Council funds car show, 5K run and small business marketplace

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

The City of Santa Monica may still be cash strapped, but Council members are nevertheless finding the discretionary funds to allocate towards what they feel are worthwhile community initiatives.

In an April 26 meeting this included money for the Pico Youth and Family Center's annual Classic Car Show, a small business artisan marketplace at the Brunson Terrace affordable housing property, and the Police Activity League's Rick Crocker 5K Walk Run Challenge.

The largest allocation is the $25,000 in discretionary funding given to non-profit housing developer the Community Corporation of Santa Monica to assist the establishment of a community marketplace.

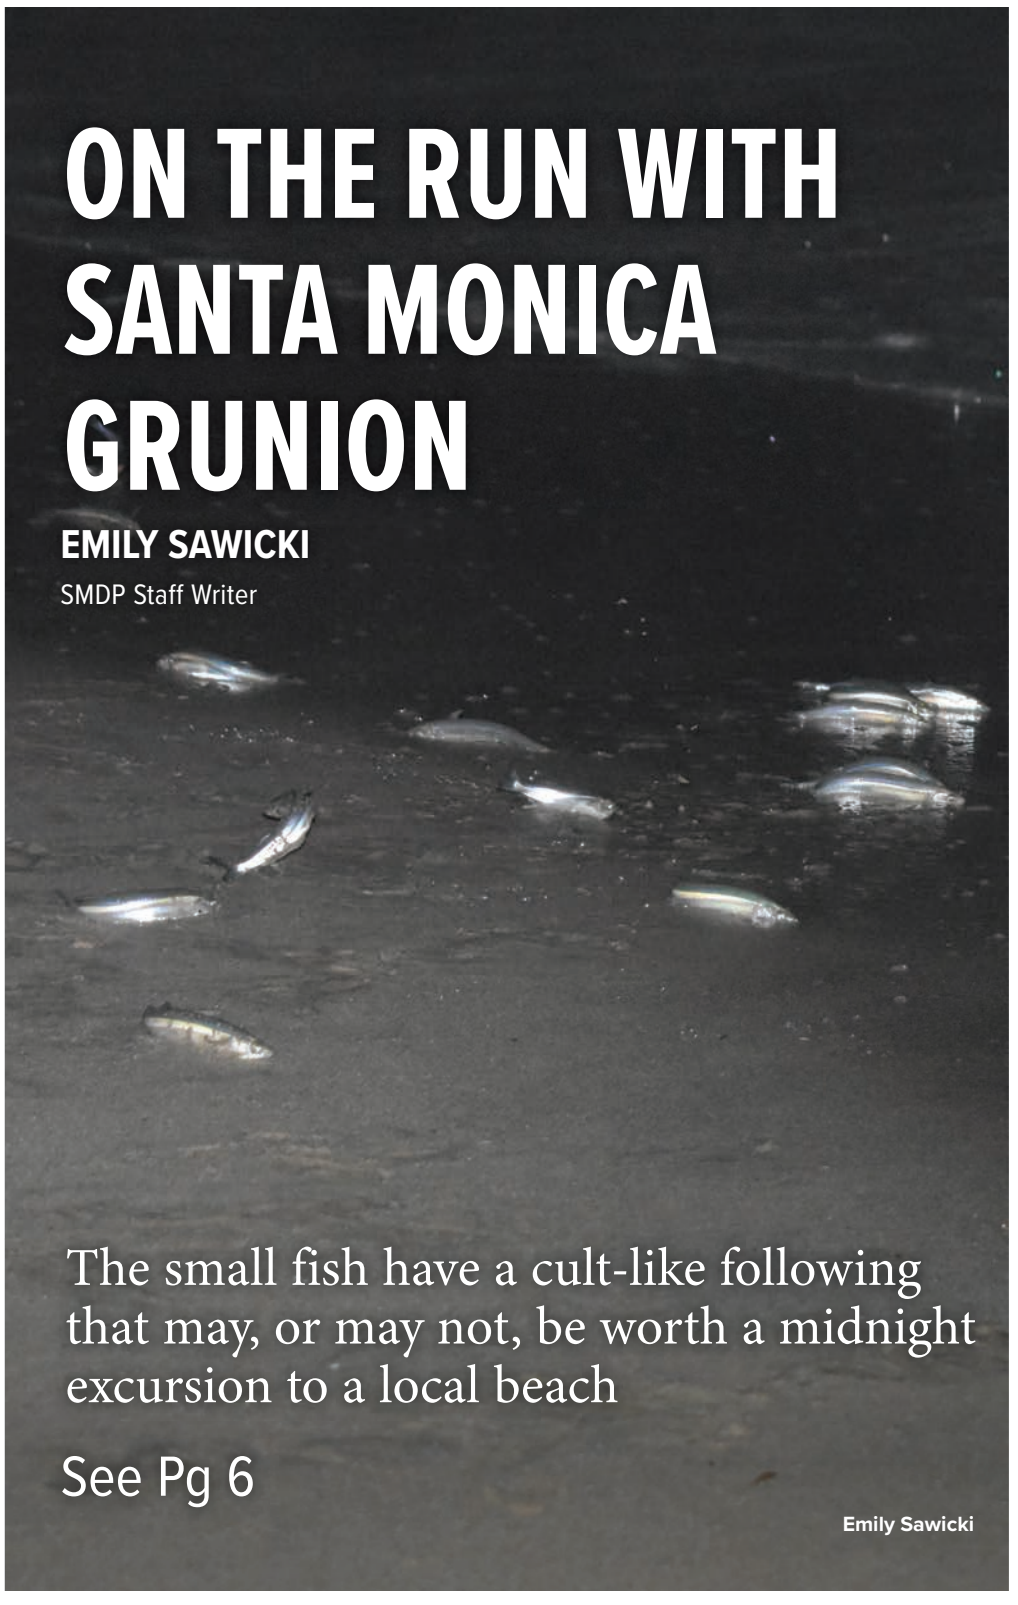

The marketplace will be located on the ground floor of the upcoming 48 unit Brunson Terrace affordable housing development at 1819 Pico Blvd. The vendor space will host local Pico-based businesses, pop ups, workshops and more and was created in response to Pico community stakeholders expressing a need for an affordable small business space.

"It's consistent with our budgetary priorities that we identified about having an inclusive economic recovery because it will give people who otherwise wouldn't have opportunity the ability to sell wares, learn how to run a business, that sort of thing," said Councilmember Gleam Davis.

The marketplace space is slated to open in early 2023 with construction and vendor selection taking place throughout 2022. While the entire initiative requires around $50,000, Council's allocation is intended to help kickstart the project and be a show of support that will encourage private donors to fill in the gap in needs.

Council also voted to waive rental fees for

Santa Monica's homelessness crisis prompts a new wave of programs and services

CLARA HARTER
SMDP Staff Writer

In tandem with the release of the 2022 homeless count data, the City has unveiled a series of proposals to strengthen its fight against homelessness.

While the number of homeless people counted in Santa Monica decreased by 11 percent since the last count in 2020—from 957 to 807 individuals—there is no question that homelessness and related crime and drug use continue to be a pressing issue in the city.

"We estimate 20 percent of the police department's work is connected to individuals who are experiencing homelessness; It's roughly 400 calls in any given week," said SMPD Captain Tom McLaughlin. "It appears, at least from some of my analysis, that 40 percent of our arrests on a weekly basis do involve people who are experiencing homelessness, so the work in front of us is real."

The staff report on the homeless count theorized that the decrease in overall homeless numbers could be related to the city's robust response strategies and the fact that the city's shelters were at limited capacity during the pandemic, which may have deterred unhoused people from coming to Santa Monica. Despite the overall decrease, there was a 14 percent increase in unhoused individuals observed in the Downtown and beach areas and a 36 percent increase in people living in cars or tents.

The report also recommended a series of changes and expansions to the City's homeless response systems.

In the near-term, meaning the next few months, staff will return to Council with three budget proposals: expanding the SMPD Homeless Liaison Program Team, adding an additional multidisciplinary street team; the Pico Youth & Family Center's use of the Santa Monica Pier parking lot for their annual Classic Car Show and to give the organization $5,000 to help execute the event. The show, which will take place during Latino/Hispanic heritage month, celebrates the culture of vintage low-rider cars. It is a family friendly event that features live performances by local bands and DJs and is currently tentatively scheduled for Sept. 10.

Council also allocated $5,000 and waived Pier parking lot rental fees to support the Rick Crocker 5K Walk Run Challenge, which is sponsored by the Police Activities league. This event will take place on May 26 from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

"Mr. Rick Crocker was a very fine person, a great police officer and someone who I recall with fond memories just being a great guy," said Councilmember Oscar de la Torre. "He was in the military on a tour in Iraq and a great example, you know, for our community and so I support making this happen in his memory."

This will be the second annual event in honor of fallen SMPD Officer and Marine Corps Reserve Major, Ricardo Crocker, who was killed by a rocket propelled grenade while on tour in Iraq in 2005. Previous to being redeployed to Iraq, Rick was assigned at PAL where he was a passionate advocate of programs which mentored PAL youth in their scholastic and outdoor activities. The run will raise money to support the youth programs at PAL.

The fish swim ashore to spawn

EMILY SAWICKI
SMDP Staff Writer

Santa Monica Beach was dark as the tide began to rise last Monday night, and all along the shore, just past the purple gleam of the Pacific Park Ferris wheel, the grunion were running.

A wave crashed up on the dark sand and, as it ebbed back into the Pacific, its retreating foam revealed a writhing silver fish — then another and another. A dozen or so fish flipped desperately back toward the dark churning water, illuminated by a flashlight beam.

Then they were gone.

Monday, May 2, marked the middle of a four-day predicted grunion run, when the fish thrash themselves on shores up and down Southern California to spawn. Runs occur when conditions are right, but "only the grunion know for sure where they will be on a given night," according to Pepperdine University Distinguished Professor Emeritus Karen Martin, PhD, a grunion expert.

For years, Martin and her team have sought to educate the public about the fish as well as tracking their spawning patterns and numbers. There are two grunion species: one native to the Gulf of Mexico and the other native to Southern California and Baja California. The silvery, hotdog-sized species share a unique spawning method, where females wriggle into the sand to lay eggs during high tides.

"Grunion runs occur at night, twice a month, after the highest tides associated with a full or new moon," according to a website Martin's team maintains: grunion.org.

On Monday, that meant the run was predicted between 10:30 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. and, by about 11:15 p.m., dozens of grunion were throwing themselves up onto the sand.

"Grunion females dig tail-first into the soft wave-swept sand to deposit their eggs, which are fertilized by milt from the males curled about them on the surface," according to Martin's website. "Males and females then return to the ocean, where they live a maximum of three or four years. Both sexes can spawn repeatedly over the summer and during their lives, starting at the age of one year."

Scientists gather data on the fish each season, but thanks to the pandemic, volunteer numbers have been down. Although there are no formal training sessions offered this season, Martin said her team was always looking for more volunteers.

"This year, people can watch Melissa's video on the grunion.org website for details about how to watch and report. The video 'Surf, Sand & Silversides' also streaming on the website gives more info about the biology of the grunion and the start of the Grunion Greeters and Beach Ecology Coalition," Martin wrote in an email to the Daily Press. "They don't need to sign up in advance for locations, just be careful and safe and then report what they see (even if the fish don't appear) on the 'report observations' tab. Just takes a few minutes, and the data are used by managers and by the Department of Fish & Wildlife to track the species, along with our research."

Sample questions include timing, precise location, number estimates and other factors like light and whether spawning is seen taking place. And surveys should be completed whether or not grunion are spotted — the lack of fish is as important a data point as their presence.

Martin also cautioned that volunteers should aim to go out in groups of two or more for safety.

Currently in California it is closed season for grunion, meaning that it is illegal to catch any of the fish. Closed season, which runs from April through June this year, is "observation only"; during open season (March and July-August), those with a license can attempt to capture the wriggly fish as they wash up on shore.

In the past, open season resumed on June 1 but, citing concerns over the longterm sustainability of the grunion fishery (according to California Fish & Wildlife), June will remain closed this year.

"The proposed regulatory changes will establish a bag and possession limit of 30 grunion for recreational fishers and close the month of June to take of grunion, shortening the open season by one month, from July 1 through March 31, for recreational fishing," according to a Fish & Game Commission document; the change was approved in February.

Grunion are set to keep on running throughout the spring and summer, but to see them is all about being in the right place at the right time.

Upcoming runs may take place late in the night from Monday, May 16, through Thursday, May 19 and Monday, May 30 through Thursday, June 2.

and accommodating overnight intakes at the SAMOSHEL homeless shelter.

A longer-term proposal concerns opening a behavioral health center on City-owned land, which would allow the City to address mental health crises in Santa Monica and reduce the need to transport individuals to psychiatric urgent care outside of city limits. Currently, SMPD officers are driving the majority of their psychiatric hold subjects all the way to the Harbor-UCLA Medical Center in Torrance.

"Santa Monica remains committed to addressing homelessness, and we go above and beyond what other communities in the county do," said Maggie Willis, human services administrator, later adding, "We are listening to hear the community, understand their frustrations, and we are working towards maximizing our investments and creating effective short-term and long-term solutions."

With Council support, the three near term proposals will be included in the Fiscal Year 2022 to 2023 budget plan.

The first suggestion is to expand the SMPD Homeless Liaison Program (HLP) Team from four ten-hour days per week to seven days per week.

The HLP team typically consists of one police sergeant, nine officers and one Department of Mental Health Clinician who work collaboratively to connect people experiencing homelessness to appropriate services or alternatives to incarceration where applicable. It is currently operating with only six officers due to ongoing SMPD staff shortages.

Nevertheless the team has produced strong results. For example, in 2021 the mental health clinicians completed 284 evaluations resulting in 170 linkages to psychiatric urgent care or hospitalization.

The second near-term proposal is to add a new multidisciplinary street team to help homeless individuals outside of the Downtown and beach areas where these teams are currently deployed. Multidisciplinary teams are made up of a variety of professionals with skillsets that can address the varied needs of homeless individuals.

The City currently funds multidisciplinary teams run by The People Concern, which include licensed mental health professionals, housing case managers, substance-use specialists, licensed medical providers, psychiatrists and a peer with lived experience.

"Last year, the three city funded multidisciplinary teams made more than 11,000 contacts with people experiencing homelessness in Santa Monica alone. They provided direct street based medical or psychiatric services to over 800 people. They placed 57 people into interim housing, and they placed 24 people directly into permanent housing," said Brian Hardgrave, senior human services analyst. "Just by comparison the LA County funded E6 multidisciplinary teams on the Westside placed a total of 12 people into permanent housing last year."

These teams currently operate in the Downtown and beach areas, and based off of their success, staff recommend adding a new team to address other areas of the city.

The third near-term proposal is to expand services at the SAMOSHEL homeless shelter, which is operated by The People Concern, so it has the capacity to intake clients overnight. Currently, SMPD officers and first responders are not able to bring any individuals to shelters outside of daytime service hours.

In total these proposals would cost $2.8 million with $1.8 million for expanding the HLP team, $400,000 for adding a multidisciplinary team and $600,000 for expanding operations at SAMOSHEL. Staff is also requesting Council allocate $200,000 of federal American Rescue Plan Act funds to emergency eviction prevention legal services to ensure Santa Monicans can remain housed.

The longer term proposal to open a behavioral health facility is meant to address the lack of inpatient psychiatric beds availability locally and the uptick in mental health crises experienced by both housed and unhoused individuals in Santa Monica.

In the short-term, the City has funding to launch a therapeutic transport van in partnership with the Department of Mental Health that will respond to 911 calls for behavioral health crises. According to the staff report, DMH's struggle to find people willing to staff the van has delayed its deployment.

"The city understands that antisocial behaviors in the community are really driving an increased fear and concerns in our communities due to the erratic behavior that's caused, a lot of the time, by untreated mental illness and substance use disorder," said Maggie Willis, human services administrator. "So to address these concerns, we're developing short-term and long-term plans to fill some of the gaps in services and treatment and design new ways to deliver those services in a way that meets the needs of people who are experiencing homelessness."

With Council support, staff seeks to issue a Request for Proposals for a vendor to produce a report into the feasibility of opening a behavioral health center with the intention of selecting a vendor within six to twelve months. The actual opening of such a facility would likely be several years down the road. If approved, the center would be funded in part by the $10 million in behavioral health grants that is part of the Providence Saint John's Development agreement.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (May 9)

People will celebrate you for the same qualities you admire in others. It's not a coincidence; you've molded yourself and will express the spirit of this creative masterpiece in new situations. You'll clearly see who most needs you — acting on this instinct, you'll forge a legacy. Sweet companionship will be among your most cherished gifts. Libra and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 12, 3, 38 and 14.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You don't require people to prove themselves to you, yet they come through time and again. It's because you see the best in others — and that's exactly what emerges.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). As a rule, you don't trouble others with what you can do for yourself. But just because you can do a thing doesn't mean you should. Given the sheer quantity of your responsibilities, perhaps it would be prudent to delegate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). There are many others doing something similar to what you're doing, and yet, rest assured, you measure up just fine. It gets even better when you leave the comparisons to others and focus on your own performance.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Had you been afforded the luxury of choice, you'd have opted for a simpler arrangement. But then you'd be missing out on these strange complexities keeping you so sharp.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll have to adjust your communication to fit your audience. Likely, the shift that's needed is a move from the language of logic to the romance language of your heart.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When you see someone who has what you want, you'll think good thoughts, thus aligning yourself with what it takes to attract the same. What you seek is seeking you. Stick with what works for as long as it does.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Self-consciousness has a way of interrupting your flow. It's like a kink in the cord connecting you to your power source. You'll feel the most connected to who you are in those moments when the concept is irrelevant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Stars turn up the intensity, and what you're working on will need to be finished sooner than you were expecting. It will only make you work more efficiently! Take a well-deserved break tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You have your hopes set on a destination, and you'll eventually get there. But what if most of the fun to be mined is in these discoveries you're making along the way? How would that change your mindset?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Fiddle with your emotional EQ to see if you can turn down some of the high-pitched noise interference happening in the stereo of your mind today. You'll clear up disagreements so all can keep moving along.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The day plays out like a comedy in which crossed communication, wrong assumptions and silly mistakes merely contribute to the sweet satisfaction of an ending that ties it all together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). You'll repeat yourself out of necessity, passion and purpose. It doesn't matter if you do it the same or a little different each time. It only matters that you stay the course, as this is important work.
