "challenging, exhausting and unflinching." A host of experts such as doomsday climatologist Guy McPherson and Beat poet and bioregionalism guru Gary Snyder discuss humanity's prospects for surviving catastrophic climate change.

Another solid choice is last year's Revolution, an epic adventure into the evolution of life on Earth and the revolution to save it. Director Rob Stewart, best known for his award-winning 2008 doc Sharkwater, spent four years and travelled to 15 different countries to produce Revolution, which brings viewers face-to-face with sharks, lemurs, seahorses and cuttlefish among other amazing creatures. Through it all, Stewart stays positive and showcases activists and individuals around the world who are winning the battle to save the ecosystems we all depend on for survival.

Still others include: Fossil Free, which chronicles the mission of impassioned climate activists around the world; Our Rising Oceans, where scientists in Antarctica show us how climate change is already spawning dire consequences; Fractured Earth, in which everyday Pennsylvanians take on Big Oil in trying to keep fracking off their land; and Oil and Water, an examination of the uneasy alliance between the fishing and oil and gas industries in coastal Louisiana.

Meanwhile, a new breed of YouTube-savvy filmmakers is calling into question whether long-form documentaries are still relevant, given viewers' shorter attention spans and ability to click away in a flash to something more engaging. To wit, activist, artist and filmmaker Jordan Brown (AKA Jore) has released a series of short films on YouTube that focus on the interface between the dominant culture and the real impact on people, society and the environment. His 11-minute piece, Forget Shorter Showers, for instance, lays out the case for why people need to do much more than just take individual actions if they want to save themselves and the planet. Jore argues that only through organizing and working together can we directly challenge the industrial systems leading us down the path to planetary destruction.

According to a report by the city's Risk Management staff, the number of new claims increased by 7.2 percent in the first half of fiscal year 2015-16. Claims by BBB and Fire Department employees were responsible for this year's increase. Severity of those claims, defined by the amount of time lost to each claim, also increased by 15 percent. Of new claims filed in the first half of the year, 57 percent resulted in workers taking time off due to injury.

The cost of all workers' compensation claims still open since 1979 increased from $23.6 million in 2014 to $27.3 million as of December 31, 2015. The report said the vast majority of the overall growth occurred in BBB and Police Department claims.

"After showing some signs of stabilizing, the City's workers' compensation costs are again on the rise. The City has positioned itself to weather the impact of this on a short-term basis through a combination of increasing departmental contributions to the Workers' Compensation Self-Insurance Fund by 30% ($3 million) in FY 2015-16 and maintaining this contribution level into FY 2016-17, and making a one-time $5 million contribution to the Fund in FY 2014-15," said Risk Manager Deb Hossli in a written report.

"If the growth in claims costs continues at the current pace, however, the City should prepare for significant hikes (i.e., well beyond the 5% contemplated in the Financial Forecast) in contributions to the Self-Insurance Fund come FY 2017-18 and going forward."

The City is responsible for covering medical treatment and providing payments to offset lost wages as a result of an injury. For the first half of the 2015-16 fiscal year, Santa Monica spent about $4.7 million in total. Of that, $2 million was spent on medical costs. About $1.2 million went towards lost wages related to temporary disability and $1.5 million to cover permanent disability associated with the residual impact of an injury.

The Risk Manager can settle all claims of less than $15,000 but the City Manger must approve larger settlements. For the reporting period, 58 claims were settled, 18 with one-time payouts totaling $762,500 and 40 were Stipulation Agreements totaling $1,044,851. A total of 50 settlements were executed in the same time last year.

The report said a working group is currently evaluating future cost saving options. However, immediate efforts include greater control over management of worker medical care. To minimize time lost to injuries, staff schedules medical appointments whenever possible and reschedules employee-made appointments if doing so minimizes lost time. Staff also obtains status reports immediately after a visit and promptly reschedules missed appointments.

"This helps to speed medical care and reduce the length of injury duration. Risk Management staff are also focusing on more one-on-one interactions with injured employees, contacting them at least every 45 days to discuss their care and offer support to get them back to work," said the report. "This is considered an industry best practice."

The report concludes that despite the best efforts of staff, compensation costs continue to grow. While there is hope that the new committee will generate new ideas, no immediate solutions are available.

"Rather, the City needs to continue to vigilantly extract every efficiency and/or dollar savings from existing cost control measures and be open to trying unconventional methods that could take years to yield results," said the report. "Consequently, it would be wise for the City to prepare for continued higher workers' compensation well into the future."

the driving lifestyle, and this past month he did the Southern California unthinkable.

He sold his car.

With the light-rail system's anticipated extension to Santa Monica opening May 20, Stutes is eager to incorporate Metro into his routine for getting around Los Angeles.

"It's been a gradual transition away from the automobile," he said. "I'm excited to rely on Expo, Breeze Bike Share, Big Blue Bus, Lyft, Zipcar and even Metrolink and Amtrak as a I step away from the idea of having to own my own automobile. I'm also stepping away from the stress of sitting behind the driving wheel in traffic."

Stutes has a deep interest in the success of the new train. He's the chairman of railLA, a nonprofit advocacy coalition whose board also includes current Santa Monica City Councilmember Pam O'Connor. The group supports rail projects in the region.

But he's not alone in his endorsement of the Expo Line, whose expansion to Santa Monica will bring track-based transit back to the Westside for the first time in decades. The 6.6-mile, $1.5-billion extension from Culver City features seven stops, including three in Santa Monica, and will facilitate trips to Downtown Los Angeles in about 45 minutes.

Danielle Shenise, a locally based photographer, said she's looking forward to using the expanded light-rail operation. She and other proponents have touted the environmental benefits of public transit.

"We've become way too dependent on our cars," she said.

Local resident Tim Harter, a senior field representative for Assemblyman Richard Bloom (D-Santa Monica), said the Expo Line will allow him to attend meetings in Downtown L.A. and meet friends for dinner in Culver City after work. The extension, he said, will connect Santa Monicans to a transit system that serves many other parts of the region.

"I can't wait to experience Los Angeles without sitting in traffic," he said. "I have been waiting for this train for a few years."

But not everyone is so gung-ho about the expanded Expo Line.

Dinah O'Connor, a Sunset Park resident who has lived in Santa Monica for most of her life, is concerned about the safety of pedestrians and motorists. She noted that the train is at street level in Santa Monica and that there are no crossing arms at the affected intersections.

"It looks dangerous," she said. "I think there are going to be a lot of accidents."

O'Connor, who runs the Twist clothing store on 17th Street near Ocean Park Boulevard, said the Expo Line isn't going to boost her business because it isn't close enough.

She added that she and many of her customers in the neighborhood are steering clear of Colorado Avenue entirely.

"I think people are really going to think about crossing town, regardless of what side you live on," she said, arguing that improved mobility for people in the region will come at the expense of local residents. "It's a hassle. It's a clogged-up mess. We already don't go in that direction."

Robert Herman, who has lived in Santa Monica since 1957, is also skeptical that the new rail line will reduce congestion locally.

"We love the freedom we have with our cars and a train will never solve the traffic problem," he said.

Added local resident Faith Rumack, whose home is in the northeastern portion of the city: "For those of us who still live here, it's a nightmare."

Longtime resident Michael Stark said the extension of the Expo Line fits into Santa Monica's long history of changes in planning and development.

"I'm sure it will cause problems but we will survive those like we have all of the others," he said. "I love this city, warts and all, and don't want to live anywhere else."

only for Carlos and his mom, but for our entire Spanish Immersion Pathway," Samohi principal Eva Mayoral said in a press release. "Today we celebrate Carlos' achievement as a full SMMUSD accomplishment."

AP Spanish teacher Claudia Bautista, who serves as the high school's immersion chair, said Bustos not only aimed high on his own tests but also made sure other students had opportunities to succeed as well.

"Carlos is one of the hardest-working and most eloquent writers I have ever had the pleasure of working with in class," she said. "Carlos helped get 20 scholarships for low-income students who could not pay for their AP exams through the AP Pals Club. I can't wait to see his contribution to our society in the future."

Added Mayoral: "I am thrilled with Carlos' accomplishment. Carlos is the very definition of phenomenal. Throughout the six years I have known him he has never been driven solely by grades; he has earned straight 'A' grades in every of the most rigorous courses we have to offer here at Samohi and John Adams Middle School because he is invested in mastery."

Last year, 876 Samohi students took a total of 1,783 AP exams in 21 subjects. A passing score of 3 or higher was earned on 1,330 tests.

"We congratulate all our students who earned college credit and took on the rigor of AP exams," Mayoral said.

GOP race shifts California's political fault lines

NICHOLAS RICCARDI & MICHAEL R. BLOOD,
Associated Press

The Republican Party in California has been riven for decades between those who want to tack to the ideological center to expand its diminishing appeal and those who want it to enforce conservative purity. But the prospect of Donald Trump clinching the nomination in the Golden State has scrambled the party's political fault lines in advance of its pivotal June primary, forging unexpected alliances that blur those long-standing divisions.

Tea party favorite Ted Cruz was endorsed Saturday by former Gov. Pete Wilson, a centrist governor who raised taxes and feuded regularly with conservatives. Trump, meanwhile, has snapped up support from stalwarts on California's right, like conservative activist Ted Costa and former state Sen. Tony Strickland, and its middle, like former U.S. Rep. Doug Ose. Cruz might also be effectively helped by big-tent Republicans trying to stop Trump.

"There's always been that conservative versus moderate, can you speak to the middle or only to the base? And this transcends that," said Tim Clark, Trump's state director and a seasoned GOP strategist here.

California caps the epic Republican contest with its June 7 primary. It will be the first time in memory that the state's unusual system could decide a presidential nomination. The state will parcel out most of its delegates to the winners of each of its 53 congressional districts, with only 13 going to the statewide winner.

The state's Republican presidential primaries are usually low-profile affairs, occurring after the nomination has been clinched. All sides agree that makes it very hard to predict how this race, expected to draw millions to the polls, will go.

There's no question it will be tumultuous. That was made clear at the state party convention in Burlingame, a suburb just outside San Francisco airport. On Friday, Trump had to enter the convention hotel from a rear entrance to avoid hundreds of demonstrators who had pushed through police barricades to the front door of the hotel. The previous night, after the front-runner's rally in Orange County, protesters damaged police cars and struggled with police.

California, the home turf of Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan, was once a reliable Republican state in presidential elections. But the party's fortunes started to erode in the late 1990s after a series of measures targeting immigrants, which alienated growing segments of the state's population. In 2007, then-Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger warned party members that the GOP was "dying at the box office."

The party has continued to shrivel - Republican registration accounts for just 28 percent of the state total. Democrats control every statewide office and both chambers of the Legislature. Republicans consider it a victory just to win one-third of state legislative races so it can have a say in state budgeting.

A polarizing figure like Trump might actually make the party's relationship with California's growing Hispanic and Asian voters worse, analysts warn. "He does nothing to ease that," said Sherry Bebitch Jeffe, a veteran California political analyst at the University of Southern California.

The upcoming primary has triggered a surge in new voter registrations and they are overwhelmingly young, Democratic and Latino, according to Paul Mitchell, who runs a political data firm in Sacramento. Some of those voters may be drawn by the promise of voting for Sen. Bernie Sanders in the Democratic primary, but some may be registering to vote against Trump in November.

"Do the Republicans actually think they can win an election scaring every Hispanic in this country to death?" the other remaining GOP presidential candidate, Ohio Gov. John Kasich, asked during a news conference Friday in Burlingame.

Still, California Republicans are angry, too, and that could help Trump. "If you're a Republican in California, you have a Democratic president you don't like, Hillary Clinton is likely to be the Democratic nominee, you have a Democratic governor," said Matt Rexroad, a GOP consultant. "If you're one of these Republicans and you think everything is going wrong, what's the best way to throw a wrench in everything? Donald Trump."

Ose, a former congressman viewed as a moderate, said that's why people of all ideological stripes are coalescing around Trump. "It's not about philosophy for most of these people," Ose said. "People are just fed up with business as usual."

Cruz's state political director, Michael Schroeder, agreed. "The traditional moderate-conservative divide has been redefined by an establishment-anti-establishment divide," he said. Since both Trump and Cruz are outsiders, "people are saying, 'I have to choose,'" Schroeder added. "Then the alliances don't become unlikely. They become likely."

Trump's campaign hopes his dominance of the airwaves will let him run the table in a state where ground-level campaigning is often eclipsed by television ads and the media. The Cruz campaign hopes its long time organizing in the state will let it capture enough delegates in individual districts to block Trump. Kasich would be a fit with more technocratic California Republicans but his little-funded campaign may not be enough to capture the coastal areas where he'd play best.

Even those skeptical of Trump see why his appeal is broad in a party that is powerless in California. Chuck Page is mayor of the Silicon Valley suburb of Saratoga and talks of his friendship with Democratic politicians. He said it's hard to be a Republican in the state.

"Everybody pounds it into you that you can't win without a dramatic change," Page said after hearing Trump give a 30-minute speak filled with his trademark braggadocio and jokes. "Listening today - I don't buy into it - but that could be a dramatic change."

GETTING STARTED

There are many strategies to solving Sudoku. One way to begin is to examine each 3x3 grid and figure out which numbers are missing. Then, based on the other numbers in the row and column of each blank cell, find which of the missing numbers will work. Eliminating numbers will eventually lead you to the answer.

Eateries showcasing tableside cats, rabbits, owls, hawks and even snakes have tried their hands, with the latest being Harry, offering food and drink -- and 20 to 30 teacup-size hedgehogs for diners to fondle while awaiting meal service. The equivalent of $9 brings an hour of cuddling rights.

■ Fine Points of the Law: In some states, as News of the Weird has reported, visitors with the barest "right" to occupy property (e.g., invited in for one night but never left) cannot be evicted except by court order, which might take weeks to obtain. In April, owners in Flint, Michigan, and Nampa, Idaho, were outraged that nothing could be done quickly to remove squatters from their vacated houses. (The Nampa squatter produced a "lease" that, though fraudulent, was enough to send the sheriff away.)

■ The two most recent instances of suspects who claimed that the drugs or paraphernalia found in their genitals during police searches were not theirs (but were only being stored there for other people) were Tiffany Flores, 23, arrested in Fellsmere, Florida, on April 5 with a crack pipe in her vagina, and Deondre Lumpkin, 23, arrested in Largo, Florida, on March 22 with crack cocaine "concealed beneath his genitals" (though he did admit owning the marijuana found in his car).

Get some R and R, Aries

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ You might not be expressing your thoughts at the moment. You could feel as if the timing is off, or perhaps you are questioning certain aspects of your thinking. You would be wise to keep some things to yourself, especially if you are not ready for others' opinions. Tonight: Get some R and R.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Know that there always are other options, even if you don't see them at first. Your creativity comes into play during a meeting or a difficult situation involving a partnership. You have an idea of what you want, and you have what it takes to get it. Tonight: Brainstorm.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ People will observe your actions. Though some might question what you are doing, others will admire you. It is best to simply focus on what you need; their disagreement will help you to fine-tune your thoughts. Tonight: You express your ideas as if you are in a dreamlike state.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Reach out to someone you admire. You will gain a different perspective about a key issue involving travel or a legal matter. The more you know, the better you will understand others' thinking. Tonight: Relax your mind. Do some binge-watching or whatever works for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ You often have great ideas, but right now you might need to listen to someone else's. Play devil's advocate if need be. Feelings could come forward in a discussion that you'll need to be careful with. Understand what a friend is saying. Tonight: Veg. Do what you want.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Defer to others. Rethink a choice more carefully. Others mean well, and one person in particular cheers you on. You might not understand why, but you'll know that he or she is there for you. As a result, you can break out of your patterns. Tonight: Be a wild thing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Concern about your effectiveness might be appropriate. Take some time to center yourself before acting. Communication might not be as fluid as you would like. Be aware of what is happening on the homefront. A family member seems to want control. Tonight: Out and about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Your playfulness emerges when dealing with others. A meeting could add a chaotic element to your day; a boss seems nearly too enthusiastic. Rein in your finances, and realize that a tendency to go overboard could cost you more than is evident. Tonight: Use your creativity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Tension builds as a domestic issue lurks. If possible, get this matter settled, as it keeps weaving its way through your thoughts and actions. Your finances could be tied up in a power play and you seem to resist any pressure. Tonight: Observe, then decide what to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Your ability to communicate and get past others' resistance will be more important than you realize. Someone might be holding back some important information because of his or her concerns. Use your ability to detach and see the big picture. Tonight: Go for what you need.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Avoid a tendency to go overboard. You don't want to say "no" to someone you care about. A well-meaning friend can be difficult at times. Use caution with someone you meet at this time; this person could be very controlling. Tonight: Pay bills before deciding on another purchase.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ You might be more energized than you have been in a while. In a discussion with someone you look up to, you'll realize that one of your long-term goals is no longer valid. You are likely to feel much freer than you have in a long time. Tonight: Do only what you want to do.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS
The stars show the kind of day you'll have:
★★★★★Dynamic ★★ So-So
★★★★ Positive ★ Difficult
★★★ Average

This year you will achieve many of your goals. You also will examine them to see how valid they are, as you have changed since you last focused on these desires. Your circle of friends enlarges and becomes more significant. If you are single, you will meet someone through your friends or through an organization in which you are involved. This person could turn your life upside down. If you are attached, the two of you broaden your horizons and are likely to want to be more social or committed to your community. Your bond strengthens as a result. PISCES can be challenging, but you can count on him or her.

Negligence and Auto Accidents

To have a valid car accident claim, you must first determine the negligent party or parties that caused the car crash. You may suspect that another driver, pedestrian, motorcyclist etc. acted carelessly, but cannot identify what traffic laws they violated. A skilled car accident attorney, however, can examine police reports and state traffic laws and speak to witnesses to determine who was at fault for your motor vehicle accident.

Tip: Act Quickly

If you seek legal advice, it's important that you do so as soon as possible after an accident. You're more likely to get the compensation due to you if your attorney is able to act quickly. Our state attorney's are available 24/7 to discuss your claim.
