Tallula's joins the family

MEXICAN: The seventh restaurant in the Rustic Canyon group will feature Mexican food.

MARINA ANDALON

Daily Press Staff Writer

Cruise down Pacific Coast Highway and turn onto Entrada Drive, there you will find the newest member of the Rustic Canyon Family, otherwise known as Tallula's.

Josh Loeb, a Santa Monica native, is the founder and CEO of Rustic Canyon of the family of seven restaurants.

The first restaurant and namesake of the company, Rustic Canyon, was a vision he shared with his wife and partner Zoe Nathan. It opened in 2006 and eleven years later the couple have expanded the businesses to include Rustic Canyon, Huckleberry, Milo & Olive, Sweet Rose Creamery, Cassia, Esters Wine Shop & Bar, and now Tallula's.

Tallula's is a Mexican restaurant offering locally sourced and organic ingredients in each dish. Tallula's took over from the former Marix and has made the restaurant a colorful, vintage looking space, with a separate bar and patio seating for everyone to join in on an authentic Mexican meal.

"Zoe and I grew up around this area and we always enjoyed going to Marix," said Loeb. "We have always wanted to do something with this location and we loved the idea of doing Mexican food. It is something we don't have in our group but it's a food group we really love and enjoy."

The restaurant is set to open on Tuesday,

Wireless network to improve in Santa Monica

Hundreds of tiny cellular antennas are in the pipeline for Santa Monica streets and could eventually mean fewer drop calls, faster streaming and better battery life for smart phones and tablets.

So far, all major cell phone providers have approached the City to install so-called "small cells" throughout the City. The Public Works department is processing 136 applications, anticipating as many as 300 over the next two years and 600 over the next five years. The small cells convert slow radio waves to fast light waves.

California group pledges $100 million to battle homelessness

By Associated Press

A San Francisco-based non-profit has pledged to raise $100 million to reduce chronic homelessness in a city widely known for sidewalk tent encampments amid multi-million dollar homes.

Tipping Point Community said the money will come from private donations and go toward affordable housing and homeless services provided by other nonprofit groups as well as government.

The office of San Francisco Mayor Ed Lee says this is the largest private commitment ever made in the city to combat homelessness.

Los Angeles, Paris await Olympic inspectors in 2024 race

BY GRAHAM DUNBAR

AP Sports Writer

Los Angeles and Paris, both already seen as winning options for the 2024 Games, await their Olympic inspectors this week.

The cities will host three-day visits by an International Olympic Committee panel, whose chairman has no doubt about their hosting credentials.

"I think today at least you can already say, either way, we will have fantastic Olympic Games," IOC evaluation commission chairman Patrick Baumann told The Associated Press.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

Wastewater Main Replacement Project

For the week of May 8, the Contractor will continue with rehabilitation of existing maintenance holes throughout the City. During these operations, traffic control will be set up. Should you have any questions, please contact Carlos Rosales, Project Manager (310) 458-8721 ext. 2620 or Tim Scheffer, Construction Manager (909) 376-0275.

Water Main Replacement Project

For the week of May 8, the contractor will be installing new fire hydrants on Ocean Avenue between Pacific Terrace and Vicente Place North and begin installation of a new water main on Seaside Terrace between Ocean Avenue and Ocean Front Walk. Please expect temporary lane closures on Ocean Avenue in the southbound direction, one lane will be maintained at all times. Should you have any questions, please contact Carlos Rosales, Project Manager (310) 458-8721 ext. 2620 or Mike Masengale, Berg & Assoc, Construction Manager, (424) 536-7030.

Los Amigos Park Stormwater Harvesting And Direct Use Demonstration Project

For the week of May 8, the contractor will continue work with the installation of the storm water treatment equipment and instrumentation. Construction for the first phase was completed and traffic control on 5th Street was removed. Hollister Ave. between 5th and 6th Streets has been reopened to through traffic. Should you have any questions, please contact Carlos Rosales, Project Manager (310) 458-8721 ext. 2620 or Scott Neumann, Construction Manager (310) 525-0683.

Citywide Sidewalk Repair Project

For the week of May 8, removal and replacement of sidewalks will occur in the area bound by 14th Street to the east, Colorado Avenue to the south, Ocean Avenue to the west, and Wilshire Boulevard to the north. Work will also be performed along Montana Avenue. Should you have any questions, please contact Jamie Atkinson, City of Santa Monica, Project Manager (310) 458-8721 ext. 5081 or Craig Wheeler, Assistant Construction Manager, (951) 522-4505.

Street Lighting Modernization Program

For the week of May 8, the contractor will be mobilizing into the project area, which is bound by 16th Street to the east, Ocean Park Boulevard to the south, Lincoln Boulevard to the west, and Pico Boulevard to the north. There may be sidewalk closures and temporary no parking posted within this area. Should you have any questions, please contact Jamie Atkinson, City of Santa Monica, Project Manager (310)458-8721 ext. 5081.

Montana Avenue Traffic Signal Replacement

For the week of April 24 through September 5, due to an emergency necessity, four traffic signals along the Montana Avenue corridor (Intersections along Montana Avenue at 4th, 7th, 11th, and 14th Streets) must be replaced immediately. The entire intersection hardware will be replaced, including poles, signal and pedestrian heads, computer controllers and underground conduit. Work includes underground utilities, curb ramp construction, traffic signal installation, and all activities necessary to implement the traffic signal improvements. Work areas will be contained; crews will make practical efforts to minimize sound, dust, and disturbance to the neighboring community. If you have any questions, please contact the City's Project Manager, Andrew Maximous, at (310) 458-8291.

cian, Paul McClaren, compares the small cells to doors that allow users access to a fiber optic speedway. Currently, Santa Monica infrastructure has too few doors, so people with their large packages of data get jammed as they try to jump onto the network. McClaren compares the network to a moving sidewalk that can carry pedestrians two-thousand times faster than walking.

"To solve the problem more entrances are built and spaced all over the City so you are never more than a short walk from an entrance," McClaren said. "These entrances would be small cells. Because the carrying capacity of the moving sidewalk is nearly limitless, the difference the new entrances make is exponential."

The small cells are barely noticeable, as the City requires them to blend in with existing infrastructure like streetlights. However, McClaren says "everyone will notice their (better) ability to stream data."

The hundreds of applications have to be processed and in compliance with FCC guidelines and safety standards for frequency emissions. The FCC has passed a law that preempts local decisions premised on the environmental effects of radio frequency emissions.

The flood of new cells is the result of new technology, increasing demand for fast networks and several government initiatives on the local, state and national level. In August 2016, the City enacted a new ordinance that protects Santa Monica from uncontrolled expansion while streamlining the review process.

Happy Mother's Day - Send Chocolate And Love

IF YOU'RE READING THIS, YOU HAVE A mother. Maybe she's a biological mother, maybe she's a mother figure who picked up the slack when your biological mom was working, sick or unavailable. Maybe you have a mother in your life by choice and not by birth.

No matter who your mother is, take a moment, buy a card, order some chocolate and call her to let her know how much she means to you. I know it's a Hallmark Holiday – but do it anyways. You'll be glad you did.

We live in a country that reveres mothers for all they do for their children. We honor the sacrifices and hold up their accomplishments in order to thank them for all they have done to make children into fully functioning contributors to society.

Motherhood is at once considered the highest calling a woman can have, and simultaneously undervalued when it comes to the respect that we give to 'stay at home moms' in our society. For a role that is so central to the advancement of our society we often give little thought and less care to what the mothers of the world are actually doing.

We have changed a great deal from the days of Barbara Billingsley playing Mrs. Cleaver on tv. We went through the years of the 70's and 80 when the refrain that a woman could have it all, be a shark in the office, a perfect mother and "never never let him forget he's a man."

I know many women in my age cohort who are feeling like there is just too much to do, and too little time to do it all in. The idea that one could have it all was sold with the promise of equality for all. I'm sure it's happened for some women, but in general it's darned near impossible to have it all, but we should honor those who are trying. Their efforts should not fall on deaf ears.

Today's mothers are busy trying to get kids from school to play dates, to tutors and counselors, and let's not forget the endless sports classes and extracurriculars that demand time and chauffeuring. They do this all while managing a career, and for many of them are doing it without the assistance of partner in the form of a husband or boyfriend.

If your mother was like mine, she worked long hours, doing work she hated to provide a home and put me through college. She devoted hours to my education as a young boy with flashcards, and vocabulary lists. I have no idea how many books she read to me. All of this she did without a college degree, but a dogged determination to provide and give me opportunities that she was denied.

My mother passed away many years ago, it was the hardest day of my life. It's the day I became an adult – an orphan if you will. For most of us that is true. So long as our mothers are alive we are their babies, and when they die we pass into that horrible state called adult. It's not fun. Life is a one-way trip and if you have the opportunity to say Thank You to your mother – take it now.

Sunday will the restaurants will be full of families who are taking mom out, and you should do that if you can. But you should also celebrate in a more personal, more loving, more honest, more intimate way if you can. Tell your mother you love her and why. Tell her you are aware of the sacrifices she made for you. Tell her you are sorry for your teenage years – you should be.

Happy Mother's Day to the mothers in the world, whether they are the biological or the chosen, they've meant something to you, so tell them that this weekend.

Suicide online: Facebook aims to save lives with new actions

BY JEFF MARTIN
Associated Press

The alarming video of a Georgia teenager livestreaming her own suicide attempt stayed up long enough on Facebook Live for sheriff's deputies to find and save her — a repeat phenomenon that has prompted mental health experts and Facebook's CEO to further investigate how they can use social media as a possible platform to help save lives.

The 15-year-old girl took pills and put a plastic bag over her head during her suicide attempt May 2, officials from the Bibb County Sheriff's Office said. A sheriff's sergeant found the girl unresponsive - but with a pulse - and she's expected to recover.

In April, Facebook was alerted to another possible suicide and made the decision to keep the video up, Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg said in a conference call last week.

That allowed law enforcement "to use that live video to communicate with that person and help save their life," he said.

"So a lot of what we're trying to do is not just about taking the content down but also about helping people when they're in need on the platform."

In Georgia, a viewer watching the teen's livestream called 911. Only the teen's friends could view the video because of the girl's privacy settings, but Bibb County sheriff's Sgt. Linda Howard had a nephew who was friends with her on Facebook. She immediately called her nephew, who viewed the video and let his aunt know it wasn't a prank.

"It was very serious and we needed to get to it right away," she said.

Deputies got three possible addresses for the girl from her high school and sent officers speeding to all three homes. She was found in a bathtub at one of them.

"She was unresponsive, but one of our sergeants was able to find a pulse," Howard said, adding that the girl is recovering.

"I'm just happy that we can give her back to her family," Howard said.

Facebook spokeswoman Andrea Saul said she couldn't discuss details of the Georgia case because of privacy reasons, but said the company in March unveiled a series of initiatives designed to help people who go online and contemplate suicide.

Facebook is testing how computers can quickly identify posts where it's likely someone is expressing thoughts of suicide, and provide resources to the person even if someone on Facebook has not reported it yet.

"It's new ground, new territory but really important," said Dan Reidenberg, a psychologist who is working with Facebook on the initiatives.

"Anytime we have an opportunity to intervene, we never know what the right thing that's going to be said by the right person at the right moment is going to be that saves someone's life," said Reidenberg, executive director of the Minnesota-based suicide prevention group SAVE.

Zuckerberg also announced that Facebook will hire 3,000 more people to review videos of crimes and suicides.

Whenever someone contemplates suicide, online or anywhere else, listening is key, said Kevin Briggs, a retired California Highway Patrol sergeant who often spoke with people as they stood on a small metal pipe outside the Golden Gate Bridge's railings, one step from falling into the Pacific Ocean.

"What happens with these kids is they are so impulsive that they don't see into their future, they don't see a way out," Briggs said.

More than 1,400 people have leaped to their deaths from the bridge since the famed California span opened in 1937. But scores of others have been saved when Briggs and other officers intervened.

Briggs wrote a book about his experiences, "Guardian of the Golden Gate: Protecting the Line Between Hope and Despair."

"We need to take in every word," he said. "When you get into one of these conversations, every word can mean something."

Daniel Lurie, Tipping Point's chief executive and founder, said that such poverty was unacceptable in such a wealthy region. "Homelessness is a humanitarian crisis and the issue of our time," he said in a statement.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development defines the chronically homeless as people who have been living on the streets for more than a year and have a disability such as drug addiction or mental health issues.

The mayor's office reports there are about 2,000 people in the city who are chronically homeless. Lurie would like to cut that number in half.

"There is no silver bullet to confronting homelessness. We need new ideas to address this issue and must tackle it from all angles," the mayor said in a statement.

The nonprofit said in a press release that it has already raised $60 million.

May 9 under partners Loeb, Nathan, Chef Jeremy Fox, Colby Goff, and Executive Chef Mario Alberto.

Tallula's, named after their daughter is meant to be a neighborhood spot. They said the restaurant is meant to be a place where the locals go to grab a margarita, or chips and guacamole and then head to the beach after.

Loeb expresses the number one goal is to really lock in with the community and give the neighborhood a place where they can get fresh and delicious Mexican food.

Partner and Chef, Jeremy Fox will oversee the culinary side. Fox is an award-winning chef and has been working with Loeb for five years. He is involved with Rustic Canyon, Milo & Olive and Esters and recently published his latest vegetarian cook book that will be sold at Tallula's.

Along with Chef Fox, Executive Chef Mario Alberto will also be overseeing the kitchen, and will be preparing the dishes.

"When it comes to food, our commitment to ingredients is what makes us unique. The ingredients are fresh, organic and sustainably sourced, and with Mario running the kitchen we feel confident," said

Loeb. "He is a good fit, and we can really see his passion for food."

The restaurant takes pride in offering a true Mexican home cooking in Santa Monica, where they will feature both traditional dishes along with light and creative re-imaged meals.

The ingredients used are sourced from the Santa Monica farmers market and will feature freshly made tortillas and chili pastes.

Some suggested dishes by Chef Fox is the Half Roast Organic Chicken with mole casero, with local fresh vegetables and herbs. Also the Grilled Market Fish tacos with Mexican sauerkraut, tomatillo salsa, oregano, and house made tortillas.

As the seventh restaurant opens their doors, it puts more on Loeb and Nathan's plate. However he makes it very clear they are never driven by money. "We want to make sure each one of our restaurants provides something for the community and is a place for neighborhood to get together."

Tallula's will open at 4 p.m. and will be taking reservations. Call (310) 526-0027 for more information.

Tallula's is located at 118 Entrada Dr., Santa Monica.

WELL NEWS BY SCOTT LALEE

Medical Myths

■ Cross this one off your list: Varicose veins are not caused by excessively crossing your legs while sitting or by standing too much. The primary cause of these unsightly veins (enlarged, gnarled blood vessels close to the skin surface and thus visible) is increased blood pressure. There's a major genetics aspect -- the condition can run in families -- but other causes are obesity, gender, inactivity, age and pregnancy.

■ Crossing legs is not a cause. Standing isn't either, though standing for long periods may exacerbate an existing problem. One acquired cause may be blood clots in the veins, which can result in enlarged vessels months or even years after the initial problem.

■ Though perhaps inevitable for some people, varicose veins can be treated with remedies ranging from compression stockings to injections to surgical procedures.

OLYMPIC

seems so sure of the candidates' qualities that he asked his four vice presidents for advice on also bringing the 2028 Olympics into play, rewarding both cities with hosting duties. That guidance is due in July, so Baumann's 13-member group will press on with scheduled work in Los Angeles starting Wednesday, then in Paris from Sunday. Each visit ends with Baumann taking questions at a news conference.

"There is no change in the scope and the role and the mandate," Baumann said of the possible dual award affecting his eventual report to IOC members.

In the typically secretive world of Olympics elections, it is unclear how many voting members are swayed by the type of report they will get from Baumann's team on July 5.

IOC inspections typically do not rank candidate cities, and a more flexible evaluation process introduced for the 2024 contest will look to stress the positives. The IOC says it will also publish the report on its website.

"It is not about finding the black spot," Baumann, an IOC member from Switzerland, said in a recent interview. "It is, of course, to highlight challenges if there are, but also and mainly to highlight the opportunities."

Baumann acknowledged that the "differences are going to be extremely small" between two obviously world-class cities.

Still, the Olympic hosting model has been burned by recent high-spending and budget-busting hosts. Baumann cautioned that "realistic financing" is a key factor to avoid an unwanted legacy of tax hikes and white elephant venues.

A privately funded Los Angeles project also differs from a more European model in Paris that looks to some taxpayer money toward projected spending of 3 billion euros ($3.2 billion) on new venues and buildings.

France's President-elect, Emmanuel Macron, will be inaugurated Sunday in Paris when the IOC team starts work. Olympic bidders need federal support for security operations.

Macron will take over from Francois Hollande, whose strong backing for the Paris bid included traveling to meet Bach in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Macron's election has spared Paris officials from questions about how a far-right presidency of Marine Le Pen might play with the IOC. Its global pool of members includes one from Syria, which is targeted for a travel ban from Muslim-majority countries by President Donald Trump.

Still, bid cities rely more on city mayors than state presidents, and Paris has put civic leader Anne Hidalgo at the heart of its campaign.

In political terms, Baumann noted that the two bids come from countries that are "organized differently in sports terms." He pointed to his experience staging events in the United States and France as secretary general of basketball's governing body, FIBA.

"That doesn't diminish in any way one bid versus the other, it's just different," the Swiss official said. "That difference is something that also the IOC membership needs to understand."

About 88 of the current 95 IOC members are entitled to choose the 2024 host in a vote scheduled for Sept. 13 in Lima, Peru. American and French members will be barred from voting, and others have recused themselves while under investigation.

Plans could change during politicking from July 9-12 in Lausanne.

First, a two-day meeting of the IOC executive board will hear the vice presidents' advice. Bid leaders from LA and Paris will then make separate presentations to IOC members.

By the evening of July 12 it could be clear if both Los Angeles and Paris will win in a doubled-up 2024-2028 contest — though in which order may be unresolved. Neither city has offered to take the later option.

For Baumann, the two cities' aims should stay the same for the next week, and next decade.

"How are you going deliver a great experience for the athletes?" Baumann said. "How are you going deliver a great experience for the fans? And how are you going to deliver on the legacy of the promises and the ideas that the bid committee has put on paper?"

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 9)

In the next 10 weeks, a growth process exhilarates production in a couple key areas of your life. Also, your attitude shifts. What used to feel like an obligation will feel like an opportunity. You'll earn big in July and in October. You'll educate and celebrate others in August. There's a move featured in September. Aries and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 40, 3, 13 and 19.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
When you're rested and cared for, your enthusiasm is naturally strong. If you're feeling less than enthusiastic, don't mistake this for intuition or a judgment about the circumstances. It could very well just mean that you need rest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You're in danger of making things more complicated than they have to be. Take a step back. Breathe deep. Yes, there are many moving parts here, but most happen as a chain reaction to your moving only one or two of them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
Don't assume that as long as your time is available you should keep filling it up. Every commitment affects every other commitment. Leave a wide stretch of open space in that schedule and you'll be glad you did.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
Lately you couldn't care less about what people think of you -- which is precisely why you are so well-liked. If you dare to extend an invitation, you'll be most pleased with the response you receive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
You know what you want to accomplish, and momentum will be on your side all day long. Also, there are many who want to (and have the means to) help you with your quest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You've been worried that you're not quite qualified to take on a certain job, but the thing is that no one is until the job is theirs. This type of work can only be learned by doing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
If you find that your ability has been underestimated, there's a fantastic opportunity in this. You are now in the perfect position to impress and impact with a performance they weren't expecting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Every flight plan includes a destination point and an estimated time of arrival. Similarly, your current plan will require a few time and space specifics before you'll be allowed to take off.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
Your social flair is going strong today, and a wide range of people will be drawn to you, though most notably your fellow fire signs, Aries and Leo.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
People who don't want to do boring work will try and rope you into doing it. How frustrating! But actually, you might find that it's not half as boring as you thought. In fact, there's something juicy in this for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
Let no man speak on behalf of your satisfaction and comfort level. The only person who knows if you're really comfortable is you. In fact, you cannot be comfortable unless and until you decide that you are!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
At best, it will be useless to talk about anything outside your realm of direct experience and knowledge. At worst, such talk will be harmful. Gossip is dangerous to both the gossip and the subject of gossip.

Full-Moon Pre-Show

Once you've answered the question "What do you want to be when you grow up?" The follow-up question will demand a response: "How many times will you grow up?" Aim for dozens, hundreds, even. Life is more exciting when you constantly evolve. Think on how you'd like to develop and make the most of tomorrow's transformational full moon.

Here's who we are looking for: If it's you, PLEASE apply ASAP! This is a beach job, but we need hard working, focused, energetic team members that love to work with people. Are you able to carry boards, interact with our customers, keep a sharp eye on the register and open/close up properly each day? Do you love the water? Do you want to share that love with every person walking by on the boardwalk? Do you want to be the face and the heart of a family business? If this is you, apply now. We will train you to succeed at this job. Just come to us every day with an open heart, a friendly smile and a caring attitude. If you have those, you will succeed with us! Come work with us and share your love of the water with people from all over the world. Life is Better on the Water! Email your resume to Sean@ProSUPShop.com HIRING NOW!
